Frey/Chastain Hazard remains uncorrected

by Charlton Head

As we all know, Kennesaw College is growing at a fast rate. With this growth, problems tend to arise because the normal capacity or function has been disturbed. The situations where function ability has been upset vary from parking spaces to traffic congestion and from lack of classroom space to lack of teachers. The point of this article is the traffic situation at the intersection of Chastain Road and Frey Road where there is an apparent need for traffic control.

Most of our readers are familiar with the area of concern. The service station and restaurant across the street normally facilitate a convenient rest stop for our students. However, with the upsurge of school population causing more and more traffic congestion, the absence of a traffic light at the Chastain and Frey Rd. intersection is making stops anything but convenient.

The problem is further aggravated due to the lack of adequate visibility in crossing Chastain Rd. During the heavier traffic flows, the intersection becomes hazardous and the potential for someone to have an accident, serious or minor, increases.

Two sources were used to gather information regarding what the traffic officials have done concerning the Chastain/Frey Road traffic problems. One of these sources is the Cobb County Traffic Engineering office. Mr. Randy Hulsey, a traffic engineer, revealed his knowledge of the concerned area and acknowledged the fact that the Kennesaw College population is growing every year, meaning more cars are flowing through the intersection. Also, travelers and local motorists find the restaurants and service station attractive. This causes traffic congestion to increase at those times when commuting students depart or arrive at the college for classes.

When asked what his position or input is concerning matters such as this situation, he stated that he is in charge of looking into situations where conditions may present a need for traffic control. In the course of the conversation with Mr. Hulsey, it was learned that the Cobb County Traffic Engineering office goes by a priority list in which certain un-discussed factors determine when and where traffic controls are placed.

The second source of information, Ms. Davie Reynolds of the Public Information Office, revealed the factors that determine priority. They are volume counts—the number of vehicles flowing through a concerned intersection—the

Montage due soon

by Sandy Benjamin

Sighs of relief and smiles of satisfaction will accompany the arrival of the college's 1984 Montage yearbook in October. Its pages will reflect the powerful enthusiasm of Kennesaw's students and faculty. The price of the ticket to see all of the faces that over forty clubs and organizations can inspire will be covered under the already paid student activities fee.

The 1984 Montage will be a celebration of the college's history containing, among other wonders, pictures of still-residing faculty from the first few yearbooks and a very young Kenny Rogers performing at the school dance in 1966.

With only a one personed staff of photographer Dan Brooks to produce results in mid June, a cry of help swept through the campus and seven lifesaving people responded. Gwynne Bolton and Karen Cooper became the co-editor and Daryl Gessner and Cheryl Jimenz were the associate editors. Along with the help of Robin Gant, Joanne Thurston and Joey Price, Kennesaw College will have a 1984 yearbook bound with pride and hard work.

All who want to help make the 1985 Montage as fantastic as the life it represents can fill out an application from the Montage office.

FOUNDER'S DAY tradition continues

by Rose Kovacs Hochman

The 2nd annual Founder's Day Celebration is about to occur. "What is Founder's Day?" you might ask. Founder's Day is the day to celebrate Kennesaw College's past and future and also to remember and honor the people who helped set Kennesaw College going.

To celebrate this year's Founder's Day, the special quest will be the well-known pianist and philosopher, Lorin Hollander.

Founder's Day activities will begin at 9 a.m., Oct. 9 on the 4th floor of the library with a convocation and welcome. Kennesaw College's president, Dr. Betty Siegel, will welcome Kennesaw College's supporters, faculty, staff, and students. Legislators from the 7th District will also be present.

During the morning program, Hollander will lecture on the topic, "Arts and Education: An Imperative." At 8 p.m. that evening, Hollander will give a performance/lecture on the theme, "Music: The Creative Process and the Path to Enlightenment."

Kennesaw College students can pick up a free ticket from the student information booth. Others can make reservations by calling 429-2969, tickets $5.

Founder's Day will also include honoring someone with the 2nd annual Kennesaw College Distinguished Service Award. The award will be presented during the morning program.

Last year's award was given to the late W. Wyman Pilcher Jr. of Marietta. Pilcher was a former chairman of the Kennesaw College Foundation. President Siegel commended him and said "We honor Wyman for his continued leadership, service and commitment to the Kennesaw College Mission."

Last year was the first Founder's Day. According to Cullene Harper, Director of Development and Public Services, the creation of Founder's Day is largely credited to Dr. Siegel's desire to begin practices at Kennesaw College that would build a sense of tradition at the school. President Siegel also felt strongly that the founders of Kennesaw College should be honored and remembered.

Since it's beginnings in 1963, Kennesaw College has grown to be the state's seventh largest institution of the 33-unit University System.

Questions/Answers

Dear Abby Landers

Abby Landers is the personal advice columnist of the Sentinel. Questions concerning any personal issue are welcomed. Please remember, the opinions expressed are not those of a professional counselor. Write to "Dear Abby Landers" in care of the Sentinel.

Dear Abby Landers

What can I do with a girl friend who drinks too much beer and then won't let me drive her car home? She says she promised her Dad not to ever let anybody else drive that car. She scares me, she really gets sozzled some times.

A GOOD FRIEND

When you think she's had too much and she insists on driving, take her keys and put her in a cab. If that doesn't work—YOU take a cab. Do not get in that car with her behind the wheel. Then, the next day when she's sober, tell her that you like her a lot but you like yourself better, so you can't allow her to risk your neck along with hers.

She'll probably be mad at you, be prepared for that, but if she's a friend worth having she'll come around. Maybe you can even get her to think about why she drinks too much.

Dear Abby Landers

My best friend here at KC is dating a neat looking guy and she is really crazy about him. I thought I liked him too and was real glad for her until this summer. He has started calling me up, just talking a lot at first but now asking me to go out with him. We've double-dated a lot so he knows I don't date anybody steady. I wouldn't go out with him behind her back for anything, but should I tell my friend what's going on? I'll bet he's dating other people, too.

WORRIED

I wouldn't go out with him behind her back or any other way. A guy who will sneak on a steady is a bum and would do the same thing to you. I applaud your loyalty to your friend, but you must understand that a lot of people do not want to be told bad news. Your friend may not thank you, may believe you are lying because you want this joker yourself, and he will deny it, of course.

It depends on how long you have known each other and whether you have ever had man problems between you before. If I really felt we had a solid relationship based on long-time openness and proven honesty, I'd be inclined to tell her - privately, and as gently as I could.

Dear Abby Landers

I really am a good student and I make good grades except in Math. Is there anything anybody can do about this after you've grown up? I never was very good, and now I'm older than most students (28). Is that the reason, that I've been out of school too long?

SERIOUS STUDENT

Yes - and no. Yes, there is something you can do to build some Math smarts. And no, a lot of people who never have left school share your problem. Usually we never know where we get these ideas that we can't learn Math, or English, or whatever. Unknowingly, sometimes parents or teachers convince us when we're very young that it's just natural to be good at this but not that.

Go to the Counseling Center (4th floor, old Library Bldg.) and make an appointment with a counselor. They can aim you in the right direction, depending on your personal situation. And this is a personal thing. There is no one answer to your question, so there is more than one way to solve it.

Dear Abby Landers

What do you call your teachers? I'm used to saying Mr. or Miss or Dr. So-and-so, but here at KC I've had two of them that seem to want us to call them by first name. It seems sort of funny to me.

WONDERING

What I call my teacher depends on what kind of grade I get! As for you - be natural. If you're not comfortable with first names, and frankly I'm not either, use the appropriate title. After all, showing some respect for teachers (which is all it is) is not illegal. And if one really makes a point of it, explain privately how you feel.

None of them will really mind. I think it is just that some teachers think titles are a barrier between them and their students. Remember that most of our teachers really mean well by us, but they can be just a little strange at times.

*Sincerely
Yours,*

Have you ever had a problem at school and not known who to talk to about it? How often have you wanted to complain about a situation on campus and get results from your complaint? How many times have you had good experiences at KC and not had a way to let people know? If your answers to these questions are 'who hasn't,' 'at least once a quarter,' and 'were you there?', this new column is for you.

After perusing many back issues of The Sentinel, I see a great need for a column that students can write to and receive response from. Writing to the paper about an important issue and getting no response is much akin to a slap in the face. Through my perusing, I saw that little or no response has been given to such situations in the past.

With this column, we invite you, the student body, as well as faculty and staff, to give us the opportunity to attempt to answer some of your previously unanswered questions. If your questions warrant specific investigation that is within our ability, we will investigate. If you just need a simple answer to a campus-related problem and we can find you that answer, it is our desire to do so. Even if you have no questions, but wish to write a letter of campus interest for a response, the column is available to you.

I have been given the opportunity as well as the challenging responsibility to write this column. What is most important however, is that everyone understands that the Sentinel staff is readily available to assist me in researching and investigating the responses given you, so that these responses will be as complete and accurate as possible.

So, hit me with your best...or your worst shot! All I ask is that you take this column for what it is...Sincerely Yours!

FORUM Committee presents old-fashioned Political Rally

by Jo Dilbeck

On October 23, 1984, from 6-9:30 p.m., FORUM presents an old-fashioned political rally, which will be held on the quadrangle in front of the Old Library Building. Banners and bunting will abound as twenty-eight candidates for Cobb County elected offices are presented in a series of speeches which will place opposing candidates together before the public.

The audience, which will consist of the college family, community members, and candidates for state legislative office, will share in an evening of fun and friendship while listening to the views of the local politicians. Attendees are urged to bring their families, picnic baskets, and blankets, and dine under the stars in the crisp October air.

According to Lynn Hillhouse, chairperson of the Student Union Forum Committee, "this will be an opportunity for the students and community to hear the candidates, put a name with a face, and talk with them about local issues that will affect them."

Danny Stephens, President of the Pre-Law Club, which, with the Forum Committee, is co-sponsoring the event, says, "It is our belief that good government is promulgated by open government." Danny urges all eligible voters who are not registered, to see our campus voter registrars, Dr. Robert Greene and Rebecca Carter, in the Library. Registrars hours are the Librarian's desk hours.

FORUM, according to Dr. Willoughby Jarrell, chairperson of the Political Science department, and advisor to the group, is "an opportunity for the students to select individuals from state and local areas who interest them, and an opportunity for the students to hear those individuals' views."

Dr. Helen Ridley, advisor of the Pre-Law Club, says that the rally is "in the true American Tradition; a day in which the whole family can come out and meet the candidates, talk to other citizens, discuss the elections, the crops, or whatever happens to be in their minds. Kennesaw College is starting a first, which we hope will be continued through the years, in sponsoring the old-fashioned type political rally."

Along with the Student Union FORUM Committee and the Pre-Law Club, the Kennesaw Association of Student Educators, will be sponsoring the event. For further information contact Lynn Hillhouse, in the Student Union Office, extension 2979, or Danny Stephens, in care of the Pre-Law Club.

McDUFFIE: Poly Sci Prof Practices what he Teaches

by Renee Roudebush

Dr. Jim McDuffie, professor of Political Administration at Kennesaw College, is gearing up for the upcoming election for the Cobb County Tax Commissioner's position. This is Dr. McDuffie's first attempt at a public office and his brand new start in politics. But McDuffie says he has no further plans beyond a first term. At this point he just wants to win the Tax Commissioner's position.

When asked if he has learned alot about the way the government is being run since the beginning of his campaign, McDuffie responded that his knowledge has been broadened tremendously and that his lectures have become more lively.

The following are only two of Doctor McDuffie's campaign promises that he is making known to the public.

First, the tax checks will not be made out to the tax commissioner personally. Second, McDuffie supports a flat tax rate on your motor vehicle.

McDuffie says that his strongest asset during the whole campaign is his professional qualification and the lack of it by his opponent. Also, McDuffie remarked that his work at Kennesaw College has helped with his campaign. He is emphasizing the point of being the Professor of Public Administration. He says, "the whole idea of being Tax Commissioner is being a leader. It is not a policy making position, it's an administrative one." Dr. McDuffie concluded by saying that he has the knowledge and the training needed specificaly in the field of administration.

Dr. McDuffie (Rep.) will face Joe Lee Thompson (Dem.) in the Tax Commissioner's election in November.

Some fear Tuition could top $180,000 by 2002

BOSTON, MA (CPS)-

By the time the babies born this year get to college, they may have to pay $45,000 to $180,000 for their degrees and face a huge post-graduate debt, according to a recent accounting firm study.

"We've witnessed an increase of more than 330 percent in tuition and required fees over the past 15 years in the public sector alone," says Clark Bernard, chairman of higher education planning for Coopers and Lybrand, which conducted the college costs study for the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU).

If such rapid tuition increases continue through the turn of the century, as many financial experts expect, "families who have a child this year will probably have to spend $45,000 for a public college education in 18 years," Bernard says.

The cost of sending a child to a private college, moreover, will run from $140,000 to $180,000, the study predicts.

"The implications (of the study) are extremely serious," says Allan Ostar, AASCU president.

"We may well be creating a debtor class of students" by charging so much for tuition that students will spend decades paying back their education loans, he says.

Currently, the cost of attending a public college averages $15,000, Bernard says, while four years at a private institution runs about $37,000.

A recent University of Wisconsin study, Ostar says, shows that today's average college student already has a debt of $8200 upon graduation.

Compounding high tuition rates is the federal student aid programs' shift from giving students money through grants to a greater dependence on loan programs.

Two decades ago, Ostar recounts, about 70 percent of all federal student aid was in the form of grants and other awards. Today, 70 percent of all aid money is in loans which students must repay after graduating.

If tuition rates continue to soar and the balance between grants and loans remains lopsided, he warns, "a student's ability to purchase consumer goods, a car, clothes—just the things it takes to get started in life—will be seriously impaired."

And future college students facing such momentous debts "may well be influenced in what kind of career they go into based on how well it will help them repay their loans, rather than choosing the field they really want to go into."

The teaching field, he notes, could be "drastically" affected by big education debts, as more and more graduates are forced to work in the private sector, where salaries are significantly higher.

NEEDED: Interested students to form a College Bowl team for Kennesaw College.

COLLEGE BOWL is the question and answer game in which students demonstrate their knowledge in various academic fields. Teams of four compete against each other to score points by answering toss-up and bonus questions.

VIEW POINT

Bull's Eye by Jeffrey Bull Grable

It's not fun to be a nostalgic in Cobb.

Fuel economy and "short cuts" have never been important considerations in determining the roads I drive. Less traveled roads with obscure landmarks and odd names have a charm about them and seem to offer a type of hospitality which commercial thoroughfares only pretend to have. I enjoy that hospitality and I am persuaded to drive certain routes more by the personality of a road and its locale than by convenience or directness. I find the traffic on Kennesaw Avenue easier to navigate than the log jam on Highway 41. I find in traffic I am less prone to blasphemy when I sense the graciousness of my surroundings. I have the notion that being in a pleasant environment makes me a bit more tolerant of people and events which I cannot control.

Perhaps I find Cobb County's roads and neighborhoods amiable because I am one of her sons. Although neither of my parents are native to the area, I was born here, and I feel a familial bond with those landmarks, buildings and businesses which have been around me most of my life.

I think it is odd for a young man to feel a genetic link to something as preposterous as the "Big Chicken." But I sense a kinship. When I drive on Highway 41, past the malls and waterslides and car dealerships and condominiums, I always look forward to seeing that absurd metal pullet who has roosted at the same intersection for the last twenty years. To me seeing that chicken (which I knew before the days of "The Colonel", when cackling and eye rolling were "The Big Chicken's" social habits) is similar to seeing one of my cousins in a busy supermarket check-out lane. For some reason it means something to me, and for some other silly reason I sense that the recognition is mutual. I make it a point to drive past "The Big Chicken" every time I am in East Marietta, regardless of my promimity to Roswell St. and Highway 41.

I have other inanimate relatives whose foundations are planted in Cobb County soil, and similarly, I take pains to drive by them whenever the occasion comes about.

Campbell's Restaurant, The Elizabeth Methodist Church, Field's Furniture among others are on my visitation itinerary. Names such as Storyland, Sandy's, The Dog and Suds and Brown's Grocery Store and the traffic tower near the entrance to Lockheed shared adjoining plots in a family cemetery I often visit when I consider days gone by. In my mind their memories are warm.

I am proud of the individuals who maintain their shops on the square. It is a refreshing thought to know that a sense of tradition can be maintained within a rapidly expanding economy. It is uplifting for me to know that a "quick copy" printing firm can be housed in the same type of storefront that sheltered a weekly Marietta Journal in the 1870's. I view it as conclusive proof that Butler buildings and prefabricated "Williamsburg" style office parks are not prerequisites to the economic prosperity of an area. I am proud of the individuals who can house their commercial enterprises within the buildings which continue the heritage of this region, not the imported architecture of Tidewater Virginia or post-war Japan.

Over the summer, lightning struck Campbell's restaurant on South Cobb Dr. in Smyrna. I thought it was a great shame that the place where my family ate on so many Saturday mornings would be lost from my register of friends and family. However my spirits soared when I learned that Mr. Porter Campbell would rebuild his restaurant. I was a happy young man.

It is too bad he has chosen to put a "Williamsburg" type roof on the place. I am afraid that it is not fun to be a nostalgic Cobb Countian.

LETS DRINK TO DRIVING!

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

We've had a fantastic summer quarter in the KC parking lots, with open spaces going beggins. But now, here comes September.

Fall Quarter there'll be a terrific increase in enrollemtn and just that many more cars. Where, oh where, will they all park? We need more lots, but that costs big bucks. For some very little bucks, however, we could make much better use of the parking spaces we do have.

The parallel parking spaces along the curbs should be marked off. We waste a lot of those spaces because KC students (1) don't know how to parallel park, or (2) are careless slobs.

So I hope Dr. Siegel will hop to it and issue an edict - state, as they say in Nursing: "Mark those curbs!"

A Cry from the Heart

I have a choice. Before my eyes I see two paths going in separate ways. I have come to the point of decision. I could choose the comfortable path, one that can veil my eyes from the poverty and hunger, from the hatred and prejudice, one that offers me artificial comfort and vain hopes. I may choose this path knowing that many will be with me to give me support. While treading this path, I will have a set plan: four years of college, probably graduate school; marriage and two children, preferably a boy and a girl; a comfortable home and of course, two cars; a 9-5 job with a good salary, promotions and raises; and then death.

But the other path, the not so smooth one, does not catch my eyes by its elegance or glamour, rather by its thorns and hard edges. Treading this path, I must remain brave. I can not shut my eyes and turn my back on the problems that face me. I must see that my brother in Africa or rather in Marietta is suffering, his children, starving from hunger. I will hear the bitter cries of young mothers, my own age, over the death of their infants. I must taste, touch, and feel pain. But it will not be easy. It hurts to feel the pain of your loved ones. I must learn to accept my pain with joy. In this path, I will find real hope and true comfort, a satisfaction granted to those who are wounded and still continue to sacrifice.

This path has a plan also: education; marriage and family, if it be His will; the world I will regard as my home; my work will be aiding in the establishment of a Peaceful World; Hours? 24 hours a day, after all, this is not a part time job; salary and benefits? the pay will be given to my great grandchildren who will reside happily in peace, realizing their oneness, in Ireland and England, in Iraq and Iran, in Russia and America.

My choice is made, and I must get back to work now. Please remember me in your prayers.

"ARE YOU BETTER OFF THAN YOU WERE 4 YEARS AGO?"

Your vote does count; Vote in '84 elections

by Olin Sturdivant

1984 has been and will be a year of diversity. This is the year of George Orwell, of the Olympics, of Elections, and Leap year. Imagine it, this year we receive one extra day in order to decide the fate of our nation!

Yes, the fate of our nation rests within our duty, to ourselves and our society to vote. Yet, the Gallup Poll predicts that only 60% of all registered voters will decide for our nation its course in history. A handful of people who care, who make time in their lives, will elect our country's leader(s). Will you be one of them?

Have you ever stopped to think that your vote may be the determining ballot for good or bad leadership?

"Yea, but that is not what my Political Science Instructor told me." He or she teaches that: 1) Elections make people feel good. 2) Elections make government legitimit. 3) Collectively, we can make judgement on those in office. 4) Elections help to protect groups from abuse. And therefore, only make the individual feel glad that he or she voted.

I will agree with those points. But let me give you seven (7) examples of when one vote counted. This information comes from Georgia Realtor magazine May/June '84, but can be found in most public libraries.

1. ONE VOTE decided that Americans speak English rather than German.
2. ONE VOTE admitted California, Idaho, Washington, and Oregon to the Union.
3. ONE VOTE made Adolph Hitler head of the Nazi party.
4. ONE VOTE saved President Andrew Jackson from impeachment.
5. ONE VOTE kept Aaron Burr, later charged with treason, from becoming President.
6. ONE VOTE elected Rutherford B. Hayes to the Presidency and the man in electoral college who cast that vote was an Indiana Congressman who was elected by one vote.
7. ONE VOTE saved the Selective Service System only 12 weeks before Pearl Harbor.

On February 3, 1980, the 15th Amendment passed and gave former slaves the right to vote. The 19th Amendment passed on August 18, 1920, and gave women the right to vote. Then, on June 30, 1971, the 26th Amendment gave eighteen year olds the right to vote. Before the 15th, 19th, and 26th Amendments only white males, twenty-one years old, that were landowners were eligible to vote.

Why should you be concerned about voting? The Congress is not concerned about the privilege of eighteen year olds to consume alcoholic beverages, simply because the 18 to 21 year old age group does not turn out in voting numbers to effect their election. The highest percentage of voters are the 25 to 35 age group. The right to drink is just one example. School funding, scholarships and grants from the government are other examples that concern us as college students.

In Georgia you must register to vote thirty days prior to an election in order to qualify to vote. That means that in order to vote in the November 6 Presidential Election you must be registered before October 7. Where can you register to vote? Any public library, that includes our own Kennesaw College library.

Exercise your right to vote...There may be a lot riding on it!

Housing a big problem for students; College needs a definite system

by Lisa Tolbert

Housing is a big problem for many KC students. Although most of the student body live at home, many students face the question of where to live.

By talking to students on campus, more insight can be given to this problem. Many students find that there is little available space that does not have very high prices. Students who have the money cannot find a decent place to live. For a majority of students, the money is a big problem. Some apartment complexes promise to provide places to live, but don't come through at the designated time. In many cases, the students have no idea who their roommate is going to be. Not very many people want to live with someone they know nothing about.

There is not a definite facility on campus to handle this problem. Mary Griffin, Director of Students Activities, receives many calls about housing. All notices are places on a bulletin board in the Student Center. This board has helped many students to find residence nearby. Notices are given for students looking for roommates and apartments. Students that have found roommates and have notices on the board should notify the Student Activities office.

Since 90 percent of the students seeking housing are looking for roommates, the need for a two or three bedroom apartment is greater than the need for a one bedroom apartment. The lowest rates are $300-$400 per month. These figures are according to Wanda Shaw, of the Apartment Selector.

Approximately five percent of registering students inquire about housing in the admissions office. There is some discussion of dormitories in the future but nothing has been definitely announced.

Frank Wilson, Assistant Dean of Student Development, is in charge of handling the housing need of Kennesaw students. As much as possible is being done to help students find housing, but without a definite system, it is hard to serve the student body as efficiently as possible.

number of accidents and information relating to the cause of the accidents, and observations from traffic engineers themselves.

The priority list is subject to a lot, if not constant change since conditions relating to the factors that determine the order of the list change also. Mr. Hulsey said that there is a file on the Chastain/Frey Rd. intersection. Any data concerning the intersection is collected and put into the file. This date represents the factors which determine placement on the priority list. Ms. Reynolds stated that there are no volume counts, indicating that there is no official account of the number of cars that pass through the Chastain and Frey Rd. crossing. However, three accidents have occurred at the intersection within the last two years and are on record in the file.

Ms. Reynolds noted that while there were no injuries to the occupants of all of the 2-vehicle collisions, it was written in the file by the traffic engineers that "according to our records, there have been three accidents correctable by signalization."

In the past, Kennesaw students have spoken out strongly against the intersection and its dangerous potential for an accident. Also, The Sentinel has reported on the problem but the need for a traffic light has yet to be fulfilled. Kennesaw College deserves a safer traffic situation.

Tax Reform Act can help parents pay for college

by Irma Bassion

Are your parents paying all or part of your college costs? Or are you the parent who is doing the paying? In either case, the new Tax Reform Act of 1984 may apply to you. Now is the time, well before this calendar year ends, to learn how it does. Next April, when tax filing time comes around, will be too late.

This new tax law effectively taxes the low-interest and free-interest loans some parents have been able to make toward their children's higher education costs. These loans have helped lessen the parents' taxable income by shifting the loan amounts to the child, who is usually in a much lower tax bracket. It is still possible to provide such education loans, but now they must be made through other mechanisms.

Since this is somewhat of an omnibus bill, very long and containing numerous provisions with narrow applications, you may want to ask for help in applying it to your family's personal circumstances. If you don't have a tax advisor, the IRS has an Atlanta information service you can call at 522-0050.

The Kennesaw College Book and Film Club will have an organizational meeting, at 10 a.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 16 in the Conference Room of the Old Library Building. Any students who are interested in participating are invited to attend this meeting.

For more information, contact Dorothy Graham, Assistant Professor of English, at 429-2824 or 429-2812 or come by office 112 in the Humanities Building.

Mu Rho Sigma helps balance home, family, school

A profile of the Mu Rho Sigma woman—does she resemble anyone you know?

OCCUPATION: Wife and/or mother; student; cook; chauffeur; laundress; dietician; crying towel; fashion consultant; errand-runner extraordinaire; housekeeper; gardener; tutor—the list goes on and on.

AGE: Who can tell? She knows she's getting better every day.

DOMESTIC SCENES: A) Husband: "But I need my navy blue suit TODAY to make that presentation! It can't still be at the cleaner's. You know it's my good luck suit." B) Eight-year old son: "You know the school serves barf! You promised you'd make my lunches every day and all we ever have around here is peanut butter." C) Teen-age daughter: "But, Mother, I have to have my pink Esprit shirt. It's the only thing that goes with my Jordache jeans. Besides, I put it in the wash a week ago!"

Sound familiar? Doesn't anyone realize you have a test on Thursday and a term paper due in two weeks? Before you throw in the towel and decide to put off college—again!—until Junior goes off to Yale, join Mu Rho Sigma the second Thursday of each month from 10 until 11 in BA127.

Mu Rho Sigma is a support group for married and formerly married women. We invite professional women from the community to speak to us about issues concerning women in our unique situation. Our lively discussions help us realize we're all in pretty much the same boat. We at Mu Rho Sigma know what it is to try and balance a home, a family, and school. It's not easy but all of us together are living proof that it can be done and done well!

Please plan to join us on Thursday October 11 at 10 o'clock. Our speaker will be Ms. Mary Lee Cullom of the Atlanta Center for Psychotherapy speaking on "Time Management." What could be more appropriate?

We're looking forward to meeting you!

ALPHA Group: honor for top seniors

The Alpha Group was established this past Spring quarter. This honorary will ultimately be converted to Phi Kappa Phi, one of the most prestigious of the national scholastic honoraries. Kennesaw College cannot enjoy this affiliation until we have met national standards which include graduating five classes (June 1984 was our fifth); reaching 125,000 library books (we're close); and, having a faculty with at least 60% doctorate holders (we have this).

Eligibility requirements include completing at least 166 hours (90 of which must have been taken at Kennesaw College), and having a minimum GPA of 3.5. Membership is open to those in all academic fields. Those seniors meeting these requirements automatically receive a letter from Dr. Eugene Huck, faculty advisor, welcoming them into the Alpha Group. Affiliation with the group at this time requires no dues, no initiation, and no regular meetings. As of August, 1984, the Alpha Group proudly boasted a membership of seventy-one.

As Kennesaw College grows in the number of graduates, of programs, and of significance, we are also growing towards tradition. We of the Alpha Group feel that the establishment of this society which recognizes scholastic excellence, will be an important advance.

ERT: business and interaction

Executive Roundtable (ERT) establishes a setting for students such as yourself to interact with the faculty and with community industry leaders. Each program revolves around a dinner and roundtable discussion, with an outstanding leader in the community serving as a quest speaker. The theme for this year's series of dinner/lectures is "Business and Education: Responsiveness and Responsibility." Malcom awoke with a start, his new Am-243 powered CO<sup>2</sup> detector told him someone was in the room with him. He checked the Ni-Cd power pack for his light source, it was charged, at least according to the LED display. He removed the Pb shield from the inner plate of his weapon. With the Pb shield removed, Malcom would only have to pull the trigger to allow the Pu 244 source to be exposed to the photomultiplier tube, then the multiplied beam would be directed through the ruby and out the barrel of the laser pistol. The Ga-As chip in his helmet processed and analyzed the data input from his IR sensitive eye piece, which was installed in his helmet, but neither he nor his computer could locate the intruder.

"PHENOMENAL WOMAN" underway

by Jo Dilbeck

About a year ago, Kennesaw College President Betty Siegel wanted to showcase the talents of the women of Kennesaw College. Inviting a group of women over to her house who were interested in women's studies, Dr. Siegel talked about what could be done to present these women and their talents to the community.

The consensus was that a conference could be held in which the many facets of women, the numerous roles and activities with which they were involved, could be presented to the college and the community. After all, these facets were represented right here in the various faculty members' interests, in their training, and in their aptitudes.

As a result of this initial meeting, a major conference was planned, with six mini-conferences to follow. The series of conferences was called the "Phenomenal Woman Series," coming from a poem "The Phenomenal Woman," written by Maya Angelou, who at the time of the Planning session was a speaker on campus. Dr. Siegel and several faculty members who had been working on the conferences decided that it would be the perfect name.

The main conference was held last February, at which time six roles of women were identified: The traditional woman, women in the public, the status of women, women and health, women and the arts, and women and science, business and technology. Those roles would become the topics for the subsequent mini-conferences.

In May, the first mini-conference was held. "Women's Health, Take Good Care of Yourself." Judy Perkins, chairman of the college's nursing department and chairman of this conference, centered this conference on fitness, stress and health issues after the age of 40.

In this, as in each of the mini-conferences, committee members included Kennesaw College faculty, members of the administration and staff, students and members of the community.

In July, the second mini-conference, entitled "The Professional Woman in Science, Technology, and Business," was held. It focused on networking and mentoring, the risks of success and management skills, and time management.

On Sept. 21, the third mini-conference was held. "A Day With the Arts" included the Georgia Women Artists Show, now hanging in the library's art gallery, located on the ground floor. This show contains works by women artists who are members of the oldest and the newest art galleries in the metropolitan Atlanta area.

From the 23-year-old Artists' Associates Gallery in Atlanta, are works by Betty Loeble, Whitt Robbins Harris, Jean Inghard, Martha Nix, Leila Yarbrough and Connie Alexander. The gallery is a cooperative gallery, in which the artists themselves are partners.

The newest gallery, the Artists Forum Gallery, in Marietta, furnished the show with works by artists Yvonne Randall, Sherry Cook, Gwen de Silva and Karen Beswick.

After a reception, participants were treated to a visit by renowned local columnist and author Celestine Sibley. "Miz" Sibley, a wonderful storyteller, regaled her audience with her homespun humor and anecdotes of her life in the world of journalistic "meddlin'."

During the luncheon which followed, Dr. Karen Thompson, acting English Department chairman, entertained with selections on the piano. After lunch, Dr. Ruth Hepler, director of the Counseling, Advisement and Placement Center, accompanied by Dr. Thompson, and Dr. Willoughby Jarrell, Political Science department chairman, who played drums, sang a number of Judy Collins' songs, including the stirring women's song, "Bread and Roses."

Artists Abby Drue, Lisa Tuttle, Linda Dubler, and Laura Leiberman later discussed "Atlanta Women on the Cutting Edge of Visual Arts," the trials and triumphs of being a woman artist. The panel discussion was moderated by Kennesaw's Fine Arts Director, Roberta Griffin.

Conference participants were entertained that evening at the Brickworks restaurant by a series of vignettes, written and directed by Charlotte Stephenson, which showed seven stages of a woman's life; dancer Virginia Barnett, who previewed a new dance; Mali Harrell, a mime, who acted out fantasies with aplomb; the Sweet Adelines barber-shop singers, who sang "San Francisco Bay Blues," and other old favorites; and Morganna, a temple ritual dancer who performed several belly dances.

On Oct. 20, the fourth program, "Women in the Public," will be held. The keynote speaker will be Elizabeth Harris, wife of Gov. Joe Frank Harris. The theme is to encourage women to become involved with civic and political activities.

Next February, the "Traditional Woman" will be presented. "This is truly the wrap-up to the Phenomenal Woman Series, for we all play traditional roles no matter what we do," said Helen Ridley, of the KC political science department, who is chairman of the conference.

The conference committee has joined with the Student Union's Chautauqua Committee to bring Gail Sheehy, author of Passages and Pathfinders to Kennesaw College next March.

"This series is accomplishing what Dr. Siegel thought was an appropriate role for the college in acquainting the community with women's issues and with the women at the college who are involved in them, and acquainting the college with the community, so indeed there can be a dialogue, there can be a relationship," said Dr. Ridley.

DAVID WATKINS: Artistic Expression through Music

by Edilberto Cuellar

David Watkins is committed to his music. Although he is very calm and soft spoken, the Kennesaw piano teacher is strong when it comes to showing his love for music. Mr. Watkins will perform "Prelude and Fugue in G Major, Prelude and Fugue in G Minor" by Johann Sebastian Bach, "Sonata in C Minor" by J. Haydn, "Barcarole Op. 60" by F. Chopin, and "Sonata in B Minor" by F. Liszt, at 8 p.m. on October 2 in the recital hall of the Music building.

Without a wasted movement, reflecting calmness he said, "When I finish practice one day, I will plan the next day. I always plan a schedule that includes time for practice." His discipline was strengthened during his years as a student at the New England Conservatory in Boston, Mass. "It was a very intense environment because the students were all serious. It was a very competitive environment, however, it was a healthy environment," he said thoughtfully.

Recalling his memories of childhood, he remembered Margarite Scott as the last of the three teachers with whom he studied piano before going to New England Conservatory. It was at the age of eight when he started his piano lessons.

He recommended that piano students always be open to new ideas. "If you love music enough to pursue it seriously, work very hard and listen to every sound you make, analyze, try to express the music to the best of your ability," he said. He considers that his principle role as a piano teacher is to try to give the students the necessary tools for artistic expression through music. His advice for piano students is to always set higher goals and try to reach for them.

Secure and confident, he said, "I find that my nervousness decreases with the amount of preparation that I have for the occasion." The way in which he avoids being nervous is by thinking only about the music he is playing at the moment.

Mr. Watkins thinks that one never stops learning and as a result of his thinking, after he finished his master's degree from New England Conservatory; he continued pursuing his studies. He has studied with Ivan Davis in Miami, Florida; Gary Wolf in Orlando, Florida; and Barbara Byron at Indiana University. However, he has a special affection for his undergraduate piano teacher Lucia Monaghan.

Mr. Watkins is a well known concert pianist throughout the Southeastern part of the United States. His experience as a soloist and piano accompanist is tremendous. He has been a member of the Atlanta Virtuosi, one of the finest chamber groups in Georgia. On several occasions, he has played with the Cobb Symphony as a soloist.

Mr. Watkins performing schedule this fall seems to be quite busy. He is going to perform with the Cobb Symphony on Oct. 27, "The Concerto no. 2 for Piano and Orchestra" by Serge Rachmaninoff. Besides his duties as a teacher, he is going to perform "Every two weeks in different cities in Georgia."

Mr. Watkins' commitment and love for music is an inspiration to other faculty and students at this college.

Letter from the President

Dear Student:

It is a pleasure for me to welcome you to Kennesaw Junior College. I hope that your experiences as a college student will be as thrilling for you as the preparation for your arrival has been for the faculty and administrative staff of the college. It is our wish that you will always be pleased you decided to become a "Charter" member of the student body of Kennesaw Junior College.

Because of conditions beyond our control, it is impossible for us to open our college on our own campus. However, we are most fortunate in that Southern Tech has agreed to share its facilities with us until our buildings are ready for occupancy. It is hoped that we will show our gratitude for this hospitality by being good neighbors and guests on the Southern Tech campus.

The faculty and staff of Kennesaw Junior College join me in wishing you success and enjoyment in your program of study as you work toward the academic and personal goals which you have established for yourself.

Cordially yours,
(s) Horace W. Sturgis
President

College Store Opens

Do you need pencils, paper, tablets, notebooks, books? Look no further. Mr. Lawrence Howland, the College Book Store Manager, has these and many other things for each student at Kennesaw Junior College.

Located in Room 252 of the Classroom Building at Southern Tech, the College Store is well stocked with pencils, paper, school stationery bearing either The Owl, the symbol of Kennesaw Junior College, or the school seal. It also sells school sweat-shirts, school night shirts, and school jackets. Kennesaw Junior College car decals and license plates are on sale also.

The first two days of registration the store was stocked with books only, but by the time school had started on September 28, the Store was displaying a variety of school supplies.

This quarter the college store will remain on the Southern Tech campus, in room 252. When Kennesaw Junior College moves to its new campus, the book store will be located in the Student Center.

Also in the Student Center will be a dining area, places to get snacks, vending machines with candy and cigarettes, and several additional rooms for organizations.

Mr. Howland will be in charge of the Student Center as well as the Store. Mr. Howland laughingly said that he plans to keep the prices down in the College Store, in order to stay in business.

The College Store hours are from 7:00 A. M. to 8:30 P. M. the first week, and will be 7:00 A. M. to 6:30 P. M. the following week.

Campus Shows Progress

When completed, the campus of Kennesaw Junior College will include eight major buildings of modern construction, including air conditioning and carpeting.

Located in North Cobb County near McCollum Airport, the new campus, purchased by Cobb County and presented to the Board of Regents, will occupy a 152-acre tract. Many of the buildings are situated facing Frey's Lake to the south of the campus. The campus setting offers a view of Kennesaw Mountain and is close to the Pinetree Country Club and golf course.

Major buildings planned or already completed include a library science building, physical education building with a regulation size indoor swimming pool, a warehouse building, administration building, and a student services building which will house the book store, food services, and lounging and meeting room are also being built.

A covered walkway connects the five buildings on the quadrangle. The college parking facilities will accommodate approximately 1,200 students.

Occupying four campuses at the present, Marietta Housing Center, Banberry Elementary, Southern Tech, and the Kennesaw Campus, itself, the new college, when completed will indeed be fortunate in its location.

Several factors combine to make Marietta a desirable place in which to have Kennesaw Junior College located. It is situated only eight miles northeast of the heart of Marietta, a religious, cultural, and educational center with a population of more than 25,000. This is another reason why the citizens of Cobb County should appreciate the opportunity of having a college under the University System of Georgia in their vicinity.

Kennesaw Junior College with its inspiring scenery will certainly be noted not only for its prominent position in the community as a junior college, but a college with a campus of unlimited natural beauty.

Kennesaw Junior College, which originated in 1963 and opened its doors in 1966, will offer students in the Cobb County area a beautiful campus to study and further their education. A number of out-of-state students will also attend Kennesaw Junior College.

Cheerleaders Try Out

"Rah! Rah! Rah!" This familiar sound will soon be heard from several people at Kennesaw Junior College who are chosen as cheerleaders for the Southern Tech basketball team.

Requirements for try-outs are that the applicant be 17 years or older and attend a cheerleading clinic, beginning October 3. Try-outs will be held after the clinic.

Southern Tech's schedule for basketball games includes Monday and Friday nights. Participating in collegiate sports, unlike Kennesaw Junior College, Southern Tech plans for Kennesaw Junior College to provide their school with some cheerleaders.

Student Government Assoc. Is Main Governing Body

The Student Government Association of Kennesaw Junior College, as explained by Dr. Mark E. Meadows, Dean of Students, will be the official representative body of the students.

The SGA will affiliate with SUSGA, the Southern Universities Student Government Association. The Student Government Association at Kennesaw Junior College has been invited and is making plans to attend the Annual Georgia Swap Shop Publications Workshop, in Atlanta, October 28 and 29. The workshop is sponsored by SUSGA.

The SGA will assist colleges in formulating a program of student services and activities. It will also strive to express the will of the majority of students and provide experiences in democratic living. Through SGA, students will be able to express themselves effectively in student affairs and as individual students at Kennesaw Junior College. The SGA will endeavor to work as closely as possible with the administration to help formulate student policies and strive for higher ideals among college students.

The SGA at Kennesaw Junior College will not be organized until Winter Quarter, but specific plans for SGA are in the making at the present. Dean Meadows indicated that SGA officers will be selected by vote of the entire student body and that composition of the Association will include representation of the freshman and of the sophomore classes. Also, consideration is being given to having representatives for students who attend classes only in the evening.

Dean Meadows will work closely with the SGA and will serve as advisor. Students interested in the affairs of Kennesaw Junior College or who have previously worked with their high school student government are encouraged to participate in the SGA.

When asked his views on the importance of the SGA, Dean Meadows stated, "I believe that the Student Government Association is the spokesman for the student body and is therefore the most important student organization on campus. The Student Government Association will play the key role in planning and sponsoring student activities to promote the growth and well-being of the students and the college."

COUNSELING AVAILABLE

The Office of Guidance and Counseling will have a staff member available for conferences with Kennesaw Junior College students on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, 5:30 p.m. 'till 9:00 p.m. The Counselor will be available in the Registrar's office.

New GI Bill Assists

A grateful nation is underwriting the cost of the education of 63 Kennesaw Junior College students.

These students are the first crop of veterans to attend school under the new GI Bill signed by President Lyndon B. Johnson on March 3, 1966. The Veterans' Readjustment Benefits Act of 1966 enables the veteran to obtain education or training to fit himself for a chosen career or better employment opportunity in civilian life.

Courses, after approval by the VA, may be taken at a college, vocational, business, secondary, or correspondence school. The government will pay up to $150 per month for a maximum of 36 months and provides professional counselors to assist the veteran in his choice.

The 61 male and 2 female students should, if they are like their WW II and Korean War counterparts, be serious, responsible students. The veterans of yesteryear contributed much to their campuses and hold better jobs and have higher wages than non-veterans.

The government has found that the money spent by them has returned many times over in the form of taxes the veterans pay on their higher earnings. This, coupled with a steady stream of skilled men and women pumped into the labor force in a technician-hungry nation, make the new GI Bill a boon to all.

College Seal

On the seal of Kennesaw Junior College stands a sentinel, sword drawn, ready for action. There could be no more fitting symbol for this newspaper and, indeed for Kennesaw Junior College, as a whole. The Sentinel staff gives the Campus Community its pledge that wisdom, justice and moderation will always be our aim. Wisdom in being a responsible college publication, justice in covering all phases of school life, and moderation in our daily lives.

Dadisman Speaks

J. Carrol Dadisman emphasized responsible college journalism as he spoke to staffs of The Sentinel and The Montage, at a dinner meeting provided by Dr. Horace Sturgis, President of Kennesaw Junior College.

Editor of The Marietta Daily Journal, Mr. Dadisman served on the staff of The Red and Black, University of Georgia newspaper, and came to Marietta from The Augusta Chronicle.

Dr. Sturgis stressed the responsibility which staffs of both the college newspaper and the yearbook have to reflect the philosophy of a new college which holds quality of academic instruction of prime importance.

Ladies Softball starts first full year

by Michael R. Martin

How many of you knew KC had an inter-collegiate ladies softball team? Well, we do. This is the first full year of the team's existence. This writer spent a few days with the team to meet the players and coaches.

First, before I go any further, let me introduce the coaches. Media Ashmore is a graduate of West Georgia College where she obtained a master's degree in Physical Education. Currently, she is only here on a part-time basis. In charge of ladies varsity softball, she works full time at St. Anthony's Catholic school, where she is an elementary school teacher. Coach Ashmore has varsity level coaching experience from Oglethorpe University, where she coached both volleyball and tennis.

Coach Ashmore is assisted by Ted Cochran, Chief of Security on the KC campus. He has many years of experience both as a coach and a player in the game of softball.

I met with Coach Ashmore to find out a few of her ideas and philosophies about starting a program from the ground floor. She seemed very excited about the opportunity and echoed this excitement to the players in her pre-practice speech. She stated her "philosophies were simple, but demanding. She expects every player who steps on the field to give it all they've got, and to expect the same from the coaches." Coach Ashmore mainly wants the ladies to go out and have fun playing, but not to forget the main reason why they are at KC, and that is academics. With this philosophy, it is easy to see why the coach is excited about the upcoming spring season.

When asked about her major goals for the future at KC, Coach Ashmore stated her goals were "to win ballgames and to establish a cohesive foundation for a winning program here at KC."

Finally, I asked her if the youth of the team concerned her (the team is made up of mostly freshmen and sophomores). She said that she felt "with the quality of players she has now, KC should be able to compete with any team they play."

With this kind of thinking by the coaching staff, plus the confidence and talent shown by the ladies, you get the feeling that these ladies may well be on their way to a very successful season.

But that doesn't mean that they already have a set team for you ladies till thinking of trying out. If you think you have the ability and a desire to play, come on out! Everyone gets an equal chance and if you want to try out and don't, the only one you will be hurting is you!

Rugby Club arrives at KC

by Curt McKinney

A recently formed organization, the Kennesaw College Rugby Football Club, will be featured at Kennesaw College this fall. The Rugby Club, which competes with such teams as Georgia, Emory and Clemson, plans to slate four to six games at the first of October along with a full schedule of 10 games next spring. Any student, faculty member or alumni who possesses an I.D. can participate with the club. The Rugby Club's faculty advisor is History Professor Tom Keene and Roger Hackler is the club's acting captain.

Rugby, which is not a well publicized sport in the U.S., is misunderstood by many. "There's a big misconception that rugby is a sport with no rules. The only thing that rugby has in common with football is the shape of the ball," Hackler explains.

One fact about rugby is that it is a fairly simple game: The match has two 40 minute halves with a 10 minute break dividing them, and no time outs. Fifteen players participate throughout the game for each team, except for up to two substitutions for injuries. One main object exists: To get the ball to an area called "in-goal" and touch the ball on the ground (which is called a "try"). Rugby contains three primary rules: 1. You can only throw the ball backwards. 2. When an opposing player confronts the holder of the ball, he must either sustain a tackle or pass it to another person. 3. If the ball is dropped and is out of control (which is called a "ruck" or "maul") a player cannot use his hands to control the ball.

Lack of interest in the Rugby Club can basically be attributed to the newness of the club, as it was formed just last spring. However, some people may believe that too much time could be spent in the club. "We usually practice four times a week, but a player is only required to attend two of them. We try to accommodate for all of the players' classes and jobs," Hackler comments.
