Chuck Stone, a prominent black journalist and political scientist, will speak at Kennesaw Junior College on Wednesday, November 15, at 8 p.m. in the Student Services building. His topic will be "The Missing Element in American Education: The Fourth R."

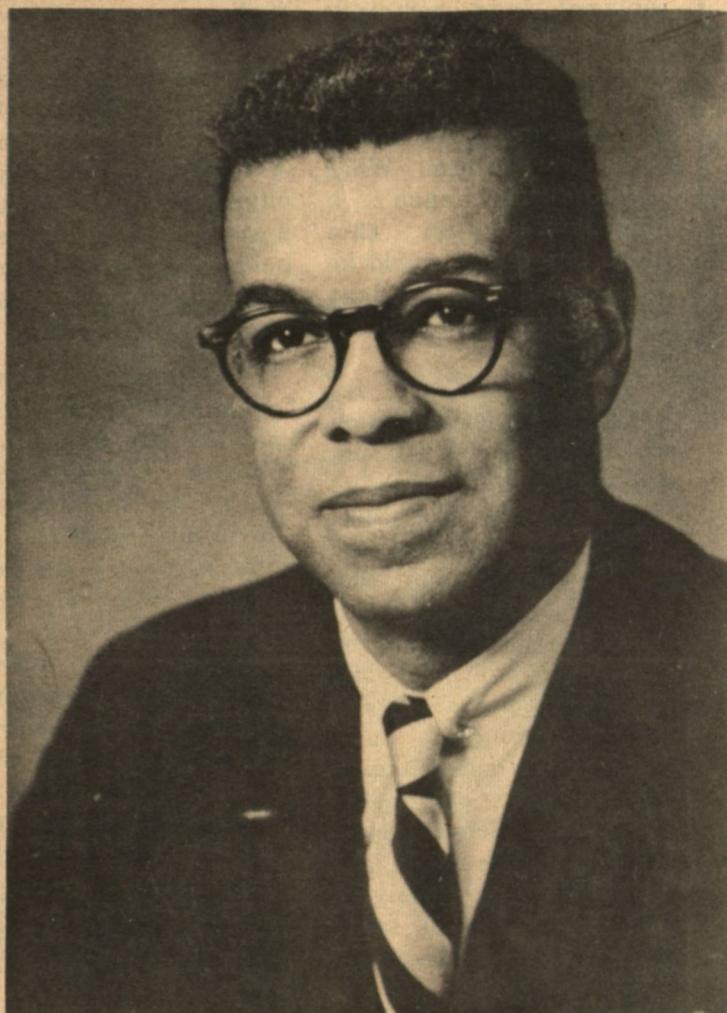

Currently a columnist for the Philadelphia Daily News, Stone also served as a television commentator on the "Today Show." Previously he was editor-in-chief of the Chicago Daily Defender.

Stone's other current posts include contributing editor for "The Black Scholar" and council member in the National Conference of Black Political Scientists.

His most recent book, published in the spring, is "The Poetry of the Black Revolution." Earlier works include "King Strut" and "Black Political Power in America."

Chuck Stone was the Capital Press Club's Journalist of the Year in 1961.

He received his A.B. in Political Science and Economics at Wesleyan University in 1948 and his M.A. in Sociology at the

by Paul Flanagan

An army of armed knights will fight a battle at Kennesaw Junior College on Nov. 18th. This hurly burly will decide who is the boldest, the strongest, and the fairest in the realm of the southeastern kingdom of the Society of Creative Anachronisms. This mighty realm, ruled hardly but justly by the great Baron Ross of the Ridge (alias Dr. Doug Rossman of LSU), who is assisted by his Seneschel David the Fierce, consists of the mercy provinces of Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, the Carolinas, Alabama, and Louisiana.

This fight will be to the death, since the likelihood of any of the heavily armed combatants actually getting themselves killed with their rattan swords and rubber axes is small. Judges will be on hand to decide whether any blow has come true on the neck, head, side, or back, thereby proving fatal.

The battle shall end when one side has exterminated the other side; whereupon the knights shall participate in rough martial contests as archery, spear throwing, ax throwing, and over-eating. This latter will be done in a feast featuring such medieval cuisine as whole roast pig.

Each side shall have its headquarters, and admission to the festivities is open to anyone affecting medieval dress.

"Ladies" arriving at the tournament will be asked to fill two types of positions, on a pedestal or in the kitchen.

The Creative Anachronizers are the same group which led the exhibit on knights, morals, manners, and regalia to the Western Civilization classes a couple of semesters ago. Anyone wishing to join the fray should contact William of Ayre (alias Billy Jerard.)

IHE Staff Visits KJC

Five members of the staff of the Institute of Higher Education at the University of Georgia came to Kennesaw Junior College campus Friday (Oct. 27) for an informal visit with college personnel.

Representing the Institute were Drs. Cameron Fincher, Gerald B. Robins, Daniel J. Sorrells, Bill D. Felter and D. Parker Young.

The Institute of Higher Education is a service institution and research agency of the University organized to work with other institutions and agencies in the development of higher education. Staff roles are advisory, consultative, informative, interpretative and evaluative in nature.

Following the morning discussions, the group had lunch in the private dining room of the student services building.

Mathematician Speaks At KJC

Dr. Jack Rogers, associate professor of mathematics at Emory University, will discuss "The Topology of Surfaces" in a lecture at Kennesaw Junior College Wednesday, Nov. 8.

The program will be held in room 113 of the Natural Science and Math Building at noon, and is open to the public.

Dr. Rogers, who studied for his doctorate under noted mathematician Professor R. L. Moore, received his B.S. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Texas. He has published several papers in math journals and has been associated with Emory University since 1967.

Editor,

While I realize that the acceptable code of conduct at rock concerts is what seems to be total inattention to the performance, the manners displayed at the Charlie Byrd concert on Saturday, 28 October made me embarrassed for the college. Two things annoyed me and many other people in the audience: there was continual walking in and out of the gym and up and down the bleacher seats on the sides and there was a photographer who kept scuttling about like some kind of giant crab throughout the first half of the performance. Charlie Byrd's group must be watched as well as listened to, in order to fully appreciate the music. These interruptions were distracting and were probably noticed by this fine musician. May I suggest the following?

1. Try to hold small concerts in the student center which has no wooden floors. I would rather sit on the floor than put up with the noise.

2. If the gym must be used, fold up the bleacher seats so they cannot be used.

3. Request all photographers to refrain from taking photographs during performances. If the photographers are from Sentinel, Montage, etc., absolutely ban them from disturbing the audience.

4. Have a little respect for the feelings of talented artists and for old codgers like me.

Sincerely,

P. E. Bostick

To The "Whole" Student Body (after censorship)

by Thomas Roe

Student apathy on American college campuses has become so rampant that the so-called "student body" as a unit might be replaced (and certainly enhanced) by registering Raquel Welch. How to revive a majority student interest in campus affairs is a definite problem. What might aid such a resuscitation on this campus, however, would be an expose' of student apathy's concomitant: poor leadership.

A thorough investigation of leadership on the student level at Kennesaw Junior College reveals a startling fact: what has occurred here is the takeover by a clique who enjoy being pretenders to the throne (unfortunately so there is no throne and thus no student power available). Sadly enough such situations are common upon most college campuses. Majority indifference leads directly to a rule by the few, the few who are willing to work at the various tasks available to students in their own colleges.

The established oligarchy here then would not seem a typical on the surface. It would not even be bad or ineffective if it were, at least, a quality few. But here comes the rub: there is a definite lack of quality among the leaders specially in student government at Kennesaw. A rather brief investigation has provided information to the extent that not only are the so-called leaders mediocre at best but that several of them also hold their positions in violation of the written Bylaws of the Student Government Association. Two SGA officers hold their positions despite grade averages below 2.0 even though according to the By-Laws Article IV Section 5:

"Candidates for any office shall file a written petition with the Dean of Student Affairs stating his or her qualifications for office. Deadline for these petitions is one week before the election. Candidates must be enrolled for 10 quarter hours and have earned a minimum of 15 quarter hours at this school prior to taking office with a 2.0 average or 2.0 for the preceding two quarters."

Does not Article IV Section 5 apply to the officers already elected as well?

This inferiority is even more highlighted when compared to the quality of the students who guide the Sentinel. The specific grade standing of some of the Sentinel's staff range from 3.8, 3.6, 3.5, to 2.6. The obvious discrepancy between the grades of what should be most important student organizations on campus is reprehensible to say the least!

The possible solutions to this appalling situation are three:

(1) the immediate removal of those whose averages are below recommended standards;

(2) an increase of the grade standards thus insuring a better quality leadership; or

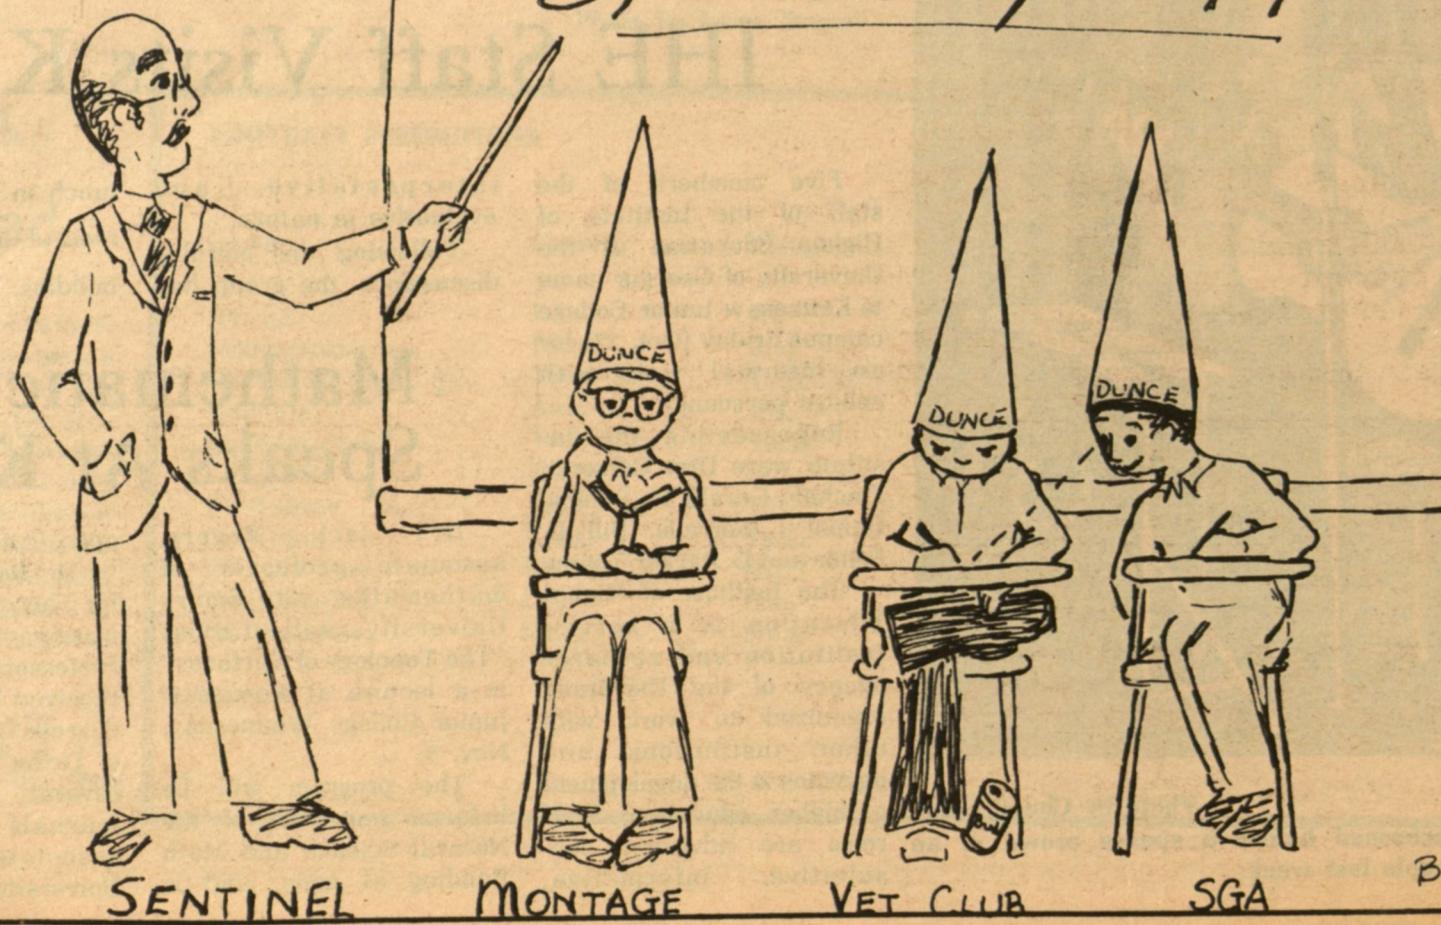

(3) a plebiscite wherein the student body might vote yes or no as to whether they even want a student government - one in this case where student funds are expended for the salaries of the so-called leaders and a SGA with a budget of $2500.

If there in fact be a "student body," it is time for it to demand that the situation at Kennesaw Junior College be ameliorated. If apathy is so great that you, the students at KJC, are not aroused and angered by these facts, then all that can be said is "its your money."

Vice Is Nice

by Lucy Worley

Well, it isn't nice all the time! A matter of fact for the past month or so it hasn't been nice at all. I find it really very interesting that people can denounce the SGA for everything from grade averages to general productivity of the organization and yet themselves do nothing to change things. I will be the first to tell anyone who is willing to listen that it is unfair for the SGA By-Laws to require the Senators to maintain a certain grade average, and not require the officers to do so. However, I am going to try my best to see that that is changed. A lot of things need changing here, and a lot of things will be changed I'm sure when the By-Laws are revised. I only hope that the change is for the better.

It's really too bad that SGA is such a fulltime job. I know that for myself it has required 14 and 16 hour days up here just to get everything done. That's why it's pretty hard for me to accept the fact a lot of the criticism going around is not personal. I take it personally because I take my job in SGA personally. SGA is like a business, and when I was working for a business it required a great deal of time. When someone begins to criticise your work, they are in essence criticising you. My point is that although constructive criticism is necessary, it reaches the point after awhile of no longer being constructive. I believe that anyone who doesn't like what I am doing or what someone else is doing in SGA, should come directly to them, not hem and haw around and do nothing else about it. After all, the elections will come up again in Spring Quarter, all you have to do is run and change things. Until then, you could get involved and

A strongly held belief among some observing students is that the F.B.I. has finally realized that all subversive activities are generated from the Kennesaw area and has set up an observatory in Room 212 under the code name of Montage. This belief is erroneous. Instead the room is headquarters for a small core of students who embody the creative and technical skills which the Kennesaw student body offers. These are the members of the yearbook staff.

One of the reasons for the unobtrusive behavior of the group can be found in last year's annual. In fact, it is last year's annual. If you have not read one, you should; it serves as a classic example of what not to do in a yearbook. The reason for its weaknesses are entirely personal-they have to be when the staff consists of one person. At any rate, the staff this year has tripled, which shows how many people cared to do anything about it. What they did care to do was raise the question of whether the Montage was worth its budget - an example of burying the problem rather than solving it.

The central purpose of a yearbook is to preserve the nature of an institution and the memories of one year which contribute to this nature. This feat is usually accomplished through photographs and copy. Of the three publications of this campus, the yearbook offers the greatest range of opportunity in expressing your ideas. A newspaper covers all the events of a college; a yearbook covers those which somehow embody a college. Not all events reflect the feelings of the campus; how can they be said to when less than 10

First Aid Course Set For KJC Staff

Kennesaw Junior College faculty and staff members will have the opportunity this month to take a first aid course taught by Peter Blumenthal, physical education instructor at the college.

Students will receive basic instruction in first aid, including wounds; shock and artificial resuscitation; poisoning; injured bones, joints and muscles; common emergencies such as heart attacks, seizures and throat obstructions.

The course will be taught in the Humanities Building, Room 102, from 12 noon to 1 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays, Nov. 6-20

The course is offered through the Community Services Office to benefit "faculty and staff members who want to be competent to help in the event of campus emergencies," a spokesman said.

Conference Discusses Student Rights

ATHENS, Ga. — What are students' constitutional rights in campus disputes? How far can an institution go in censoring student opinions and activities? How can students set up their own judicial systems assuring justice for themselves and the institutions they attend?

These are some of the issues that will be brought up at a conference of students, administrators and faculty members from colleges and universities across the nation Nov. 19-21 at the University of Georgia.

The conference, "Substantial Justice on Campus: Individual Rights v. Institutional Needs", will feature addresses by Thomas C. Fischer, author of "Due Process in the Student - Institutional Relationship", and Edward H. Hammond, assistant to the president for student relations at Southern Illinois University and a member of the President's Commission on the Rights and Freedoms of Students.

In addition, representatives of Louisiana State and Michigan State universities, the University of Wisconsin at Madison and the University of Georgia are slated to present their judicial systems for analysis and comparison.

The workshop is designed for the student, faculty member or administrator concerned with developing or improving the judicial system on his campus, according to Jan Summer of the university's department of student judicial affairs.

Discussions, says

Summer, will proceed from theory to practical application, providing participants with information about cases and legal mandates.

The conference is being sponsored by the university's Student Judiciary and student judicial affairs department and the American College Personnel Association.

For further information, write, in care of the conference, to the Center for Continuing Education, University of Georgia, Athens 30601.

Cobb County Needs Student Support

by Mike Evans

The KJC Vet Club has come to the vast realization that the Cobb Co. Juvenile Home needs community help. Due to the increasing rise in violence, the officials at the local juvenile home are extremely overworked by their case loads. It has now become the prime interest of the KJC Vet Club to help these officials and the community by putting to use some of the Vet Club's age and experience.

Due to several interviews by members of the Vet Club with officials of the juvenile home, the veterans see clearly that they and anyone else who cares must show both the officials and the children that here in Cobb Co. there are people who do sincerely care. To start the program, the vets have decided to head off a material drive at KJC.

The purpose of the drive is to collect any item which a child can use to better his living condition. Since many children come from homes where the essentials of life are limited, we feel that anything will help them. Both girls and boys are among the needy in Cobb

Co. and the responsibility of getting these items to the children will be taken up by the members of the Vet Club and any additional volunteers who would like to be interested.

We need such items as: books, magazines, toiletries, shoes, clothing and old sports items. We are not limiting our collection to these listed items, but we would like the concerned people to know that we will accept anything given in good faith.

Richard Harris, Vanessa Redgrave, Franco Nero, David Hemmings top cast in "Camelot." Film will be shown on Nov. 17, 8:00 p.m., in the gym.

"Camelot" Will Be Shown On Campus

After a year of international success as a road show screen presentation and winner of three Academy Awards, the Warner Bros.-Seven Arts multi-million dollar Technicolor presentation of "Camelot" arrives Nov. 17 at 8:00 p.m. in the gym for the first time at popular prices.

Against the spectacular backdrop of Arthurian days, stars Richard Harris as Arthur, Vanessa Redgrave as Guenevere, Franco Nero as Lancelot and David Hemmings as Mordred create an electric excitement in the poignant and personal musical romance-adventure.

Feeling strongly that Arthur's aspirations at Camelot and what transpired there have much in common with and are particularly pertinent to today, Producer Jack L. Warner, Director Joshua Logan and screenwriter-lyricist Alan Jay Lerner conceived their motion picture presentation in bold imaginative terms.

It's Mod-Medieval

Because of the legend's "Nowness," the trio, aided by Oscar-winning art director-costume designer John Truscott, created a Mod-Medieval "Camelot"—suspended in time and space, derived from their imaginations rather than reference books.

"Camelot" based on T.H. White's "The Once and Future King" was written for the Broadway

Stage by Lerner and composer Frederick Loewe, who had earlier collaborated on "Brigadoon," "Paint Your Wagon" and "My Fair Lady." The pair also wrote "Gigi" for the screen.

Outstanding stars

Richard Harris achieved international acclaim with his awardwinning performance in the British film "This Sporting Breed," and has starred opposite Marlon Brando in "Mutiny on the Bounty," Julie Andrews in "Hawaii" and Doris Day in "Caprice."

Dazzling the world in her first screen appearance in "Morgan," Vanessa Redgrave surpassed that triumph with her performance in "Blow-Up." Her brilliant talent combined with her stunning beauty won her the coveted role of "the queen a king was prepared to lose all England for."

Franco Nero, who played Abel opposite Harris' Cain in John Huston's "The Bible," was recommended by Huston to Logan, who was searching for the perfect actor to play the "knight in shining armor." Previous to "The Bible," the handsome, athletic young Italian actor had appeared in a dozen Italian films.

Soaring into prominence opposite Miss Redgrave in "Blow-Up," talented young David Hemmings completes "Camelot's" top quartet of stars as Arthur's malevolent illegitimate son.

Laughing Championships

by Caroline Harkleroad

Even sports fans who take their favorite passtime seriously will be plunged into uncontrollable hilarity by Richard Armour's 45th book, a gem of humor which instills laughter into golf, tennis, baseball, football, basketball, skiing, wrestling, boxing, fishing, billiards, horse racing, skeet shooting—you name it!—in All in Sport.

Some 40 sports acquire new and unexpected dimensions in this treasury of the absurd, by way of 100-odd wild, word-juggling verses illustrated by Leo Hershfield.

Armour, whom Ogden Nash calls "a master of his craft," twists the meaning of a word with flexibility and dispatch—even when he is not deliberately punning. Applying his vivid imagination to sports, he comes up with such strange situations as the pitcher who throws a curve but neglects to throw the ball, the bird dog who has heard that it is impolite to point, and the prison football team that has one pro, while everyone else is a con.

Armour wrote for several years for Sports Illustrated, where some of these pieces originally appeared. Most however, are new, with fresh twists of wordplay and wit. As the author himself sees it, this book is a book for lovers of sport—and lovers of lovers of sport.

Armour's light verse has appeared in over 200 publications, from The New Yorker to The Wall Street Journal. Hershfield has illustrated numerous books, and his illustrations have appeared in many magazines.

Doctor And Wife Head Sex Clinic Counseling

Can students benefit from sex counseling services on the college campus? Do coeds really want to know about birth control...the pill...diaphragm...or IUD? a Connecticut doctor and his wife who work as a sex-counseling team at Yale College feel the answer is "yes".

Dr. Phillip M. Sarrel, gynecologist and assistant professor of Obstetrics at Yale University School of Medicine, and his wife, Lorna, a social worker on the staff of Yale's Department of University Health, Mental Hygiene Division, agree that sex counseling provides students with an opportunity to speak with an adult and help find answers to their inquiries concerning sexuality.

Recent figures compiled from two studies of sexual behavior on college campuses show that 1.1 to 3.0 million college men and 450,000 to 1.6 million college women may be in need of birth control services.

Dr. and Mrs. Sarrel began the Yale clinic in 1969 when Yale first became a coeducational college. With the full support of the University Administration and the Department of University Health, the sex counseling service was begun to aid the students, male and female, with any problems relating to sexuality. One major function of the counseling service was to offer information on contraception and contraceptives to the student body—at the same time capitalizing on the available sex counseling.

To coincide with the sex counseling services, the University Administration established a related lecture-discussion series as an elective course. Led by a psychologist and gynecologist, the course covered such topics as psychosexual development, interpersonal relationships and their influence on sexual behavior, sexual response and techniques, contraception, abortion, venereal disease, pregnancy and childbirth.

To further the special nature of the sex counseling clinical services, the clinic was placed under the Mental Hygiene Division of the University Health service. This move affirmed the college population at Yale that all sex-counseling information would be kept in strict confidence.

During the first academic year, the birth control and sex counseling services operated one full day a week, eight-hours a day. Half-hour appointments were scheduled for physical examinations, background data and discussion. Appointments began with the first day of services and by the spring of 1970, the waiting time per student was a minimum of three months. Even when another full day was added to the service, a six week-week wait was not considered unusual.

"Frankly Speaking"

'AND ALL THESE YEARS I THOUGHT EVERYTHING IN KANSAS WAS FLAT!'

Throughout the clinic operations, Dr. and Mrs. Sarrel found there were few 'routine' requests for birth control among the college students. Instead, the students wanted and needed to talk about much more than the relative merits of the pill versus the IUD (Inter Uterine Device) or how to use a diaphragm. Of the 1,000 students who visited or were counseled during the two academic years of the counseling clinic, 50 per cent of the services included straight contraceptive requests.

For those students requesting birth control, Dr. and Mrs. Sarrel discussed three areas of importance to the student: (1) student's sexual history (2) present male-female relationship or relationships (3) student's background and relationship with his/her family.

The husband and wife team found few conflicts from working as a team. In fact, they found many young preferred the presence of Mrs. Sarrel in a supportive female-related role during the student counseling sessions. Whether students relate to the sex counseling team as husband-wife, or male and female, the atmosphere was comfortable and nonjudgmental, creating a relaxing and yet confidential setting for the students to discuss their problems, fears or questions.

In addition to the counseling services, a booklet "Sex and the Yale Student", written by a committee under the supervision of Dr. and Mrs. Sarrel, describing the sex counseling services available, was distributed to the under graduate students.

The combination of the booklet, course and counseling service played an important role in informing the Yale campus coeds about birth control and sexual relationships. During this time, the rate of venereal disease and pregnancies underwent a steady decline. One college president and father of a Yale undergraduate coed, was so impressed by the services his daughter received when she needed assistance from the counseling service, that he initiated a similar sex counseling program on his campus.

Both Dr. and Mrs. Sarrel feel the sex counseling service aided in promoting responsible sexual behavior among the Yale students; at the same time, leading to a greater realization of the potential that sexuality holds.

Are they ready to be parents?

Chances are they're not. They're probably not even thinking about marriage, let alone children. But one mistake and their carefree lives are over, and their baby-sitting days are just beginning. One mistake and he's faced with supporting a family, she with staying home and raising a child.

The sad part is that "mistakes" can be easily prevented. Preventing pregnancy is not difficult if you know the facts on birth control. That's why Planned Parenthood is around, to help prevent "accidents." If you're not ready to have children, don't.

Call Planned Parenthood.

The Blue Warrior

by Sports Editor Rick Hayden

Debbie Parker won the women's cycling championship of KJC for the second year in a row, but the victory was no easy matter. Like last year's race, Ms. Parker's main opposition was Debbie Adams, who did the .6 mile course in an identical 1 minute, 39.9 seconds time, but lost by the length of a front wheel. The average speed for the course by Ms. Parker was 22.12 Mph.

On the first leg of the course Ms. Adams held the lead, but down the stretch Ms. Parker mounted a seemingly unbeatable lead. Not to be forsaken, Adams closed the gap and the two finished wheel and wheel, with Ms. Parker's wheel being in front of Ms. Adams. Linda Wallis finished third with a time of 145.6.

After the race, both Parker and Adams slumped to the ground like fallen Roman Gladiators, heaving and breathing hard.

Ms. Parker commented that "the bikes were in awful condition." When asked when she first acquired her cycling skill, Debbie said, "I can remember my first bike, a blue warrior. I got it in the first grade."

Ms. Parker and Ms. Wallis were both competing in the race for the Robin's intramural team. Ms. Adams is a member of the Volleyball champion Aardvarks.

Pumas Ram Ripples

The Red Ripples, with only one victory to their credit, played outstanding football against the first place Pumas until late in the game when a premature whistle blow seemed to break their backs. After a Red Ripple had intercepted an errant Puma pass, a whistle sounded stopping the play though the Red Ripple player still had his flags in tact.

The Pumas scored two td's after this and rolled up a 13-0 victory. The Puma's are now 4-0-2. Though the Red Ripples lost again, they displayed an improved team.

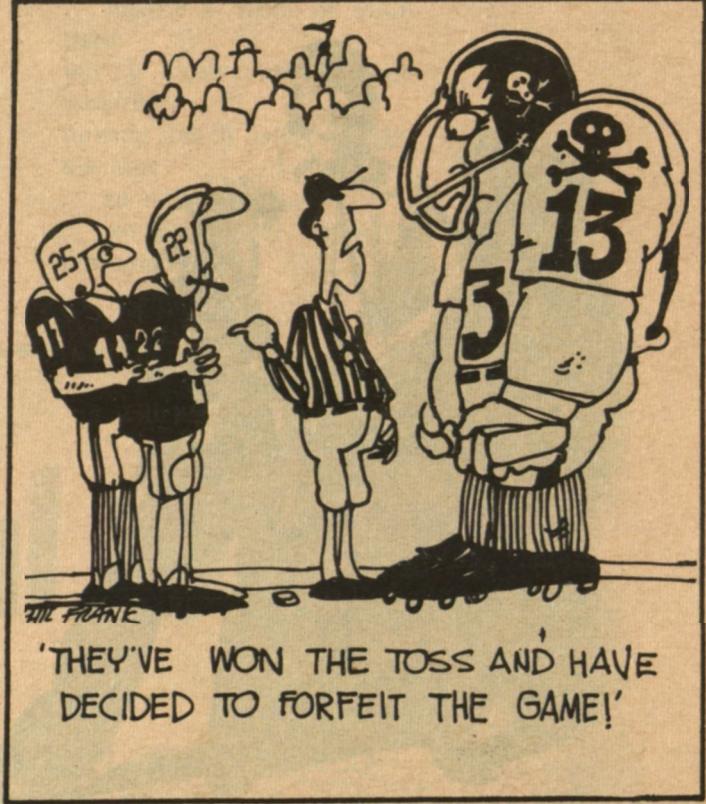

Gamecocks Whitewash Gorillas

The Gorillas treated the Gamecocks to three touchdowns on Halloween day as the Gamecocks defeated the Gorillas in an intramural football game 19-0. Ted Souris, the league's leading scorer, turned the trick twice for twelve points while teammate Dyer had 7.

The Gamecocks defense stifled the Gorillas most of the day and the offense was able to move when it had to. The Gamecocks upped their record to 4-2-1. The Gorillas are still searching for their first victory to go with their 7 losser.
