S.G.A. Selects New President

Don Gray assumed the office of Vice President on December 10, 1971, after the resignation of John Collins was accepted by President Bill Wright. However, Bill Wright will not be attending K.J.C. this quarter, therefore, Don Gray will move into the vacancy of the president's office.

After speaking to Mr. Gray, he advised this reporter that the S.G.A. was undergoing a reorganizing program. Mr. Gray is now working with other students to establish standing advisory committees which will investigate complaints and suggestions and report to the S.G.A. meetings on their finds and recommend appropriate action. However, the committees will not have policy making power, only recommendations subject to approval by the S.G.A.

At the present time, the reorganization plan is subject to approval by the students. The proposed committees are: Executive Committee - Pam Southers, chairman; Statues Committee - Grady O'Brier, chairman; Entertainment Committee - Tom Fowler, chairman; Curriculum Committee; Financial Aid - Harry Whitehead, chairman; Rules and Regulations - Bud

Wilson, chairman; Advisory and Student Activities Committees to be elected at a later date. Don Gray says, "These committees will provide the Student Government with greater continuity, and they will provide better organization and control over the current issues facing the student body."

Don urges that all students attend the S.G.A. meetings or discuss with their Senators any particular suggestion that may be helpful to the reorganization of your Student Government. Don also wants to remind all students that they have an active vote in all Student Government meetings.

Save The Flint Need 1000 Names

By Nancy Rawls

The Recreation Club, aided by Dr. Hopper, their advisor, and abetted by Dr. Neville, tried to bring Kennesaw Jr. College together in a group effort to save the Flint River last quarter. As you all know, this river is the focal point of a battle between the Army Corps of Engineers and the Ecology lovers. The Army Corps wants to dam the river in three places in order to obtain power, better irrigation and some really swift swimming holes. They base their need to do this on a survey made ten years ago.

The Ecology lovers, as represented by our own Recreation Club, felt that the river is beautiful enough as it is and that the money could be better spent elsewhere. They based this feeling largely on more recent surveys done by other government branches which said the river area was better left untouched.

The Recreation Club attempted to get 1000 signatures on a petition to give to Governor Jimmy Carter. Various members went outside the school trying to raise interest wherever people gathered. However, at the end of the quarter they had not made their 1000 names.

Now it is an open responsibility. The club asks that anyone wishing to help save the river write to Governor Carter, Lieutenant Governor Maddox, or Speaker of the House George L. Smith saying that they feel the river should be made a state area and be left untouched by progress.

Is an article on evolution timely? Surely, all informed persons now accept the basic evolutionary observations of Charles Darwin. While it may be true that most persons believe in evolution, we might remember that there are a lot of uninformed persons and that the religious beliefs of many allow no room for anything other than a "special creation" theory. The famous "Monkey Trial" of John Scopes is not that far behind us. Several states have only recently removed anti-evolution laws from their codes. I have a relative who once informed me that anyone who believes in evolution also believes that Jesus Christ was a monkey as he hung

It's a New Day

By Dolores Grimes

Well, this is it, the beginning of a new quarter with a whole new outlook on school and schoolwork. Everyone has that new teacher they sort of dread facing every day or the P. E. class that manages to exercise all those new muscles the class last quarter missed. There are a few new faces, a few old ones missing, and many familiar ones returning from fall. Because this is a time of beginnings, the staff of the Sentinel would like to join with you in making a fresh start. We had many critics last quarter and will have many new critics this one, however, we continue to attempt to cover events and non-events in a manner acceptable to as many people as possible. Again this quarter, we would like to invite anyone who is interested in telling their point of view on anything to please come and talk to us. We always need new staff members and will welcome anyone who has anything to say and is willing to say it. If you don't want to go so far as to join the staff, at least write a letter to the editor and get your two cents worth in. Anyone with an article to submit, who wants to join the staff, or who just wants to rap with someone, please come by. Our offices are in the back corner of the Student Center and we try to keep someone in them at all times.

Failure to Communicate

by Barry Banks

At the present time, there are over 1,700 students attending Kennesaw Junior College. Many students have expressed the fact that they desire to have a voice on campus, however, they often run into a brick wall.

Some students striving for the betterment of themselves and the college, find their views and ideas do not count.

Listening to student leaders and 'prominent' students, you would form the opinion that the blame belongs to student indifference.

Most people would agree that as far as apathy is concerned, there is little that can be done about it. Surely, K.J.C. is far from unique in having a problem with an overabundance of indifferent students. There will always be those types everywhere.

So where is the problem?

The problem does not lie in student apathy, but in our lack of organization. It seems that many campus groups have failed to communicate with the students. It is very apparent that most students have no idea what is going on in any campus organization, including the S.G.A. Some so-called 'clubs' have yet to call a meeting. Most organizations that are alive appear to be nothing more than campus cliques.

Much of this can be straightened out if the separate organizations, such as Civitans, Mu Alpha Theta, B.S.U., Circle K., etc., have one of their officers submit a report of their activities and their group's consensus of opinions on important issues to the The Sentinel for publication. This way, at least we will all remain informed, and perhaps certain people will wake-up, become interested, and contribute something worthwhile.

As it now stands, there is a lack of communication between student clubs, organizations, and the student body which only promotes apathy. This trend appears to get worse each quarter. Maybe if "new blood" were given the chance, we would see better involvement and some new ideas.

Mr. Editor,

I'm writing as a response to the articles of Mrs. Joyce Bolton.

I am a personal friend of Mrs. Bolton and do know that Christ is in her life and that makes her a beautiful person, maybe a bit misdirected at times.

I too am a Christian, and I too disagree with Superstar, for to me it does seem to lower Christ to just a mortal being. But I am not writing to discredit Superstar.

You see Christ came loving, not condemning those who did not know him.

Paul in his first letter to the Corinthians the 5th Chapter, verses 12-13 says and I quote:

"What right have I to judge outsiders, but those who call themselves brothers are different, for Christ judges and will judge outsiders."

Mrs. Bolton, as Christ came loving, I ask if you might follow his example. Christ hated sin, but loved the sinner.

The Holy Spirit convicts of sin, I don't think you were appointed to show those sins to the students of Kennesaw.

God loves each and every reader and as a Christian I do too.

Mr. Fay,

The idea of rock music aiding the drug culture is not one I support with mere emotional sentiment. With all due respect, sir, I feel that the evidence against rock far outweighs any evidence for it. I believe there is sufficient evidence to show that the songs reveal the personal philosophies of the performers, and that they not only support drugs through song content, but also advocate drug abuse openly in public interviews. At one time rock may have been a reflection of our society, but I believe it has now become a cause of prolonged and intensified social, spiritual and moral unrest.

The intention of these articles is to alert people, especially Christians, to the spiritual and psychological dangers of ALL rock music, including the so-called "Jesus" rock, and for clarity I must explain that not all rock songs are included, only the form of rock itself. Nevertheless, the majority of current hits remain under indictment.

Of a certainty I feel that rock has not helped our society in any way. In the October (1971) issue of Life, Albert Goldman captures a sad picture of this rock orientated youth culture: "The rock culture has become a drug culture. Convinced that everything is a fraud, feasting on films that feed their paranoia, feeling helpless and betrayed, huddled together, thousands of ordinary kids are set up for the pusher. So many of these kids seem indifferent to life. They shuffle around in drab, raggedy, dead men's clothes... depressed and apathetic, reckless about dropping, popping or smoking anything that promotes a momentary high.

"Behind all that loose living... in a jungle of drugs, sex and violence, every one of them is running scared," says Dr. J. Harold Smith. "The sum of all this was written on a picture drawn by a nineteen-year-old by showing a lake with a single hand protruding up through the water with the inscription 'Someone help me; someone help me!' Then he made a tape telling his family good-bye." It ends with the haunting and too often repeated sound of a single gun shot.

It is indeed unfortunate that our society would defend rock, drugs, public vulgarity, free sex and alcohol, but who has the audacity to take a stand for Jesus? He is the ONLY answer.

Pick it Up

by Barry Banks

Keeping the campus clean has always been a difficult task; yet it is one that must be done if K.J.C. is to remain the beautiful campus that it is.

The maintenance department alone cannot keep up with the piles of trash and litter that accumulates on the streets and grounds of the college. That includes the mess that is always left in student services. There have been clean-ups by a few responsible students, but even this has not been enough.

It is going to take the concerned involvement of the entire student body to eliminate the trash by not putting it down. It takes very little effort to find a trash can. Use them and eliminate a really bad problem. It only takes a little self pride to clean your own mess.

An Economic Suggestion

By George Morris

In order to properly understand Nixon's WAGE-PRICE FREEZE, one must think of his country as a business in direct competition with other businesses, such as Japan and Germany. In the past, our business machine has been able to manufacture higher quality goods at lower prices. This has enabled the United States to ship goods to other countries in exchange for their currency. The demand for goods was greater, thereby creating more jobs and prosperity. We exchanged the foreign currency for gold, and became richer in the process.

Businessmen suffer from the current freeze because of regulated prices. They have learned new terms, such as "excess profit." Most businessmen are cooperating with the system, because they realize that to fight it would be to put the economic noose around their own necks.

On the other hand, LABOR seems quite unwilling to accept the freeze. Strikes run rampant throughout the country even though union labor is quite well paid.

I wonder if this would be the situation if these men stopped to think about what is actually happening. As the wages are raised, up shoot the prices. As the prices go higher, the foreign purchaser looks to other companies (Japan being the best example) for the same item at a lower price. Uncle Sam loses his international business, the demand grows smaller, and the worker loses his job.

Our company (the U.S.) has enjoyed a common market throughout the states with no tariffs or duties to cause the price to rise. With the coming of the EUROPEAN COMMON MARKET and the newly-formed UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC, our advantage has been drastically reduced. We can be sure to expect other organizations to arise as the advantage of the "common market" is discovered. Within the next few years, we should see such organizations as the ALLIED AFRICAN NATIONS or the FAR EASTERN TRADE ORGANIZATION arise.

This new aspect of world trade creates a situation that is good, in that it divides the world into a few large countries instead of many small ones. Theoretically, this will eventually evolve into one large organization that is governed by the law of "supply and demand." The United States will be forced to accept a lower standard of living as well as a lower position in world affairs, unless drastic measures are taken.

I not only support old TRICKY DICK'S much needed economic policy, but I submit another proposition to be put into effect in place of PHASE II.

I suggest that all wages and prices be cut in half. This, of course, would be accompanied by bank accounts being halved as well as the balance of loans already out. In short, all finances and financial transactions would be halved.

This would put our company in a very favorable position and it would allow us to dissolve such diplomatically damaging measures as the ten percent import tax. At the same time, the financial situation at home would remain roughly the same. A catch to this would be that cash money would be doubled in value. For instance, if you had two dollars in your wallet, you would suddenly discover that you had four.

All preparations for the "half the finances" measure would have to be made under TOP SECRET security. The announcement would have to be made to everyone at the same time in order to prevent people from withdrawing their savings, thereby doubling its value.

The only other catch to this plan would be that the foreign countries holding United States currency would be able to purchase twice as much as before. However, this would encourage them to trade this currency for United States goods instead of gold. The result would be an inward flow of United States dollars and an outward flow of United States goods. This would stimulate our economy, create prosperity, and at the same time balance our payments deficit.

We can soon expect other companies to create wage-price controls in order to compete with us. We could also expect them to follow our "half the finances" measure. If this proved to be the case then we would eventually have to dream up another measure; BUT ... THAT'S CAPITALISM.

the universe while other species are basically impure (even obscene) beings whose only value is measured in terms of their exploitability by man. This concept is obvious in much of our literature and philosophy and is one of the underlying causes of the current ecological crises. Examples: "And God said, 'Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.'" I say, "What a dummy is man! How lacking in reason! How infinite in his conceit and arrogance! The paradox of animals!" There is no scientifically acceptable reason to believe that man has a special exemption from the Law of Evolution (notice "Law" instead of

SPIRITUAL CALL

Hare Krishna

By Linda Spears

*Hare Krishna Hare Krishna
Krishna Krishna Hare Hare
Hare Rama Hare Rama
Rama Rama Hare Hare*

The International Society for Krishna Consciousness promises that you will never get tired of chanting these words. The booklet entitled "On Chanting Hare Krishna" by his Divine Grace - A.C. Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada tells us that, "The word Hara is the form of addressing the energy of the Lord, and the words Krsna and Rama are forms of addressing the Lord Himself." He goes on to say, "Chanting is a spiritual call for the Lord and His energy."

Recently, a group from Atlanta, representative of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness, gave a demonstration in the Private Dining Room in the Student Center. Their chanting and dancing in the heavily incensed room engrossed the students who attended. I think what impressed me - and most of the people I talked to afterwards - was their sincerity and their lack of aggressive, Come be saved, Brother! tactics. The speaker, Kirtananda Swami, a gentle soft-spoken man, told the listeners - you can't take it with you and once mankind overcomes materialism in this life, peace will prevail.

The group's appearance on K.J.C.'s campus was enjoyed by most people who cared enough to come and experience someone else's world. They may seem to be, by appearance alone, as dogmatic as any other religion; however, they just don't come across that way. They appear to be "peace" and "happiness" oriented and that is what the world needs more of NOW.

"Theory" ... a personal opinion. In 1859, Charles Darwin simply said that variation and over-reproduction are universal phenomena and that subsequent competition would result in differential reproduction of the variants. This statement is essentially an unchanged summary of Darwinism.

Fossil human and anthropoid remains have been known since 1856. Recent African finds by Raymond Dart, Robert Broom, and Louis and Mary Leakey have indicated that one of the early intermediates between man and non-man was a creature names Australopithecus ("southern ape"). For those easily shocked by the thought of ape forefathers, the possibility of an australopithecine ancestor is positively revolting because of the Romantic Fallacy. Not from the monkey clowns of zoos and carnivals are we descended, but from highly efficient killer apes who well understood the use of weapons on their prey and on their own kind. Australopithecus and some of his relatives were upright, medium-brained creatures who were predatory meat-eaters ... a much more efficient life style than vegetarianism (less time has to be spent at food gathering because meat is more energy-concentrated). Contemporary authors such as Robert Ardrey (The Territorial Imperative, African Genesis) and Desmond Morris (The Naked Ape, The Human Zoo) have shocked their readers with a gloomy, hopeless interpretation of man's nature as a beast without much free will and in whom homicidal violence is an instinct which cannot be completely suppressed. Ardrey refers to mankind as "Cain's Children."

"The Paradox of Animals!" Most anthropologists would not fully agree with the pessimism of Ardrey and Morris. Man seems to be a combination of good and evil, at one moment bestial and cruel and, at the next, angelic and self-sacrificing. Fossil evidence also indicates that our murderous ancestors entombed their dead with care and reverence so that their message to us comes in loud and clear across two million years ... "I too was human. I too grieved for my dead comrades. I too was sinner and saint."

CAMPUS CO-ED

Janet Lowe's life has taken a sudden and very transitional change of direction. Last March, she was selected to be one of the Channel 11 girls. Since then she has been pursuing a very active modeling career while still attending KJC. Most students would probably remember seeing her on television as hostess to the morning movie shown on Channel 11 every weekday.

In contrast, her interests are devoted to campus activities. Twice a week, she participates in the girl's intramural volleyball games. However, at first Janet did not really care for KJC but later learned to like the college. "There are really a great bunch of people going here and the teachers are really concerned with student progress," she told us.

Being very individualistic, Janet is concerned with people being themselves and not putting on a front in order to conform to what everyone wants. "I want people to be themselves and to do what they know is right." Janet, as anyone can see, feels thoroughly satisfied that KJC can offer her many possibilities.

Detour: Rock Ahead

By Joyce Bolton

Music is the universal language. But like any language, it can be beautiful and soothing, or it can be vulgar and debasing. "Music," states Dr. Howard Hauson of the Eastman School of Music, "has the power for evil as well as good." Unfortunately, the themes of most rock songs, serve one purpose: to sidetrack and preoccupy the listener, and thus block out the message of salvation through the atonement of Christ.

One survey showed that young people spend four and a half hours a day listening to rock. And just how many hours a day do they spend studying the Word of God? Most non-Christians have never studied the Bible, but still they reject it and scorn anyone who has read it and does believe what it says. That's scholarly — to reject something you've never even read? I dare say most people who accept the theory of evolution have not examined its contents, but "science" must not be questioned — another oddity of scholarship.

And what about the Christians who waste God's time absorbing Satan's distraction? "Take no part in the worthless pleasures of evil and darkness, but instead, rebuke and expose them. See that you walk circumspectly . . . Redeeming the time" (Eph. 5). "Whatsoever things are pure . . . lovely . . . of good reports, if there be any virtue . . . any praise, think on these things" (Phil. 4). Christians, Jesus commands you to bring into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ," and you'll never comply as long as Satan's distractions binds you.

More Christians jump to the defense of rock than to the defense of Christ. To stand for Jesus on a college campus entails scorn and mockery from one's peers, and that is hard to bear. K.J.C. has enough Christians to bring about an old-time revival for Jesus. But you must be free from the clutches of rock music yourself before you can defeat Satan and expose his greatest weapon against youth.

I challenge you to show me one rock song that shows honor and reverence for Christ. Show me some way in which rock has assisted in favorable moral and social reforms. Let me see just one instance where rock has served to promote peace and justice. Rock asks questions, but gives no answers because it has none. Rock presents problems, but offers no solutions because it has none.

But Jesus does!

'Fanny' Review

By Linda Spears

"Fanny" is an all-girl rock group that will surprise you. On November 14, some friends and I went to the Sports Arena expecting to hear some good music from "Fanny's" back up bands — Hydra, Orpheum Circuit, and Phat Max. We didn't expect much from "Fanny." We didn't even know if they played their own instruments. Most of you have heard "Fanny's" record "Charity Ball" and may or may not like it; but don't judge the group by that song. On the whole, their vocalizing in concert doesn't sound the same as it sounds in "Charity Ball."

For those of you who enjoy watching a group get into their music, these four girls played fantastically, so much so, that they had the audience on their feet when they began their final selection. The preceding groups were good but they didn't get the reaction that "Fanny" did. A lot of their attraction comes from the very fact that they are all girls. Nevertheless, most of the people I talked to after the concert were really impressed with the talent these girls displayed. They played as hard as I've ever seen a group play. In true concert style they were called back for encores.

It's different to see girls playing such good rock music. The group had been playing motown music for five years up until their recent switch to rock, and the motown sound can still be slightly detected in some songs. Incidentally, a lot of the songs that they play are their own material written mostly by the bass player.

"Fanny" is an exciting rock group with a novelty that will continue to set them apart until more women get into rock music entertaining. Don't be surprised if the rock industry starts to see a rush of all-girl rock bands as "Fanny" is definitely inspiring.

"Fanny" was a hit at the Sports Arena and they will be back in Atlanta in February. So if you'd like to see and hear and feel something totally different — go see "Fanny."

Amboy Dukes Concert: Rain Sets Mood...

By Jimmy Walraven

Most of the people who know, or pretend to know, about rock music can tell you who Ted Nugent is. Ted Nugent is the lead guitarist and head firebrand for a loosely-knit clan of people who come to play for a short time with a band called the Amboy Dukes, and then go. The reason they go is simple; Ted Nugent fires a lot of people. Still, though, it's Nugent's band, and he's got the right to fire its members, especially since Nugent is a pretty fine guitarist, and probably rates a few points on account of that.

About four years ago, the Amboy Dukes were a pretty impressive band. They came to Atlanta and played a concert on the same bill with Jimi Hendrix, and they put up such a tremendous burst of hyperthyroid noise, fine musicianship, and dazzling showmanship that they practically blew Hendrix off the stage. They were that good. They released a single, "Journey to the Center of Your Mind," and followed it up with an album of the same name, and they made a lot of money.

But Ted Nugent has fired a lot of people since then; not a trace of the original group remains except, of course, Ted Nugent. The Amboy Dukes played at Kennesaw Junior College on December 2. The Student Government Association, fresh off an abortive attempt to bring Buddy Miles here for a fall concert, made a heroic, last-ditch effort to schedule a show with a name group, and managed to sign the Amboy Dukes for a concert to be held during the last week of school before finals. It was easy; the Amboy Dukes came surprisingly cheap.

The show went on at 7:30 Thursday night. It was raining pretty badly, and the concert had been rather poorly advertised, due to a painful lack of time, and the crowd was sparse. Only a couple of hundred or so people showed up, together with a security guard decked out in a wet raincoat, whose job apparently consisted of wandering around the audience and telling people to put out cigarettes. And, of course, the Amboy Dukes were there; Ted Nugent, past glory, and all.

Round one. Brother Bait, a local band, takes the stage and plays a fairly entertaining set. Their show is short, to the point and worth hearing, because Brother Bait is a good band. Round two. Now it's the Amboy Dukes turn. The equipment boys haul in stacks and stacks of Fender and Acoustic amps and speakers. Real high-powered stuff, you know. Loud. Ted Nugent, resplendent in black tights and shirt with gold trim, hops onstage and begins to tune his Gibson. He never stops tuning it for an hour and a half. The band begins to play a sort of senseless gibberish, not a real song, full of aimless noise and useless guitar noodling. Fifteen minutes later the audience is just a trifle edgy, and the band bumbles on. Everyone wonders just when they're going to begin playing. Nugent is still tuning. The bass player breaks a string and wanders offstage. The rest of the band doesn't seem to miss him. People in the audience begin to leave.

One thing is beginning to be clear; that the members of the band, individually, are good. But together, it just ain't clicking. The security cop is still making his rounds, but there are fewer people to check. The bass player returns with a different guitar, a Fender. It doesn't help. The band breaks into "Scottish Tea" for a moment, and some ears perk up. It sounds good.

But the song slowly disintegrates into electronic sludge. The drummer plays a Drum Solo. The bass player does a Bass Solo. Ted Nugent, still tuning that Gibson, screams into the microphone for a while. The lead singer, complete with purse and harmonica, comes onstage, sings, plays the harmonica, lays down a few dirty remarks to the audience, finds out that the audience ain't gonna clap their hands, and leaves. Smart guy. He knew when to quit. Half the audience is now gone.

Finally the whole thing falters, and stops. Some guy comes onstage and explains that the band was lousy, and tells why. Few people in the audience care why, and the survivors are already piling out of the door into the rain. The gym empties very quickly. Ted Nugent, an overcoat draped over that classy black outfit, walks through the crowd to a waiting car. He looks cold, wet, and a little scared. Nobody speaks to him.

Yeah, I guess that sort of thing can sure get you down.

Humanities Cultural Affairs

A widely ranging and greatly varied program of events for students, faculty, and staff members of Kennesaw Junior College has been arranged for Winter Quarter by the Cultural Affairs Committee of the Humanities Division.

The series will get underway on January 6 with a film entitled "Visit to Picasso," to be shown, as will all the films except the major entertainment ones, at noon in Room 202 of the Humanities Building.

Concerning the special lecture series, Gary M. Fox, chairman of the committee, declared, "We hope this will prove to be one of the most stimulating and informative ever presented. We have made a concerted effort to involve the entire campus as far as interests are concerned — not only with the lecturers but with the two film series."

Ralph Stephens, director of the University of Georgia Press, in Athens, will lead off the lecture series on January 20. He has explained his purpose as not to instruct, "but basically to entertain and help foster an interest in and appreciation of poetry."

Events to be presented later in the quarter but for which dates have not been set — and which are open to the public, include a slide lecture on Africa by Mrs. Brenda Smith of the HEAP faculty; a dramatic reading of Benet's John Brown's Body; a choral presentation from West Georgia College in Carrollton, and an explanation of textile engineering by Maurice Halper, of Southern Technical Institute.

The major film series, which is restricted to campus personnel, begins on December 14 with "The Letter," based on a Maugham short story and starring Bette Davis; "All the King's Men," based on Robert Penn Warren's novel and starring Broderick Crawford, on February 11; and on February 24, "The Barbershop," with W.C. Fields. A date for a Martin Luther King documentary has not yet been set. The first two films will be shown at 8 p.m. rather than noon, but all in Room 202 of the Humanities Building.

Other films for the quarter include the following:

"Poetry: Allen Ginsberg and Lawrence Ferlinghetti," on January 11; "The Spirit of Rome," January 18; "Jazz of Dave Brubeck," January 27; "Duro Lapido" (African drama), February 3; "Writers: Science Fiction," February 15; "John Burton" (glasswork artistry), February 17, and finally on February 22, "Chaucer's England: Pardoner's Tale."

Veneral Disease: Its Symptoms

ATLANTA, Ga. — Atlanta, known as a mecca for singles and the young set, has also gained national recognition by topping other U. S. cities with the highest incidence of gonorrhea and the second highest rate of syphilis. Such a dubious claim to fame strongly suggests that Atlanta has a serious health problem.

Venereal disease or VD is caught at the time of intimate physical contact with an infected person. The damage done by syphilis may develop as insanity, paralysis, crippling, blindness, deafness and even death. Pregnant women may deliver still-born or deformed children. Gonorrhea, left untreated, can result in arthritis, sterility, heart problems or pelvic disorders.

With syphilis the early signs and symptoms may go unnoticed, but the first sign of infection is a single painless sore. From two to six months after infection secondary signs may appear as a rash, sores in the mouth, loss of hair or sore throat. These first two stages are critical because they soon disappear without medical treatment.

Gonorrhea's shorter incubation period allows fast spread of the infection to others while the carrier's own infection progresses into serious complications. A few days after infection, the first symptom in the male is usually a burning pain when urinating accompanied by a discharge. The female may notice no discomfort at all. While a simple smear test can confirm suspicions of gonorrhea in the male, more complicated laboratory analysis is required for the woman. An estimated nine out of every 10 women with gonorrhea are unaware of their infection, according to the American Social Health Association. However, when treated early with proper medication, gonorrhea and syphilis can be completely cured.

If you know or suspect you have VD, help is available. In the metro Atlanta area, public health clinics will perform the tests and provide any necessary treatment confidentially and at no cost. In the state of Georgia persons over 12 years old do not need their parents consent to obtain this free treatment.

The Fulton County Health Department is open from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. The DeKalb County Health Department, which provides VD treatment facilities for DeKalb, Gwinnett, Rockdale, Fayette, Clayton and Henry counties, is open Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., and Thursday, 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

The Cobb County Health Department's hours are from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. The Community Crisis Center at 1013 Peachtree St., on the strip, is open Monday, Wednesday and Thursday from 8 p.m. until everyone is seen. No appointment is necessary; however, county health clinics require proof of residence in the county when medical treatment is requested. # Ecology Scene

Senator Gale McGee (D-Wyoming) has introduced a bill in Congress which would provide for a two-year moratorium and an in-depth study of the problem of clearcutting in national forests. The bill, S.1592, asks for $2.5 million to fund the study.

Clearcutting is a method of logging by which all the trees in an area, usually 1,000 to 3,000 acres, are cut. Environmentalists oppose clearcutting because they say it seriously upsets the ecology as well as the aesthetics of the national forests. The Forest Service promotes the logging method because they claim it makes higher populations of game species available. At stake is 96,870,600 acres of federally-owned commercial forest.

The controversy came into sharp focus after the issuance of the "Bolte Report" in November, 1970. The report was requested by Senator Lee Metcalf (D-Montana) after he received numerous complaints concerning clearcutting in the Bitterroot National Forest in Montana. The committee, formed from members of the University of Montana faculty, found the policies and practices of the Forest Service seriously lacking at Bitterroot and recommended that clearcutting be suspended.

In the October, 1970 issue of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, Yale Professor of Forest Ecology, Dr. F. Herbert Bormann and President-elect Gene E. Likens of the Ecological Society of America published a report called "The Nutrient Cycles of an Ecosystem" in cooperation with the Forest Service. Their study was the White Mountain

National Forest in New Hampshire. They found that when all vegetation (analogous to clearcutting) was cut in a 38-acre watershed, the output of water and nutrients increased dramatically. This has led ecologists to believe that clearcutting may cause the land to become sterile through loss of important minerals and nutrients. According to Senator McGee's office, "Use of the experiment by the Forest Service is zero."

Senator McGee stated that much of the clearcutting was occurring on slopes that were too steep, and consequently erosion patterns were serious. Also, added the Senator, trash piles were left unattended and logging roads generated serious environmental damage.

The Forest Service has defended the practice by saying that it was the most practical means of obtaining timber in the national forests. 30% of all the softwood saw timber homestead in the United States comes from public lands.

The policy has also been defended as a method of increasing game species such as deer and elk. Proponents say the clearing of large areas of trees encourage the growth of wildlife foods and discourages the growth of certain harmful flora. Both of these concepts have been attacked by conservationists.

Senator David Gambrell chats with Linda Davis and Kay Miller.

If VD is so easy to cure, how come so many people have it?

Because they're afraid or ashamed or just plain uninformed. They think the whole wide world will find out if they go for treatment. So, some of them die with their secret.

But, it couldn't be further from the truth. Because we're offering free, confidential and effective treatment for syphilis and gonorrhea. And all you have to do is call this number: 659-3955. It's easy. And everything is strictly confidential.

Nowadays, there's no reason for anybody to have VD, much less to die from it.

K. K. K.

The following is the first Black column of the Sentinel. It is edited, written, and brought together by Black students and we hope to make it a regular feature of the Sentinel.

K.K.K.

During the last quarter there were about forty new students on campus whose faces you've seen, but probably didn't pay any attention to. The group of students that I am referring to are the Black students that call themselves, along with those that were already here, the K.K.K. Do not get alarmed, the K.K.K. stands for KOOL KOLORATED KIDS. These students have a lot of talent and are just waiting for the chance to express themselves. Did you know that Greg Crosby, one of the K.K.K. members whom the other members have nicknamed "SHAFT," plays the bongo drums in a well known band in Atlanta? Then we have a brother who is an amateur comedian. Among other varied talents of these students are singing, playing various types of musical instruments, and the talent of acting.

So far, some have participated in the intramural sports such as girl's volleyball and football, as well as submitting poetry to the creative magazine, working in the administration building and serving as aids to other secretaries. But these students want more. Some say that they would like to participate in other activities, but feel as though they aren't really wanted and will be accepted only because other students feel obligated to admit them because they are students at KJC.

Black Viewpoints

There were several interviews made during the fall quarter with the three Black secretaries that we now have on campus. Among those interviewed were Miss Paulette Long, who is a secretary in the Social Science Department, Miss Phyllis Baker, a secretary of HEAP, and Miss Terri Ferguson, who is secretary to Dr. Martin down in the administration building. Mr. Bobby Oliver, our first Black counselor, gave his opinions on several matters also. These people were asked questions on the school in general, such as the academic program, extracurricular activities, and other things in general.

Miss Paulette Long stated, and I quote:

"I think that it is a great experience having worked at such an institution as Kennesaw Junior College. I am very happy to have the honors of holding an office such as the one that I'm holding or had held. It thrills me to find that along with my regular job, I'm getting to know people in general, regardless of race, creed, or color. Also, it is learning the reaction of people around me and the differences. Later, I was asked about the social life at KJC, that is as far as concerts are concerned.

"I replied that the entertainment or the concerts can be better. I say that with the ratio of Blacks that are now on the ship, they should get their share of Black concerts. Speaking not against the entertainment that are now given to the extreme. Having been here at KJC one quarter, I think that the ratio of student social activities should be on a scale of fifty-fifty. In the end, I would like to say that Kennesaw Junior College is one of the most unique. The administration and faculty staff is indeed the greatest."

Miss Phyllis Baker gave an opinion on the situation:

"Being a secretary for HEAP, which is a higher education program of advancement, is indeed a thrill. During my stay here last quarter as secretary I found out that the Kennesaw Junior college has a great Bureaucratic Division and also a wonderful teaching staff. The students seem to me to be very studious and concerned about the achievement that he or she is trying to accomplish. The people whom I worked under and those I worked over are very wonderful. I enjoyed my stay at KJC very much and am sure I'll like it next quarter if I am retained. My last comment is that the campus is a beautiful scene."

This comment comes from Miss Terri Ferguson:

"I, Terri Ferguson, am proud to say that I have a job at such an institution as this Kennesaw Junior College. I enjoy the company of my co-workers, the counselors, other secretaries, and the other members of the administrative staff. I enjoy working for Dr. Martin as his secretary. Kennesaw Junior College is one of the most attractive and very well equipped schools there are around. I was asked by my interviewer what I thought of the concert activities that are carried on annually. My remarks to the question was that there are more White students at KJC than are Blacks and the majority sometimes wins. Then, looking at the matter from another aspect, the majority system in all cases does not work, because sometimes one has to FLOW WITH THE TIDE, Above all, a good thing about KJC is that it is equipped with a very good scholastic achievement program."

Our final comment is from Mr. Bobby Oliver:

"My work here at this institution of higher education has been more than words can explain. I believe my comments on the school was asked on the last day of Fall quarter and I stated to my interviewer the following information.

"I stated that the enrollment staff need to, to the fullest, recruit more Black students than there were the preceding quarter. With the help of the higher education program, the ratio of Blacks increased numerous since here on this rock, KJC, I was told to stand, and I think that this will inspire more Black students to attend this school in the future. I feel as though the White students are turing toward me for help as though that of any other man in my position. The school, to my belief, is over equipped in regards to the increasing of Black students, not only students but faculty and administrative staff as well. I also think that this school needs to add a Black History course to the curriculum. Dean Akerman, along with Dean Martin, are trying to increase the Black ratio. At the last of my comments I would like to say that the campus is the greatest there is of its rank around."

Black as I

by James Banks

Black is the color of my skin, soul, and pride
Heavy burdens on my back do ride
My skin is black, for that reason I'm despised
I'll not turn back, for it wouldn't be wise.
Some people say I'm no good I ask Why?
You'd ask so too if you were Black as I.

Is it that my skin is more tanned than yours
Talk and hatred fills my heart with sore
Go on! talk! Cause God made me as he did you
And there is nothing that you can do
God almighty, ruler of the world, dweller of the sky
I am proud to be Black as I.

What say you about my skin when yours
Is filled with visible colorful skin disease
Don't hate my skin color please
Maybe it's my soul one hates, for it is that he lack
Or is it still that I'm black

Some say we're dumb with no hesitation
How smart can one be when deprived of an education
No matter how much one talk and how hard he try
I'll always be as Black as I
You can change my name my direction and others
But the ones you can't change is my soul, pride and color

Interview: Mr. L.C. 'Red' Neckk

By Mike Anderson

Today your Sentinel reporter interviews the distinguished Sheriff, Firechief, Mayor, Judge, Justice of the Peace, and Dog-catcher of Squatleyville, Georgia, Mr. L. C. "Red" Neckk.

Mr. Neckk's an active civic leader. He is President of the local White Citizens Council, Assistant Chairman of the Fruit Cake Sale Committee of the Rotary Club, and Secretary of the local chapter of the Ronald Reagan Fan Club.

As we interviewed Sheriff Neckk, he sat in his office in a spare room above the local Taste-Freeze and sipped on a bottle of Red Rock strawberry soda. He wore a wrinkled tan uniform, steel-rimmed sun glasses, and knee-high riding boots. Your reporter began the interview.

"Sheriff, how many men do you have on your force?"

"Well, there's just me, but my nephew, Billie Joe helps out on weekends and holidays. Smart boy, that Billie Joe, he . . ."

"If you have only two men on your force, then why do you have so many guns here in your office? I've counted at least 26 guns in here."

"Well, ah always like to be prepared. You never can tell when the nigg — ah mean, there could be riot at anytime and ah want to protect our fair city from lawlessness and destruction."

"Just what is the population of Squatleyville?"

"We have 173 people and 52 Nigras."

"Yes, I see. In your job as sheriff, do you have any special equipment to aid you?"

"Yes, ah have a po-lice dog named Old Blue. Funny thing about that dog, he don't like nothin' but dark meat."

"Do you have any special law enforcement problems?"

"Yea, them smart aleck Yankee city slicker tourists. Them rascals come through here just a-flyin'! Some of 'em with their bright lights on even."

"Have you been successful in apprehending any of the offenders?"

"What?"

"Have you caught any of them?"

"Oh, yea, we catch a good many of 'em. We collected $14,350 in traffic fines last year."

"Yes, I see. Do you have any other crime problems here in Squatleyville?"

"We have a lot of trouble with moonshiners."

Presently a gangly pimply-faced teen-ager entered. He slouched in a corner, reading a comic book and moving his lips as he read. The Sheriff spoke.

"That's my nephew, Billie Joe. He's a smart boy, Billie Joe is. You be sure and write something nice about Billie Joe, you hear?"

"Yes, say what's that in that fruit jar on the desk there?"

The youth looked up from his comic book. "That? That's just some of Uncle Red's corn," he said.

"Hush up Billie Joe. You hear?"

"But Uncle Red . . ."

"GET OUTA HERE, BOY!"

"But . . ."

"BILLIE JOE, GO JUMP OFF A BRIDGE!"

Your reporter resumed the interview.

"Do you find that poverty is a major factor in crime in your city?"

"Yes, ah've done some deep research in this area."

"What do you consider to be a major cause of poverty in this area?"

"Well, mainly a lack of money. Ah've also found that a major cause of hunger is a —"

"Lack of food?"

"You tryin' to get smart with me boy? You smart aleck college kids are all alike. You got no respect for your elders."

"Excuse me. Could we please get back to the interview? Could I ask you some more personal questions? For instance, what person do you most admire?"

"J. Edgar Hoover. If it wasn't for him, the Reds would took over the whole country a long time ago instead of just New York, Washington, and Atlanter like it is now. If it wasn't for them dope fiends, fairies, and other preverts in Washington, he woulda been President."

"Oh, talk about something else. Uh, what's your favorite pastime?"

"Well, ah watch a lot of TV. Ah like to watch wrestling and roller derby. When ah get tired of that, ah drive down to the highway and watch those crazy Yankees wreck and kill each other."

"Recently an out of town tourist checked in at a local hospital. He had received multiple lacerations, concussions, fractures, and contusions."

"What?"

"He was beaten up."

"Oh."

"He claimed that he was a victim of police brutality in your city. Do you care to comment?"

"Oh yea, that was that smart-aleck Yankee city slicker that claimed ah hit him with mah flashlight. Really, all that happened was that he tripped and fell down."

"If he fell dow, how did that flashlight on your belt get so badly dented?"

"Well, after ah arrested him fer parking by a fire hydrant, ah dropped mah flashlight and he tripped and fell on it."

"Would you like to make any further comments?"

"Yea, tell that smart-aleck college crowd that if this country is gonna stay in one piece, folks is gonna have to show more respect for the law and the po-lice. Anything else?"

"No, I've got all I can take — er, use. Thank you."
