Twenty-first Celebration huge success

by Lisa Tolbert

Founder's Day was a huge success. Many people shared in Kennesaw's twenty-first birthday celebration. The convocation took place in the library on Tuesday, October 9. Most of the faculty was there to participate. The teaching staff, looking splendid in their robes, marched in while the audience was standing.

President Betty Siegel introduced the special guests. These included the Board of Trustees, the Marietta Daily Journal, and last but certainly not least, Dr. Siegel's mother. Vice President James Kolka had the honor of introducing the distinguished guest, Lorin Hollander.

Mr. Hollander captivated his audience with his speech entitled, "Arts and Education, An Imperative." Hollander's speech gave insight into the world of teaching. He feels that teaching is the most precious and important career there is. There is no other job worth the time and money than teaching. Hollander also feels, "We are no longer nurturing creativity in our children."

Dr. Siegel presented some very important awards. All of the legislators in the Seventh District were presented with Certificates of Appreciation. The legislators of Cherokee and North Fulton received this award also.

Campbell K. Dasher was the recipient of the Second Annual Distinguished Service Award. Dr. Dasher is well-known throughout the campus and community. He is the Vice President of the Kennesaw College Foundation. He is, of course, on the Board of Trustees. Dasher is the retired chairman on the Board of Damar, Incorporated. He served on many committees. These include, Development and Sponsorship Programs, and the Student Task Force for Planned Growth. Campbell Dasher was the chairman for the Private Enterprise Committee and was responsible for establishing the Endowment Fund through the Foundation. He was also involved in the Fund Drive for the Foundation.

Kennesaw had the special honor of having Lorin Hollander give a piano concert Tuesday evening. He has exceptional speaking as well as musical abilities. Hollander spellbound his audience by presenting his speech and tying it in with his music. Mr. Hollander's topic for the evening was, "Music: The Creative Process and the Path to Enlightenment." Hollander said, "Art is the connection between the mind and body."

Lorin Hollander is a very gifted performer. His concert was a very emotional as well as exceptional one. The music moved everyone that was present and even brought tears to the eyes of some. When asked what goes on in his mind while he plays, Hollander replied, "Music is the only thing that can run through my mind. I must block out everything else." He added, "If my mind wanders, which it sometimes does, I must bring it back or else I lose the music."

The Cultural Affairs Committee of the Student Union sponsored Lorin Hollander. The Student Union and all of the people involved should be congratulated on a very successful Founder's Day.

On-line system needs improvement

by Curt McKinney

Registration is a word that strides fear into the hearts of many students and faculty. It's also a problem that must be attended to so that Kennesaw College's growing population can be accommodated to with the courses that we need and desire.

Kennesaw's current method of registration, which has been used for about two years, is called an on-line system. Great improvements have been made from Kennesaw's old card system in its junior college days when computer cards containing a student's schedule were handled manually. Both efficiency and organization have been significantly upgraded from the previous registration procedure. "We frankly think that this system works pretty well," comments Betty Youngblood, Director of Academic Services and Registrar. The fact remains, however, that some obvious problems exist.

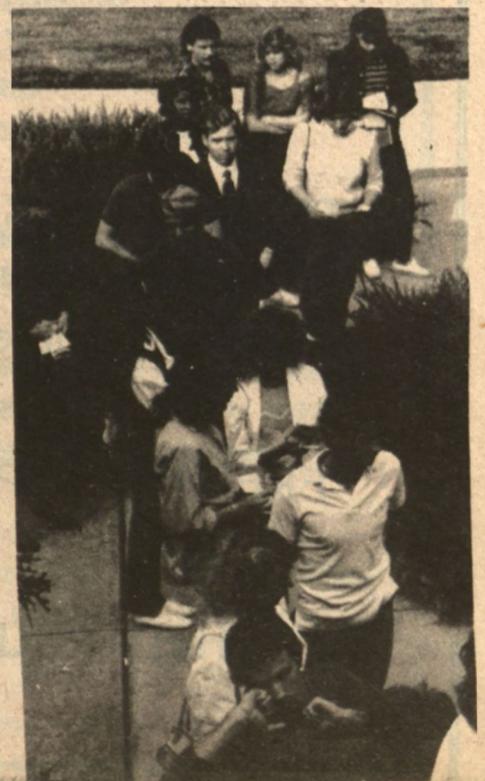

Numerous complaints have been heard from students about the registration process, including slowness of method, limited amounts of critical courses, and priority of registering students. According to

Ms. Youngblood and Joe DeCristoforo, Assistant Director of Academic Services, student cooperation can improve some of these difficulties. "Take, for instance, the large crowds at registration. These crowds wouldn't be nearly as bad if students wouldn't arrive one to two hours before their registration time. We've even had some people come (to registration) as much as a day earlier than their scheduled time," Youngblood commented. DeCristoforo added, "If students would cooperate more with our system, crowding wouldn't be a large factor."

The limited offering of such vital courses as English 101 and Math 101 for freshmen is a direct result of limited facilities and tremendous student population growth. On the other hand, students can dodge schedule problems by allowing themselves a large number of possible courses to choose from. "Many times, a person registering does not make his potential schedule flexible enough," Youngblood said. Student Government President Don Sams offers another suggestion: "Students need to come to me and let their feelings and problems be known. After all, that's what S.G.A. is for."

History in the making

The Sentinel has gone biweekly! The 1984-85 Sentinel Staff is very proud to announce that, for what is believed to be the first time in the history of Kennesaw College's student newspaper, the paper will be issued every two weeks. You can look for The Sentinel every other Tuesday for more up to date news, entertainment and happenings on the KC campus.

Questions/Answers

Dear Abby Landers

Sincerely

Yours,

So everything is perfect at Kennesaw College! There are no problems, no complaints, and the students couldn't be more satisfied. Ideally that is a wonderful thought. However, realistically, I think it's bull!

Did you think we were kidding? Would I be so bold as to entitle my column "Sincerely Yours" if I wasn't? If any of you know me at all, you would know that I am too proud for that!

The Sentinel Staff and I are quite serious about this service. It is an invaluable means of addressing legitimate concerns of the students. If you read our last issue of Oct. 2, you were made aware of the purpose behind this column. I will remind you that The Sentinel is making itself available to investigate and truthfully report on any issue causing concern among students, faculty and/or staff.

I am in hopes that we will soon receive valid response to this column. If I don't hear from you, I will simply write you again. I intend to keep it up until you take this column for what it is... "Sincerely Yours."

Please write your letters to:

Sincerely Yours

and deliver to the Sentinel mailbox in the SGA Workroom on the second floor of the Student Center.

Dear Abby Landers

I am writing to correct some advice you gave the "serious" math "student."

The Counseling Center's new name is Counseling Services and it is now a part of the CAPS Center (Counseling, Advisement, and Placement Services Center). The offices (and counselors) are located on the second floor of the Library Annex (old Library).

One last comment. On the whole, you provide pretty good advice. Look forward to reading your next column.

A professional counselor,
Chuck Goodrum

Dear Chuck:

You're a doll. Thanks so much for correcting my mistakes. Be my guest anytime.

ABBY

Dear Abby Landers:

Fried chicken is my favorite food, but I am afraid to eat it in public. At home, we eat it with our fingers but I'm not sure if it is proper etiquette. Would you tell me how to eat fried chicken in acceptable company? (And I have the same problem with ribs). I would be in your debt.

Afraid of Finger Licking

Dear Afraid:

You live in a well-mannered home, honey. Your family has a lot of couth. Lick away, enjoy, and pay me off in wishbones.

Abby

HUSH HUSH to Let's Party:

Sorry, I can't use my limited space on your little gem, but I do wish you were as clever, funny and adorable as you think you are. Thanks for writing anyhow.

Abby

Dear Abby Landers:

I date someone who smokes. I have been dating this same person for a long time, and I am tired of her smoking. How can I ask her nicely to quit? I'm worried that smoking can hurt her, and I'm tired of kissing an ashtray. At times, I feel like the smog just came rolling in to the point where my eyes hurt. How can I tell her that I don't appreciate her smoking for myself or for her health.

Tired of Kissing an Ashtray

Dear Tired:

What a stinking problem! Have you tried to stop her and failed or have you been suffering in silence?

Open up by emphasizing that you care for her a lot and care about her health (be noble and don't mention yours). Then tell her just what you've told me, while sitting as far away from her as you can get. Body language can be real loud.

Then she will have to decide what means the most to her. If it's her coffin nails, you've lost her but you've really won a big one. You can never be happy with her, feeling as you do.

Say 'bye like a gentleman, and go out shopping for a non-smoking doll. There are lots of them around.

Abby

Dear Abby Landers:

I am in desperate need of advice to the lovelorn. My situation is that my current boy friend seems to have a lack of motivation in the area of school, employment, me, and his own future. His lack of motivation bugs me to no end. I love him, but have just met a wonderful guy who has all the motivation in the world plus he seems to be interested in me. Help!

CAUGHT IN THE MIDDLE

Dear Caught:

How can you "love" such a nerd? Come on, I think your real problem may be that you don't want to drop the dunce until you're sure you have the hunk in hand. Sorry, life is a gamble.

At least you can free yourself to make a move on that new man if you unload the dead weight you have now. And if that "wonderful guy" doesn't work out for you, you'll still be a winner. Somehow I have the felling, since the nerd if your "current" boy friend, that you have been through this before, no???

School of Business gets $70,000 grant

by Barbara Sandberg

Within the past month, it has been announced that the Kennesaw College School of Business has received a 70,000 dollar grant from the Business and International Education division of the United States Office of Education. The grant is the fourth largest of thirty-seven grants given by the government this year nation wide. (The largest grant of 120,000 dollars was given to the University of Southern Californis.)

Art Dunning, who is now the Dean of Graduate Studies and Associate Dean of Academic Administration here at Kennesaw College, initiated the application for the grant by writing a proposal and submitting it to the U.S. Office of Education last year. According to Dunning, the purpose of the grant is to "provide business faculty with opportunities to develop skills in international trade and development" and also to "provide faculty and students with current and accurate information about international trade and development."

Some of the new developments that will be brought about by the grant include curriculum development, international career lecture series, international trade and development seminars, faculty exchange, and increased library support. Specifically, Kennesaw will be sponsoring projects opportunities for selected business faculty members to be sent to other universities (faculty

Some of the new developments that will be brought about by the grant include curriculum development, international career lecture series, international trade and development seminars, faculty exchange, and increased library support. Specifically, Kennesaw will be sponsoring projects (such as) opportunities for selected business faculty members to be sent to other universities ("faculty exchange") and into multi-national corporations for the summer (opportunities for faculty members to be placed) to enhance their knowledge of current issues. Both of these "faculty enhancement" activities are designed to enrich business student's information.

A large part of the entire program, according to Art Dunning, is the involvement of Cobb businesses with Kennesaw College. In fact, the International Center of Cobb Chamber of Commerce will be providing executives to lecture and assist in trade development education at KC. The chamber will also "involve international executives to assist with the international career series for students as well as curriculum development."

In return, the community will also benefit from the enhancement of Kennesaw's international business program. Says Art Dunning, "We are attempting to serve the community and work closely with the community in addition to our major teaching function, which is to help students better prepare themselves for the changing job market."

Dunning named Dean

by Barbara Sandberg

Congratulations are in order for Art Dunning, who has recently been named Dean of Graduate Studies here at Kennesaw College. Dunning, who is also Associate Dean for Academic Administration, says the position is "actually a title change to reflect past activities and anticipated future activities here at K C."

Dunning attended the University of Alabama, received his Masters degree at Vanderbilt University, and then went back to Alabama for his P.H.D. Before coming to Kennesaw College, Dunning worked at the University of Alabama's office of Academic Affairs for seven years.

Dunning's duties here at Kennesaw include academic budget development, coordination of international studies, and graduate reasearch and grants. Dunning recently acquired a 70,000 dollar grant for the school of business at K C; he has already proven to be an asset to Kennesaw College.

K.C. students get most for money

by Lisa Tolbert

According to a recent survey, Kennesaw's Student Activities fees are lower than most other schools in the University System. This does not mean, however, that we don't have as many activities as the other colleges.

Kennesaw uses the money for activities on campus, such as concerts and movies. Money also goes to student publications, intercollegiate athletics, and special student activities as well as clubs and organizations.

Some schools, such as West Georgia, charge as high as $55 per quarter. Georgia Tech and North Georgia College have certain areas that the fee covers. These areas include health, athletics, a yearbook, clubs and other campus organizations.

North Georgia College has an internal income along with the fee to finance some of their activities. This school sets the price of their activities fee at $23 per quarter. North Georgia is able to finance more things because of the additional income. Money is being used to finance the college band, choral group, the student union, and its officers. Other uses for the money include the drill team, student center, and lifeguard.

Georgia Tech has areas in which they spend the money also. The actual fee is $30, but the Athletic fee is $25 and the health fee is $34 per quarter.

Georgia State charges $20 per quarter. The college finances its orientation with some of this money.

Surprisingly, the University of Georgia only charges $18 per quarter for an activity fee.

Many students at Kennesaw may expect the student activity fee to rise in the near future. However, according to Don Sams, Director of Student Activities, they will not. "Since there has been a recent hike of four dollars, I don't see that the fee will go up any time soon," Sams predicts.

Many students were angered because of the fact that all athletes were given first priority on the courses offered in the Fall quarter. Apparently, this event was an error of the registration system. Ms. Youngblood tries to explain, "We (the registrar's office) and some other offices had a misunderstanding concerning the eligibility of certain students to register early. We plan to tighten up the situation before next quarter."

How can the registration system at Kennesaw be improved? Youngblood and company think that they have one viable solution: early registration. Starting Winter quarter of this year, students will have the opportunity to be pre-advised and choose their courses in order to dismiss registration entirely. "We think that students will really like our pre-registration program. We're excited about it," Youngblood says.

The future for Kennesaw's registration system can be quite bright. "We have many other options down the road," Youngblood comments. A new system that features students phoning in their complete schedule without even going to campus, which is now being used at Brigham Young University, is a possible program for Kennesaw. The only problem is the great cost. "Of course, telephone registration is expensive, but it is not out of the question for it to be at Kennesaw in a few years. Not only could we use such a sytem for registration, but it could be beneficial for grades and the use of other offices around campus," DeCristoforo comments.

VIEW POINT

WHY Ozzy?

by Rose Kovacs Hochman

I have a question - Why does anyone like Ozzy Osborne? I need to know why I am losing sleep pondering this phenomena.

Some might ask- Who is Ozzy Osborne? To you I say, watch MTV or Video 69 and when you see someone who is not punk, new wave, or Boy George, but just plain ugly, you've found Ozzy.

Ozzy's popularity puzzles me. (I assume someone likes him because he is on television) He can't sing. He has the sex appeal of a canteloupe or may be a turnip. No insult is meant to our vegetarian readers.

While viewing his video, I confess I turned off the sound. It was a unique experience for me. After his appearance from a cloud of smoke Ozzy begins snarling and yelling unintelligibly while pacing back & forth across stage with a microphone.

As sweat begins to flow, Ozzy's already lank hair becomes plastered against his head. Not a pretty picture. After a few wild-eyed looks at the audience he begins to take off his shirt. "Please-no, don't do it," - I think that's what the crowd is screaming. It must be some sort of S & M ritual, because off comes the shirt.

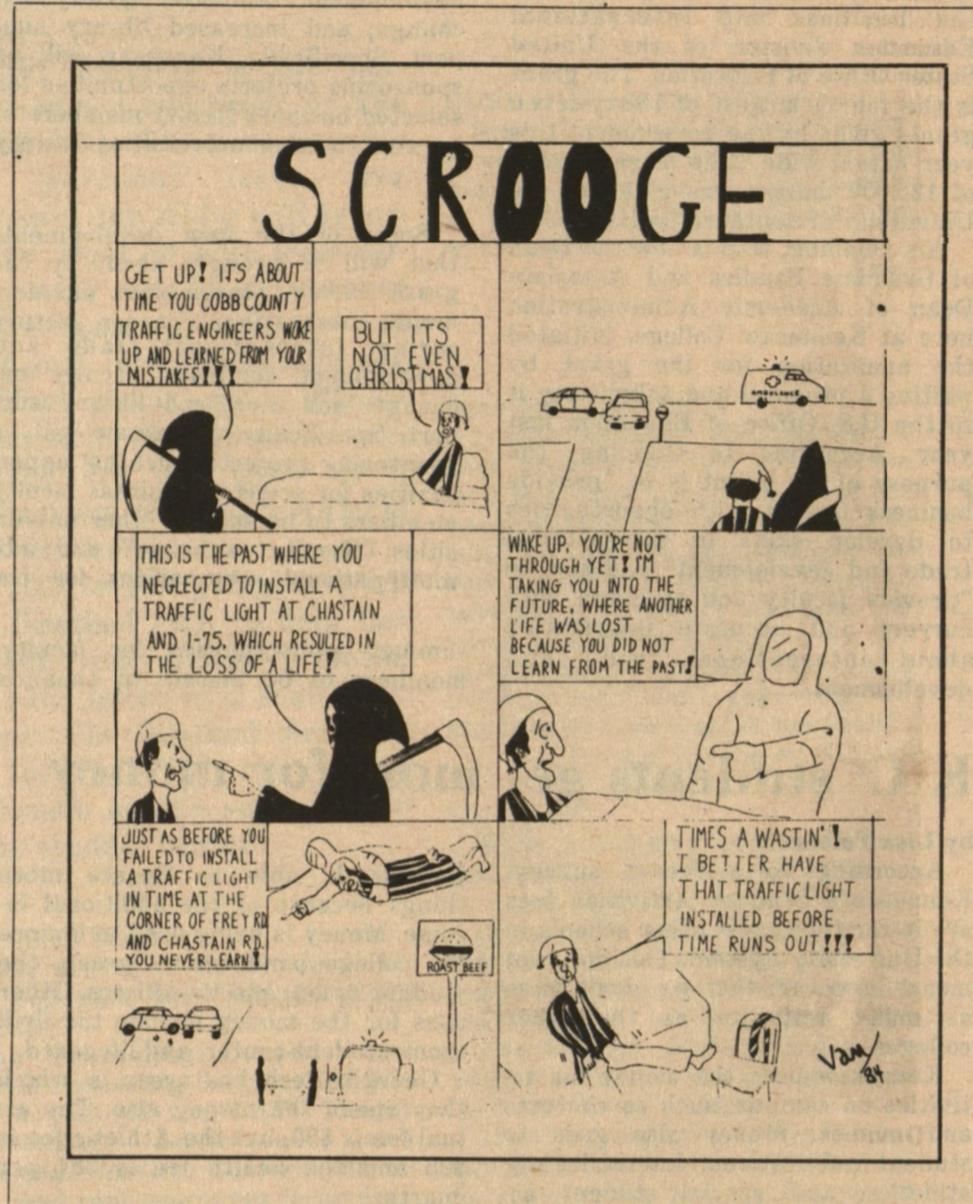

Now, the essence of untanned flab is revealed. There are also a few sundry tatoos to be found gracing Ozzy's torso. This is all being enacted against a backdrop of what I suppose is a half-hearted tribute to black magic. Candles, skulls and various stuff of that nature is lit up on the stage.

Now Ozzy goes for the money. He can't dance. He doesn't try, at least I don't think he's trying to dance. What he does is crash around the stage, fall to the floor and roll about.

Occasionally, the camera cuts to the audience, which appears to be cheering Ozzy on. But I am not convinced that anyone is really there at the concert. I think the film has been edited so that people just appear to be there. The audience being shown in Ozzy's video is really watching a Rolling Stone's concert.

This might seem funny, but I assure you the effect on me is one of total bewilderment. Purple hair, mohawks, and androgyny make sense compared to this.

Hey, write an explanation of Ozzy Osborne. I promise not to reveal your identity if you want it that way. I need to know. I can't stay up watching Ironsides reruns many more nights. Have pity on a fellow student and explain the answer to me. Why Ozzy Osborne?

Dear Night Students,

Traditionally you have largely been a forgotten group, but this year the S.G.A. and the Student Union are making an effort to correct this situation. We realize our obligation to provide programs, facilitate, and otherwise ensure that you have the opportunity to fully participate in college life. In an effort to do this we held a reception for you on September 25th and 26th, from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. At the reception entertainment and refreshments were provided.

Although the turnout was light, we felt that we became more aware of some of your needs and concerns. We would like to take this opportunity to thank those of you who took time out of your busy schedules to attend and air your views. Even though we received valuable information from you on this one occasion, we feel that much more dialogue is needed. Therefore, we will be hosting more receptions in the near future.

In the meantime, if you wish to let us know how you feel, offer suggestions, or get involved, you may do so by either phoning us (S.G.A. 429-2976, Student Union 429-2979) or stopping by our offices located on the second floor of the Student Center (next to the office of Student Development). Remember we are here to serve you.

Fall Schedule of events is complete

The Fall schedule of entertainment and cultural events at Kennesaw College looks to be very interesting and diverse. Several committees, sponsored by the Kennesaw College Union, have worked very hard this summer to assure a wide array of entertaining activities.

David Watkins

On October 16, some of Kennesaw College's own musicians, the Kim Williams Quartet, will perform Jazz tunes for the listening audience.

On October 23, Sue Williams, a mezzo soprano, will perform in the music building at 8:00pm.

October 27, the Cobb Civic Center will house the Cobb Community Symphony directed by Betty Shipman Bennett. The performance will begin at 8:00pm.

On October 30, tenor, James Russell and pianist, John G. Schaeffer will be guest performers in the Recital Hall at the music building. This event begins at 8:00pm.

The Entertainment Committee has organized two other novelty acts that will be presented this quarter.

On October 30, a "Skate Escape" will be held on campus, from 9:00a.m.-2:00p.m. This is for all of you who love to skate.

On November 6, "Antique Images" will be in the South Alcove of the Student Center. This troop of talented photographers will be available to make your picture in costumes from the 18th and 19th centuries.

"Friday Night at the Movies" is presented to us by the Cinematic Arts Committee. Selected movies will be shown at regular hours on the different dates announced. Movies will be shown at 11:00am, 2:00pm, 7:30pm, and 9:56pm. The 7:30pm showings are offered as kiddie matinees for the children of students. Free cola and popcorn will be available for the young ones. The movies will be shown in the Student Activities Room, upstairs in the Student Center.

The Cultural Affairs Committee at Kennesaw College organizes the presentations offered by the Musical Art Series. This Fall Quarter the Series has planned 12 events of interest.

November 6 and 8, Oral Moses will be directing Kennesaw College students in a performance of favorite Broadway tunes. This will happen in the Recital Hall of the music building at 8:00pm.

November 13, the KC Chamber Ensemble directed by Steven Everett and Harold Sharp, will perform at 8:00pm in the Recital Hall in the music building.

On November 15, the KC Collegiate Musical, directed by Steven Everett and Donald Forrester will also be in the Recital Hall.

On November 27, the KC Concert and Jazz Bands will perform under the direction of Harold Sharp. The concert will be in the Recital Hall and begins at 8:00pm.

On November 29, the KC Choral and Chamber choir will perform under the direction of Donald Forrester at 8:00pm, also in the Recital Hall.

On December 15, the Musical Art Series will present their final performance of the quarter with a concert by the Cobb Community Symphony, under the direction of Betty Shipman Bennett. This concert will be held at the Cobb Civic Center at 8:00pm.

The Chautauqua Committee will feature Jeff Greenfield and Richard Reeves debating, "The Media Impact on Presidential Elections", on October 18 at 9:00am, in the Kennesaw College Gymnasium. Mr. Greenfield is an analyst for ABC News, a syndicated columnist, and author of Real Campaign, about the 1980 elections. Mr. Reeves is a political columnist covering 1984 elections for "The New York Times Magazine" and chief correspondent for Frontline on PBS.

The KC Union, Forum Committee and the Pre-law club are hosting an old-fashioned political rally on October 23. They rally will involve Cobb County Candidates who will address issues of public concern. This event will take place in the quadrangle in front of the library from 6:00pm-9:30pm.

A Fall Quarter schedule of events that is this complete should involve almost any student on campus. Get involved and enjoy the fun.

Lahnn and Loftin perform synthesized music

by Edilberto Cuellar

On October 4 the duo of J. K. Loftin and Charles Lahnn performed in the student center. They are two guitarists who accompanied themselves with synthesizers and computers. They use synthesizers that have computerized minds. Therefore, the synthesizers are able to record and repeat any sound once the sound is being recorded.

Lahnn explained that they connect the synthesizers into an interface. At the same time, the interface is connected with the computer. The interface contains the programs that allow the music to run into the computer and back to the synthesizers. They do not have to program the computers because programs for this specific tack are available in the market.

Lahnn and Loftin use two computers, one for each player. In addition, they have a computerized drum machine. The drum machine can control when a song starts or finishes. It controls tempo and it synchronizes all of the rhythms of the different synthesizers and computers. The computers control the entire production of sounds and chords.

Before the performance began, the student center's first floor was full of students. People were gathering in the balcony and all the tables were occupied. All kind of speculations were heard about what kind of music was going to be played.

At 10:10 a.m. J. K. Loftin introduced himself and his partner. The music began with a soft rock ballad. It had its sparkling places, however the sound system had too much reverberation and it was set too loud.

The second song had a nice chorus. The computerized drum machine had a good beat and it made the song very smooth. The sound system was set better, however, the students did not show much enthusiasm.

The next song had a boogie woogie beat. It also began to warm up the students who were as cold as ice when the performance started. The song had pretty good lead guitar solos.

The fourth song had a "BEE GEES" sound. It was an easy, soft going song with a nice melody and chorus. It was a really mellow tune, especially for lovers. However, response from the students was lacking.

The fifth song had a driving beat, great chorus and a nice rhythm. This was a good song to get people in motion. The voices of Loftin and Lahnn resembled those of Simon and Gartunkle. The following song was an interpretation of a song by Crosby, Stills, Young and Nash: The song passed by without impressing many.

The next song was an arrangement of a David Bosie song. The use of the drum machine made the song quite pretty. The vocals were good and the lead guitar solos were impressive.

The last song started with interesting sound effects produced by the synthesizers. They played the theme song from the movie "Ghost Busters." It had good vocals and a nice chorus. This was the best song of all. It is a pity that most people had already left.

This was the second performance by Lahnn and Loftin at KC. They have improved their sound since their first visit. I only wish they had played more original songs.

Kennesaw College

The Forum Committee and Pre-Law Club will present "An Old-Fashioned Political Rally" on Oct. 23 at 6:00 p.m. on the campus quadrangle in front of Old Library.

The candidates for offices in Cobb County were invited to participate in the rally. The offices which are involved are Commissioner, Probate Court Judge, Sheriff, Solicitor General, Tax Commissioner, State Court Clerk, Superior Court Clerk, County Surveyor, County Commission Chairman, District Attorney, and three School Board Posts. Media Impact of President Election

The Chautauqua Committee selects and presents lecturers that contribute to the service area or college community concerning local, state, national, or global issues or ideas. The forthcoming debate by Mr. Jeff Greenfield and Mr. Richard Reeves on "The Media Impact on Presidential Elections" certainly fulfills our purpose.

Mr. Jeff Greenfield achieved

national prominence in the late 1970's for his wry and penetrating commentaries on politics and the media for CBS News. A native New Yorker, Mr. Greenfield graduated from the University of Wisconsin and Yale Law School. He worked as a legislative aide for Senator Robert Kennedy and as chief speechwriter for New York Mayor John Lindsay. Mr. Greenfield is the author of six books including Playing to Win: An Insider's Guide to Politics and the National Lampoon's Book of Books. His most recent book, The Real Campaign, is an analysis of the role of the media in the 1980 elections. Mr. Greenfield is presently contributing analyst for ABC News. His twice weekly column on politics appears in thirty-five newspapers across the nation.

Mr. Richard Reeves is one of the nation's top political columnists. Educated as a mechanical engineer, Mr. Reeves entered journalism in 1962 by founding his own weekly newspaper, The Free Press, in Phillipsburg, New Jersey. Within four years he was a correspondent for The New Yorker magazine, Harper's, the Washington Monthly, and Esquire. His television career includes work as a political correspondent, talk show host, and as a writer and reporter for a series of documentaries. In his fifth and most recent book, The American Journey: Traveling with Tocqueville in Search of Democracy in America, Mr.

Reeves retraced the steps of the great French writer. Mr. Reeves' twice weekly political column appears in more than 170 newspapers nationwide.

This presentation is timely given the fact that Election '84 is almost upon us. In addition, our debate will fall between two scheduled presidential debates. "We have reached a critical point in the election process," according to Dr. Helen Ridley, "in that students and the community will have the opportunity to get an overview of the campaign as it heads down the final stretch." Dr. Joseph Silver, the faculty advisor for the Chautauqua Committee added, "This presentation is specifically very good for the college community because the media impact upon politics is so significant that many people look to the media to make political decisions for them."

Four panel delegates have been chosen by the Chautauqua Committee to question Mr. Greenfield and Mr. Reeves. They include Dr. Helen Ridley, Associate Professor of Political Science, who is teaching the "Election '84" class. Dr. Ridley will serve as the group moderator. Mr. Bill Nigut, of WSB-TV News, will also be present. He is covering the Mondale campaign and covered the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco earlier this year. Two political science students have also been selected to sit on the panel. Ms. Lynn Hillhouse, Vice-Chairperson of the Student Union, and Mr. Mike McBurnett, Vice-Chairperson of the Chautauqua Committee.

This is one in a series of programs the Chautauqua Committee has offered and is planning to offer. We feel fortunate to offer stimulating, quality programs to the school and community and we certainly hope you will join us THURSDAY, OCTOBER 18, at 9 a.m. in the Gym for the debate.

Roles of women changing

The role of women in the public has changed remarkably in the past few years, as women have begun to fill crucial roles in the political sphere. While doing so, women have continued to be a potent force in volunteer activities which have benefited the community in various ways.

Join us for an informative mini-conference which will examine the current status of women in various areas of public life through addressing such questions as:

- What will the 1984 elections mean for the status of women?
- What opportunities for service to the public exist in Cobb County and surrounding areas?
- What impact are metro area women having in education, the media, religion and public issues?

by Pat Nebergall

A convenient, well equipped bookstore can be hard to find these days. This is a serious matter for the student who wants to polish up on certain areas that he may be studying or the avid reader who wants more than just a few books to select from. It seems that many problems exist when looking for a really nice bookstore.

Many of our college students are not from local high schools, but from other counties, states and countries. Also, bookstores in the Cobb County area and the neighboring counties are so sparse that even local students can have difficulty in locating a store. There are also problems in selecting a bookstore which suits the needs, selections or bargains a particular student would desire. In an attempt to rectify these issues, I set out on a county wide survey of the bookstores closest to Kennesaw College:

Little Professors Book Store, located in Marietta Square, definitely has a lot going for college students. Even the name implies that it is geared for students. It has a warm, friendly atmosphere with the owners willing to assist all customers. Though it has a small selection of books it is orderly and neat. It is not for hard cover book lovers; most of the store contains strictly paperbacks, which are easier to afford. There are plenty of cliff notes along with a title list and author list and it carries most literature such as Shakespeare, Plato, and Homer, and many others. For those not in stock, one could order by a computer.

The most interesting aspect of this bookstore was the great selection of magazines from other parts of the world. There were French magazines written in French, German magazines written in German along with British magazines and sometimes Italian ones. Surprisingly enough, according to the owners, these magazines are in constant demand.

When asked about how they tried to help students, one owner replied that they try to make sure their store has the latest selections of books for students and keep up with best sellers.

Waldenbooks, which can be found in Cumberland Mall on Highway 41, is in a sense, a handy man's bookstore. It is large and efficient with many selections to choose from. There were few reference sections and college aids. However, it was priced slightly higher than Little Professor's. There were plenty of clerks available for those who had questions. These clerks were very willing to take computer orders for whatever they did not have on the shelf.

The most significant thing about Waldenbook's were the sections that included self improvement and home improvement. There was less available on computers, poetry, drama and philosophy than in previous stores. More emphasis was put on health, med-care, child care, marriage, sex, cooking, sewing, collectibles, crafts, and auto care.

B. Daltons, another bookstore in Cumberland Mall, is the most disorganized and crowded of the three, resembling more of an Egyptian market than a bookstore. It is priced about the same as Waldenbook's with many of the same selections. B. Dalton's is a very fast paced bookstore with many selections. Books on computers, current affairs, History, Psychology, Drama, Poetry, can all be found in B. Dalton's. There are six reference sections that students can look through.

B. Dalton's gives the impression that, although they carry most of the college material, it is more of a businessman's store than anything else.

The last bookstore, located in Cobb Center on S. Cobb Drive, would be the least appealing for a college student. There were many categories of books, yet there seemed to be a lack of college type material. It was centered more along the lines of do-it-yourself and self-improvement. Prices were basically the same as Waldenbooks and B. Dalton's. There were no assistants or clerks to help with the customers, and it is the only bookstore that had difficulty in ordering books for customers.

Many other interesting categories could be found in each bookstore. Topics such as travel, local interest and humor were also covered at these locations.

Hopefully this survey and evaluation will help you with picking a bookstore that suits the needs of you, the student.

Phi Alpha Theta interested in You

Interested in History? Then take a look at PHI ALPHA THETA because we are interested in you. PHI ALPHA THETA is the International Honor society in History for those who love History.

PHI ALPHA THETA is the proud host of guest speakers such as Kennesaw College's own Dr. Roach, and activities such as field trips to local historical points of interest. Our last field trip was to Madison, Georgia, for a tour of historical homes.

This coming year promises to be one full of excitement. There are so many local historical landmarks that are very interesting and we are looking forward to exploring and learning more about them together. We are planning a field trip to the local Indian Mounds near Cartersville this month on October 27, watch for announcements.

We are excited about PHI ALPHA THETA and this coming year at Kennesaw. Please join us! As the preamble of our constitution states: "This chapter shall be dedicated to the promotion of historical scholarship, the encouragement of fellowship, academic exchange between historians and students of history, and the stimulation of interest in the field of history among the student body."

To become a member of PHI ALPHA THETA, all you need is a love of history, a good record in overall academics and some courses in history.

If you have any questions or would like more information about PHI ALPHA THETA, please contact Dr. Howard Shealy of the History department. His office is in room 106 in the Humanities building, and his phone number is 429-2933.

Student Market grows

(CPS) --Thanks to the economic recover, the market for student interns seems to have reversed itself in the last few weeks.

A number of campuses around the country report businesses are offering more internships this fall, and that the campus cooperative education offices are having a hard time finding enough students to satisfy the demand.

"Placement is up this semester due to the turnaround in the economy," reports Keith Kirby, co-op ed director at Wichita State University. "For the first time, employers are calling us for students."

"We still have more students than positions," he declares, "but it's getting better." Kirby hopes to place 650 students this year, up from 520 a year ago.

"We register about 2000 students yearly," adds Marilyn Perry of Brigham Young's co-op education office. "Sometimes there are more students than openings. But, while we still do some looking for positions, more and more companies are coming to us with positions. And placements are definitely up."

The economic upswing also is providing an abundance of internships for North Texas State students, especially in "high tech" industries, says NTS program director Diane Altenloh.

"Jobs are booming in this area," she maintains. "And we're close enough to Dallas/Fort Worth that we can place our students there, too."

And Illinois State University reports a growing number of employers are recruiting students from cooperative education, then hiring them upon graduation.

"It's not guaranteed," explains Bill Kirk, engineering supervisor at Monsanto's East St. Louis, Ill., plant, which takes on "two or three" engineering students a semester. "But we've hired quite a number of them."

ISU's employer/student ratio "varies from day to day," says Dr. Marlyn Laurentz, head of the campus's program. "But we're maintaining a pretty solid balance."

Not all colleges, of course, are doing as well in placing students through cooperative education programs, which place students in career-related positions with companies and allow them to earn academic credit, often while getting a salary.

"In the last two semesters, the program has shown a decline," admits Lewis Hainlin of Drake University in Des Moines.

Hainlin attributes a 10-to-12 percent drop in the number of students at places to the loss of a federal grant.

"There are lots of positions in insurance, accounting, management and communications," he laments, "but it's hard to find positions for liberal and fine arts students."

New state regulations plus a drop in the number of paid positions has cut student participation in Miami-Dade Community College's program by five percent this semester.

"Florida mandates certain tests before students can enter their junior year," explains Dr. Roger Wadsworth, co-op ed director. "Students need to take more courses to pass the tests, so they don't want to pay for co-op ed credits."

Still, the college generally has more students apply "than we can find meaningful jobs for," Wadsworth notes. "And even with all our extra recruiting this semester, we came out with a five percent drop."

The relatively few programs lagging now and those that dropped during the recent recession have inspired the National Commission for Cooperative Education to attempt a campaign to improve them.

The commission plans a multi-million dollar media blitz to rejuvenate depressed programs and establish new ones, reports Dr. John Dromgoole, the commission's research director.

Dromgoole maintains co-op is growing, although the number of colleges with programs has leveled off last year at about 900 from a 1981 high of 1017.

Inactive programs removed from the commission's list caused the decrease, he claims.

About 175,000 students participate in co-op ed yearly, he estimates.

"The biggest problem is that about 80 percent of those students are enrolled in about 25 percent of the programs," he observes.

The commission hopes the ad campaign will double the number of "legitimate" participants by 1989.

While nationwide statistics for this year's co-op ed programs aren't out yet, a number of administrators believe the upswing already has begun.

Wichita State's Kirby thanks an emergence from "the depths of economic chaos" and his five-year-old program's "maturity" for the boom in internships.

Brigham Young's Perry notes her program has always fluctuated with the economy, and that a recent change in BYU's registration procedures also kept some students away.

Publications Editors Selected

Kennesaw College's student newspaper and yearbook will be more accessible to and representative of the students, said the publications' newly-selected editors.

Sara "Sissy" Bowen was selected editor of The Sentinel, while Cindi Moritz and Robin Gant were named co-editors of the 1985 Montage.

The selections were made last week by the Board of Student Publications, which also named two students as assistant editors of Share, the literary magazine.

The board still seeks an editor for Share. Interested persons may contact Cheryl Segal, Coordinator of Student Publications, in the Student Activities Office, 429-2980.

Bowen, a sophomore majoring in English, said after her selection, "I plan to make the paper as useful to the students as a college newspaper should be." In the past, she said, students had not been sure they had a newspaper that would listen to and accommodate their needs.

"It is a student publication run by students for students," she said.

Bowen said she hopes to accomplish her goals of better representation and accessibility by publishing on a biweekly (every other week) basis and by making the paper more consistent. It is believed that this is the first time since The Sentinel began publishing in 1966 that the paper has appeared so frequently.

Bowen also is offering, through the newspaper, a place where students can "voice a legitimate issue that deserves investigation."

Called "Sincerely Yours," the column will investigate and report on students' concerns that are brought to the newspaper's attention.

Bowen also plans to offer, in the future, free classified advertisements to students.

Also appointed to The Sentinel were: Curt KcKinney, managing Editor and Holly Murray and Pat Nevergall, as production managers. The Sentinel still seeks a business manager.

Students may submit ideas, articles, compliments and complaints to The Sentinel office or may reach Sentinel staff members at 429-2978.

The yearbook's theme for the upcoming issue, "We're all in this together," typifies the editors' hopes for the book.

"My main hope is to have a staff that will work together and show what Kennesaw is all about," said Moritz.

"We're hoping to get more school spirit, students that are proud of their school, that are going to work towards the betterment of the school. We're all in this together and so we need to work together," she said.

"We are building (in the staff) a genuine enthusiasm and desire to publish an above average yearbook," said Gant, who has had extensive graphics and yearbook experience.

Also appointed to the Montage were: David Martin, section editor for Clubs and Organizations; David Martin, section editor for Clubs and Organizations; and Michele March and Denise Marion, as co-section editors for sports.

Gant and the rest of the staff may be reached at 429-2977. Appointed as Appointed as assistant editors for Share were Jessica Nettles and Scott Reaver.

I.D.'s:

Don't leave home without them

New and returning students register for their classes at the beginning of each quarter, but many fail to have their student ID cards made or renewed.

Students must have a valid ID to cash or pay by check in the bookstore and to check out books and other materials from the library.

Miles Holcombe, a bookstore employee, has thus far turned away "50 or so" students wishing to use a check to pay for their textbooks of course they had neither an ID nor a class schedule stamped "paid." After the beginning of the quarter, students can no longer substitute a class schedule for their ID. Instead, they must go to Data Processing located in the Administration Annex and obtain written proof of their Social Security number.

The library is even stiffer than the bookstore in its ID policy. Marty Giles, associate librarian, said students (and faculty) always need to show their ID when checking out books. She added that the library does allow one exception: during the first three weeks of each quarter, students can use materials on reserve in the library without an ID. After this time period, however, students are required to show I.D.'s when checking anything out of the library.

ID's are made and stamped for renewal from class schedules stamped "paid" at the information booth in the student center.

in the student center on Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 12:00 - 2:00 and 5:00 - 8:00.
