Satan Clause is not just a typo

Christiaan Funkhouser
Senior Staff Writer

Hello all you wonderful Sting readers... take a deep breath... What's that you're smelling in the air? Political Correctness. Isn't it great? Isn't it refreshing? Isn't it... .. sickening? Well, for a very sarcastic look at political correctness log on to our website, www.thesting.org look up the archives for the last edition of "The Sting" in December of 2004, click on holiday. You'll read about an all inclusive holiday created by Glenn Beck, as well as an in-depth look into how Glenn Beck's "politically correct" songs were even more offensive and less politically correct as they could have been.

But how about those readers who want a serious article about political correctness, or CHRIST-mas? Yes, that's correct. I said/wrote, CHRIST-mas. You know, if I were speaking Spanish, or writing in Spanish and wrote it, CHRIST-mas with a little apostrophe over the A, it would mean "More Christ." But then again, we don't want to offend any people out there so let me take a step back from my utter disgust at the poison which is Political Correctness.

I was shuffling songs on my compy, and I was listening to a Hip-Hop song with a seemingly random assortment of piano keys being played as the chorus music and I really liked it, then I heard the lyrics and was inspired. The song is called, "Wisemen" by "Cross Movement" off the CD "Gift Rap" It inspired me to look into some things about Christmas that we may take for granted.

For instance, the reason why Christmas is celebrated on the day it is, is because December 25th was an enormous holiday celebration by Pagans. A Pagan, according to Encarta, is one who does not follow Christianity, or is a polytheist or pantheist if they even have a declared religion. At the time of what we today call Wicca's celebrated Winter Solstice (which is allowed to be taught in Government Schools) in which spirits were worshiped, the Greek/Roman Gods also had a particular holiday around this time. The Christians of way-back-when thought it would be an awesome way to spread the message of Christ throughout Pagan lands by celebrating the birth of Christ on the same day and general time as the Pagans. Throughout time it became accepted that December 25th was the day that Christ was born on. A lot of scholars believe that Jesus (Yes, I said the J word, sorry to offend all of you non-Christians) was born sometime in September.

There are more than a few Christians who believe that Christmas Trees (whoops, I mean, "Holiday" trees) are a form of idol worship. They get this from Jeremiah 10:2-3 which says, "The religion of these peoples is nothing but smoke. An idol is nothing but a tree chopped down, then shaped by a woodsman's ax. They trim it with tinsel and balls, use hammer and nails to keep it upright." What Jeremiah was talking about (which sounds interestingly similar to a Christmas tree) was an Idol, like Isaiah was talking about in Chapter 44 verses 13-18, "The woodworker draws up plans for his no-god, traces it on a block of wood... He first cuts down a cedar, or maybe picks out a pine or oak... With half he makes a fire to warm himself and barbecue his supper. He eats his fill and sits back satisfied... And he builds an idol to be made to his personal design... Whenever the need strikes him he prays to it, "Save me. You're my god."

Pretty stupid, wouldn't you say? Don't they have eyes in their heads? Are their brains working at all? Doesn't it occur to them to say, "Half of this tree I used for firewood: I baked bread, roasted meat, and enjoyed a good meal. And now I've used the rest to make a god. Here I am praying to a stick of wood!"

Also, the Christmas tree came around 2000 years after Jeremiah wrote that, the Christmas tree came around the 16th century in Germany. So, no, unless you're carving the Christmas tree to look like an idol, or worshiping it, you don't have to take your Christmas tree back.

Santa Clause is the American (hehe) version of the Dutch for Saint Nicholas. For Santa

Clause in other languages, check out, "The Santa Clause" with Tim Allen. Actually, while I'm typing this, I just realized. If you change the N and put it at the end of Santa... you get SATAN CLAUSE! Anyway, St. Nick would give things to needy kids while supporting the Doctrine of the Trinity. It's credited that St. Nick was the guy, in 325 AD to associate giving gifts with God's gift to us in sending Christ to die for us (see John 3:16).

Now however, Santa Clause, or should I say, Satan Clause has the power to manipulate time and space, live forever and who can tell if you're naughty or nice. Something that only Jesus Christ or God can do or knows respectively... In the track Wisemen, the rappers imply that Santa Clause is nothing more than a trick of society to dumb down what happened to Christ on the Cross.

While I don't necessarily agree with that, it is interesting that you go from Saint Nicholas who gave presents to needy kids to illustrate God's gift, to some super powerful guy whose name can be easily construed to spell Satan.

In all seriousness, we, both as Christians (for those of you who are) and those of you who aren't need to get some things straight.

As Christians (to Quote the song) "We don't celebrate Christmas as a Pagan day, we celebrate Christmas as the Invasion Day, if Jesus never would of invade Time and Space, then none of us would be saved today."

As non-Christians, I would definitely encourage you all to look past the materialism of wanting this, wanting that, which as I talked about last go around only will be worthless in a little time. Spend time with your family while you have it, spend time with your friends while you have them. Whether or not you believe in life after death, the fact is when you die, it won't matter what kind of car you had, what kind of Ipod you had. That stuff won't make you truly happy anyway. Take the Christmas Season to think about things that are truly important. Think about things that you truly need, and can't live without.

Consumemás!

Eric John
Staff Writer

As many have seen, the news now enjoys giving this time of year a more and more politically correct name. It seems every year they try for a new name to get it to stick. We've gone through Christmas, which was obviously too limiting, then Winter break, and now the catchy one seems to be Chrismahanukwanza, and now they've added just a bit more to make it Chrismahanukwanzakah, just to be different.

I personally find that even this does not fully grasp the true nature of this most merry and festive of times. Thus, I believe that we should use a name that encompasses all of this season's meanings. Thus I propose to you Consumemás!

Now, I know at first you might be thinking that this leans a bit too much towards Christmas, but if you look at the full idea, it actually means "consume more!" And consuming more is what this holiday is really all about! It makes it truly an American holiday! It's the time of year we eat more, buy more, spend more, waste more, and destroy more! And it's all for the happiness of ourselves! We give so that we can receive without feeling as guilty. It's like a helpful exchange so than at the end of the day you don't look greedy, you just came out ahead.

I think that if we all look at the benefits granted by renaming this season Consumemás, we'll realize that any dispute that might be brought up about it not having a deep enough meaning are washed away by the overwhelming power of money! Yes, the blood that funds the world. Money is the power behind everything, and fake research I swear I've done shows that people are 27.5% more likely to buy extranovelty items for their friends with a name Consumemás proudly displayed on the window of every building. I mean, sales alone will probably skyrocket during this time because of the 'más' part alone! Remember, the more you give to other people, the more they'll feel suckered into giving back to you.

Sure, some people might say that naming it Consumemás pulls away from the religious and spiritual aspects of this season that many people hold to be the most critical part of it, and that plastering "Consumemás" on every billboard and greeting card would only further take away from that pure meaning. But to them, I say that if it really meant that much you shouldn't have been complaining about what name I give it and go ahead and do your spiritual stuff. If you really cared more, you could very well do away with the name altogether and just be happy with your spiritual time. I mean, the whole problem with it not being diverse enough in the first place wouldn't have come up if everyone had just done their thing and been happy with it. I personally think Yule was a good name in the beginning.

This of course is a bit of a sarcastic look at the name, but I think the time has come that we realize it's not the silly name we attach to the season, but what we do with the season. Celebrate what you will and enjoy it, and let the businesses worry about their target demographic while you slowly stop paying attention to, and stop paying, them altogether.

All I really want for Christmas

A.L. Johnson
Staff Writer

I want quite a few things for Christmas actually. Some I know I will never receive, while others are a long shot. Still others will be those things that are easy to come by, but all will make the world a much better place, at least in my opinion.

1. I want a pony. What girl has not requested this at some point in her life? Most of us have the common sense to stop asking after the age of twelve. Here is proof positive that common sense ain't all that common.

2. I want Bush supporters to stop lying to themselves. It's okay to admit that you made a mistake. It doesn't even have to be a public apology. Just admit it to yourself. Here, I'll help you get started: Boy that Bush sure did turn out to be a @%*&-ing _____!

3. I want my mom to finally find a kidney donor so her life does not have to be limited to getting in at 5:30 pm everyday so she can do her dialysis. She's O+...any takers?

4. I want ALL the radio stations to play the hippopotamus Christmas song every hour on the hour without delay. It's the best song ever and no one even knows who the recording artist is.

5. I want to stop running to the bathroom within twenty minutes after consuming ABL's creations...you know there's no need to elaborate.

6. I want to effin graduate already. GAWD there are SO many places in the world to see but I can't because I have to be in class. Does anyone happen to have a place for me to stay when I do my internship in Puerto Rico this summer? Yes, bitches... Puerto Rico.

7. I want a new car...nothing fancy. I'll take, ohhh, a 2006 SL 500 with free gas and maintenance for the life of the car. I'd like one in slate grey please...for the week-ends. For the week, I must have a pink one. Thankyouverymuch.

8. Did I mention I wanted to graduate? Oh. Yeah. Maybe I did. Well, if I forgot, then maybe YOU forgot, so I'll leave it as my number 9 and if you don't like it, I'm sure there's something else you could be doing right now.

Lastly,

9. I want our men and women to come the f*ck home already. I was never given a decent explanation as to why they were sent over in the first place. Many are dying for a war they may or may not support, but they are doing their job. That takes balls, and I salute them.

Changes in store for parking?

Korey Kolberg
Staff Writer

If you live in Howell dorm, you have probably noticed the signs posted on the bathroom doors. It would seem that someone was inspired to take action by one of my previous articles. (Whether or not it was actually my article does not matter, so for my pride's sake we'll assume it was.) That and it would prove that people actually read the paper.) Jarrett Bell, a member of the Residence Life Advisory Board, took it upon himself to try to make the dreams of better parking become a reality. He was the man that knocked on your door asking if you had a car on campus or not. That survey was given to 127 people, or 53% of Howell. Of the people that lived in the dorms and took the survey, all but a very small percentage drove, and most of those that do not drive said it was because of parking. Basically, what all that means is that a huge part of the students in Howell drive.

Almost all the people that drive said that they found it an inconvenience to park the way things are now. Why an inconvenience? One of the main reasons is because it seems impossible to find a spot right by the school, or in front of the post office. Therefore you must drive all the way up to the area by the Recreation and Wellness Center. Once there you must then circle through all the lanes, hoping to find a spot.

At the beginning of the year it was easy to find a spot, but at times you can barely find a spot there because of the commuters taking up our half of the lot. Jarrett Bell asked if students thought it would be a good solution to take the lower half of the Courtyard Parking, 98% said yes and 2% said they did not know. No one said no to that solution.

Jarrett Bell took this information to the meeting on Monday, November 28. At the meeting, the police chief, Mr. Gary Chasteen, stated that Howell has the worst parking situation at the school. He also stated that Southern Polytechnic had a plan that would connect the Howell and Commons parking lots. Norton would then have the main parking lot to themselves. However, we are a part of the University System of Georgia and therefore must listen to the Board of Regents. The Board denied funding for this plan because it would create environmental issues. It also stated we had an abundance of parking.

The Commons also seems to be approaching being completely full. This means that they too will need more parking soon. It was then stated that there are around 143 empty spots on in the Courtyard lots, which is comprised of three separate lots. Howell on the other hand has only 41 lots. That means that if all the 296 beds in Howell were full and around 90% of them had a car, at least 200 spots if not more would be needed. The chief also stated that around 5% of people do not buy parking decals, which complicates things even more.

Image from Windows Live Local
If only there was some form of large wavy parking lot everyone could park in.

Mr. Chasteen claimed that allowing Howell students to park in the lower half of the Courtyard's lot would only "displace the dissatisfaction" because it would force Courtyard students to tighten up when they park (something us dorm, and probably Commons, students have had to do since school started). However, he would consider it a temporary solution. The representative from the Courtyard, Christian Nwokeyi, suggested that the people living in the 2000 and 1000 buildings park in the lot behind the Rec Center and the small lot across from the Courtyard-Rec Center. Mr. Chasteen finally stated that it is not possible to get funding to extend Howell's lot at this time and they are trying to do the best they can. Nothing was promised at the meeting.

The second major problem with parking is signs. Ms. Barbara Mocks stated that it can be very difficult to get the signs up on campus. A huge part of this is because some students seem to like to tear the signs so they can feel free to park where they chose. Signs were supposed to be delivered the week after school started this fall, but that did not happen. If you were given a ticket for parking in the main lot on the commuter's side, bring it in so it can be looked at. The police stopped this type of ticketing because they realized that Howell and the main lot were always full.

There are a few other things you should remember or watch for in the future. First is that the 15-minute spots in front of Howell are for unloading and loading only. Another policy may go into effect at the same time as the price increases. It says that if you park in the 15-minute spot your car will be ticketed and then it will be towed off campus.

Next is that the lowest parking fine may be increased from $15 to $30. Right now, we have some of the lowest parking fines in the University System of Georgia. Mr. Chasteen stated that there have not really been any increases in parking fines for many years. There is less revenue now because we have fewer students than we did during that same period of no fine increase.

While things may not change at our school for a good while, at least things are being talked about. Hopefully things will get better soon, but remember that the school is trying. Just try to park in the right areas, make sure your decal can be seen (that means placing it on the window in easy sight). Also, if you see any student employees of the Police playing favorites with their friends' cars, contact Mr. Chasteen to report the instance. Finally, do not park in the service spot (red and orange striped area) by Howell. In the survey, it was listed as a loading spot, however, Jarrett was given incorrect information and police chief shed light on the matter during the meeting.

I would like to thank Jarrett Bell for working to help us drivers out. I would encourage others to try to keep active with student life on campus. If nothing else send in an article to The Sting to express yourself.

Internal Affairs business

I noted in my last update that we were in the process of amending the constitution. That has now been completed and is presented below.

Article 5.1.3.1:

Currently states: "The SGA advisor will ensure all SGA members meet the minimum requirements according to the constitution, by checking all SGA members GPA's at the end of every semester after final grades have been received."

AMENDMENT: "The SGA advisor will check all SGA members GPA's at the end of every semester. If an executive member (President, Vice President, and Secretary/Treasurer) fails to meet the minimum requirement as specified within the Constitution, he/she will lose 10% of their stipend for every 1/10 of a quality point. (For example: as stated, an executive member needs a 2.5 GPA, if that person's GPA drops from 2.5 to 2.4, they would lose 10% of their stipend). If a council member's GPA drops, they will be asked to have a meeting with the Advisor. The student will be asked to leave office if they are unable to bring their GPA back up to the minimum requirement of 2.0 before their probation time lapses (in accordance with school policies)."

Article 5.2 Qualifications for Office

Currently states: "Any student enrolled in SPSU in good standing shall be eligible to run for any position of the SGA. A student in good standing shall be defined as any student who is not on probation and maintains a cumulative GPA of 2.5 or higher for officers or 2.0 or higher for Student Legislative Council Members."

AMENDMENT: "Any student enrolled in SPSU in good standing shall be eligible to run for any position of the SGA. A student in good standing shall be defined as any student who is not on probation and maintains a cumulative GPA of 2.5 or higher for officers or 2.0 or higher for Student Legislative Council Members."

"Students who are planning to graduate at the end of fall term of any given year should not be eligible for office due to the inability to serve a full one year term. In order to validate that all candidates for office will be able to serve a full one year term in office, the SGA advisor shall check to see if any students have already petitioned to graduate before ballots are created for the election process. If a student has already petitioned to graduate, then they will be considered ineligible for office."

SPSU Information Security Challenge

Naimah Shaw
Staff Writer

On Wednesday January 11th, 2006 SPSU will be hosting its first ever Information Security Challenge. To enter this competition you need to form teams of 3. This can be either graduate or undergraduate students but they must be enrolled at SPSU as a full-time student. There will be two teams, a red one (penetration testing) and a blue team (cyber defending security). The registration deadline is Dec 8th, after which the network and server configuration will be sent to each team.

The top 3 teams will receive certifications, gifts, and will be sent to Southeast Collegiate Cyber Defense Competition (March 10-12, 2006). The judges and committee spearheading this event includes Prof. Bob Brown, Dr. Faruque, Prof. Feibish, Dr. Karam, Mr. Rowland, Mr. Walker and Dr. Wang.

Persons interested in this challenge can register their team by sending an email to Dr. Wang at jwang@spsu.edu. You would need to include your team name and the members in your team. Further information is available at it.spsu.edu/CISE/news.shtml

Dear Susan

Feeling sad during the holidays

Susan Ristau
Licensed SPSU Counselor

Dear Susan,

Why, at a time when everyone else is so happy, do I feel so gloomy? My friends are excited about the holidays, decorating, shopping, baking cookies, and making plans but all I feel like doing is staying in bed and sleeping? What's wrong with me?

Signed, Sad Sally

Dear Sally,

Many people become depressed around the holiday season. Problems and issues that we've been dealing with the rest of the year become exaggerated at this time. Everywhere we turn there are images of the happy family around the big turkey dinner, beautiful holiday decorations and gift giving.

Not everyone gets to experience a storybook holiday. Some people are grieving over the loss of a loved one or a broken relationship. Others are lonely, have very little money or are experiencing health problems. Some ways students can combat holiday blues are to: 1) line up activities with friends if family are not near or there are estranged relationships; 2) stay busy with projects, activities and exercising (since oftentimes holidays bring weight gain); 3) volunteer to help others less fortunate (great way to get your mind off your own situation and feel good at the same time); and 4) don't get caught up in the fantasy perfect holiday that you see on television and in the movies (this isn't reality so don't expect it). Lastly, and most importantly, if you are seriously depressed and thinking of harming yourself, SEEK HELP IMMEDIATELY. Counselors in the Career & Counseling Center work year-round (yes, even during the semester break). We are here to help you so do not hesitate to come in, e-mail counselor@spsu.edu or call 678-915-7391. Enjoy your semester break and be safe.

Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire Civilization 4

Cristina Wilson
Staff Writer

During the short, three week holiday break, you may find yourself with a lot of extra time on your hands. Maybe you'll be tired of stuffing your face with awesomely rich foods, or maybe you'll find opening those last few gifts to be quite boring. Or maybe you have no family and you'll be staying alone and you want to get out of your house. No matter what the cause, Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire can be your home away from home.

The long awaited fourth movie based on Harry's fourth year at Hogwarts opened November 18th to die-hard fans packed in movie theaters across the country for that midnight showing. Thus far, the movie has grossed well over $414 million in the box office, more than doubling its total production costs of $150 million. Obviously... people are watching it.

The Goblet of Fire takes a new turn in the life of Harry, now turning 14 and entering those annoying years of puberty. This book was much more developed than the first three, apparent by its almost doubled size. Many children, teenagers, and adults have fallen head over heels for this series, which follows the formative years of an emotionally abused orphan who is discovering an alternate world where he is known and loved.

Each book grows in intensity as Harry grows in maturity, and learns more about his own history, as well as the history of the man who killed his parents, Voldemort. The Goblet of Fire is the first movie in this series to earn a rating of PG-13, as opposed to the earlier, lighter movie ratings of PG.

Mike Newell, an Englishman who has directed such other movies as Mona Lisa Smile, found himself as a first time director for the Harry Potter series. The first two movies were directed by Chris Columbus, and the third by Alfonso Cuaron. Along with screenwriter, Steven Kloves, Newell cut the 700-800 page book down to a screenplay of over 100 pages, and a film of only 156 minutes.

Many fans will probably find this adaptation to be considerably lacking. Entire subplots, characters, and just chunks of the book have been removed. The debate is: should Mike Newell have made the book into two movies, releasing them at different dates... or should he have condensed the book into two and a half hours of extremely rushed scenes? As one of those self-professed die-hard fans, I have to say... I don't know. I would have been pretty annoyed if I had characters such as Rita Skeeter, the nosy journalist.

I couldn't even think to compare this movie to the book, which admittedly, is probably my least favorite in the series. On its own, the movie was great. But how can it be called "Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire" when it covered approximately 6 chapters of the book?

Now, don't get me wrong... I'm not using that old line "It was good, but the book was better." If you've seen every movie and read every book... you already know that's true. I went into this movie

If you're going to this movie expecting to see Hermione in a bathing suit, prepare to be disappointed. You do get to see a little cleavage though.

to wait months for the second half of a movie. But at the same time, I was pretty annoyed that this two and a half hour film was chopped to pieces.

In itself, The Goblet of Fire was a wonderful movie. The direction was wonderful, the computer graphics were incredible, and the acting was well above what we've seen in the previous installments. However, when compared to the book written by J.K. Rowling, the only thing Mike Newell got right in this movie was the title. Even though half of the ending of the book was completely cut out, he found time to insert a dance instruction scene which didn't even occur in the book. Even though he deleted important characters that had been introduced before, such as Dobby the House Elf, he found time to include seemingly trivial expecting it to be cut and expecting it to suck compared to the book, simply because that's what we've seen with the previous three movies. However, I was even more disappointed with this movie in particular, due to the fact that it barely contained any content from the book.

Is it worth the $11 my mom paid for us to go see it during a matinee time? Possibly. Will I someday own this DVD and place it in order next to the previous three on my movie shelf? Definitely. Will I watch it over and over, each time finding something new to complain about? For sure. But you go to Southern Poly. You're a Lord of the Rings kind of guy. You know what I'm talking about.

Let me start out by saying how beautiful a game this is. Civilization 3 was good, but a little simplistic graphically. Civilization 4 matches and then blows past the older game in every way. For starts, the world is 3D, you can zoom in and watch your workers build or zoom out (through the clouds for a "god's eye" view. These new graphics require a beefier system compared to the old games. Although beautiful to the eyes, they sometimes can be a little overwhelming.

Like its looks, Civilization 4 has revamped how you rule your empire. New things like religion play a role like never before. Depending on what technologies you learn, you can beat other players at founding the major religions. There are also many new technologies to learn to increase the wealth and power of your domain. Take animal husbandry, without it you cannot gain access to resources like horses, cows, pigs, and sheep.

Another interesting thing is your workers can build a cottage, which will eventually grow into a small town. Towns, like lumber mills and other new improvements, enhance the terrain output even more. Your cities will also produce "Great People" now, depending on if they are great prophets, scientist, or artists (there are five types in all) they will create different affects within you empire or city. If you have enough at one time, you can force your empire to enter a gold age, which basically means everything works better.

The final huge area of change I found was with the civics. These civics represent the different types of government you can chose from. There are four areas of civics: government, legal, labor, economic, and religious. Will your kingdom have free speech, slavery, or freedom of religion? That's for you to decide.

If you are a fan of Civilization 3, you will probably enjoy the new challenges of Sid Meier's latest game, Civilization 4. Just check to see if your computer can handle the new graphics. After a while, I am sure you will feel comfortable with the new elements and changes in the game.

RENT review

Ok people. News. Flash. The whole movie is in song. It is more than a musical. It is a theater production on film. If you go to this movie expecting dialogue you will be sorely disappointed.

That aside, the movie is extremely entertaining. The film takes place in late '80's New York at a time when the AIDS epidemic was taking its deadly toll on our society. Four of the main characters are affected by the disease, and while this was a very important topic of the time and of the movie, it is only one of the many difficulties the characters had to face.

RENT is so named because of the various struggles by the bohemian characters to pay rent and survive in a town where money, politics, and land development triumphed over honesty, trust, and friendship. The film, like the theatrical production, raises awareness about poverty, drug abuse, and gay culture.

I would suggest this movie to the crowds that love the theater version, people that want to see an out-the-box film, and/or people that would be able to relate to the aforementioned topics. I would not suggest this movie to the close-minded. I would rent RENT, I would let someone else pay for it, or I would wait for its premier on MTV. I would not, however, pay for it because honestly, it doesn't stand on its own as a film.

The Sting would like to wish everyone a happy boolidays!
