Student Center to Rise on Campus

KENNESAW JUNIOR COLLEGE

The new Student Services Building as the architect sees it.

Construction on two new buildings at Kennesaw Junior College is expected to begin in February, college officials said today.

The new structures — a 42,300 square foot student center and a 10,000 square foot warehouse — will “supply much needed space and facilities,” according to Controller Roger Hopkins.

Construction on the student center was delayed from an expected start in mid-December because the lowest of five bids was above the $1.4 million originally allocated for the structure, Hopkins said. After review by architect John W. Cherry and the Board of Regents staff, revisions have been made to bring the design within the limits of the money available, the Controller said.

The contract for the new warehouse is in the process of being awarded, Hopkins said, with the Conner Bros. firm low bidder at $295,000. Expected completion date for the warehouse is January, 1974. The structure will include a general warehouse area, receiving, administrative offices and storage area, Hopkins said.

“The new warehouse will allow space currently being used for storage to be freed for classroom use,” he said.

Both the warehouse and student center will be buff-colored brick, matching existing campus structures. The student center will be located east of the library, in the center of the campus. The warehouse will be situated in the northwest section of the campus.

Although no change was made in the amount of floor space or the basic design of the student center, other minor revisions were necessary, according to President Horace W. Sturgis.

Underground electrical wiring originally planned was deleted and less costly overhead wiring substituted in order to remain within the allocated budget, Dr. Sturgis said. Some kitchen equipment and folding partitions will be left out and vinyl tiles will replace terazzo floors.

“Some equipment can be added after the building is completed,” Dr. Sturgis pointed out.

Kennesaw Junior College is getting a new parking lot to help compensate for the 400 parking spaces that will be lost when construction begins on the new student services building in March.

Comptroller Roger Hopkins explained that the new lot will be located behind the campus maintenance building, and will be semi-circular in design. The Cobb County Highway Department will begin construction, Hopkins stated, as soon as they can

The two-story contemporary center, with bronzed glass windows, will include a large dining room, college bookstore, lounge areas, student offices, counseling office, clinic and fit the lot into their schedule.

Concerning the problems of parking on campus, Mr. Hopkins concedes, “The normal amount of parking will change as we may have to adapt to some inconveniences.”

“These problems will probably be in the form of students having to walk a little further to cars, and having to park in formerly discussed places such as the hill behind the present student center.”

meeting room.

A large outdoor plaza will be constructed in front of the building, which will face the college’s existing library. Parking will be retained on three sides of the building.

Bye' Bye Montage?

Montage, the Kennesaw Jr. College yearbook, is in danger. This is the word from the S.G.A. At a meeting held on Wednesday, Jan. 24 the problem was discussed in depth.

The problem, as you have already guessed, is understaffing. The conclusion reached by many students and teachers that that students no longer care enough about the yearbook to let it survive and judging from the ever larger piles of books lying in unopened crates, they're probably right.

The solution arrived at by the staff of Montage is to increase the paid positions to five. The motion to do this in the S.G.A. was withdrawn, because it stood on weak legal ground, but that it was proposed is ample evidence of what we've come to. We must now come to the question, if it takes bribes to get students here to do what other students will do for free, might it not be just as well that we let Montage sink into that Sargasso Sea of apathy that has inundated Kennesaw?

The death of Montage, which is the chronicle of school traditions, is logical in the light of the death of those traditions, all that will be left will be monotony.

And there is no one but the students to stop it, and that is a frightening prospect. I know that some will say that this kind of inertia naturally proceeds from the clique-ishness of school activities. What cliques? If anyone thinks there are cliques on this campus, then he must be in on some kind of secret.

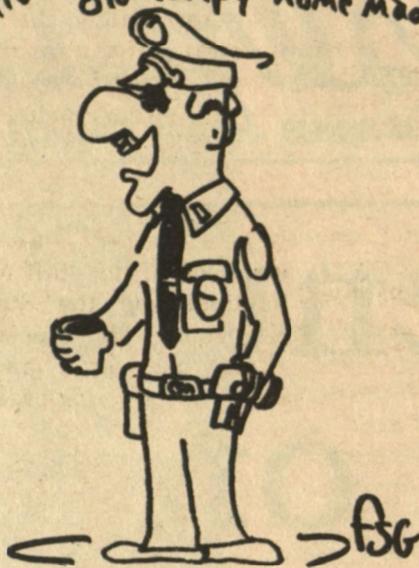

Let's face it. The problem is purely and simply, apathy. The stuff put Nixon into office.

The End of the Tunnel

The war in VietNam is over. This news is made tragic by the death of a man who figured so prominently in the war, Lyndon Johnson. It's easy to forget that we called him the Mad Bomber when he was President; it's equally ironic that Mr. Johnson died on the anniversary of the arrest of the real Mad Bomber, George Metsky, in New York. What we mustn't forget are those who died when Johnson was President, and all those who died after he quit. They fell in the swamps of a country where at one time the troops outnumbered the civilians three-to-one, and some of them bled their lives away in the parking lots and the well-kept yards of college campuses all across the country. There are the prisoners of war to be accounted for, and there are those who are in jail because they would not go out and fight people on the other side of the world. The results here at the end of the war are the same as when the conflict started 24 years ago. . . the reason our bombers aren't killing anyone in North VietNam is because they're all down in South VietNam.

It's easy to forget all this, though. The battles that we once watched on the Walter Cronkite hour are easily replaced with reruns of the Rat Patrol, and America can go back to sleep until the next time. We can only pray that there won't be a next time, but history tells an awful tale to those that listen. For the time being, though, peace may really be at hand, and now we can all go back to waging the peace, as well as some of us waged the war. Or, as Willie Dixon once put it, "it's been too long comin', and I'm afraid it's too long gone."

YUP, kinda peaceful round here

kids just sit in their cars and smoke old lumpy home made cigarettes!

All This For A Picture

by Paul Flanagan

The Sentinel has raised a storm of protest when it published its "In Memorium to Lyndon Baines Johnson" photograph.

Among other things a petition has been started to ban the Sentinel and proposal to investigate the operation of the paper was introduced (and tabled) in the SGA. The picture itself is of a fallen tombstone. Under this the legend "In Memorium Lyndon Baines Johnson."

The actions mentioned above took place and generally people were very unpleasant about it. This left Robert unpleasantly surprised. He wondered how his message could be so grossly distorted in the minds of his audience and he muttered darkly of middle class attitudes gumming up communication.

Let me just say that insufficient explanation was our only sin. For that we'll apologize. For the picture we won't. As the official chronical of events at K.J.C. it is our prerogative and our duty to express our opinions, however controversial.

Dear Editor:

On December 26th, we sent out an Urgent News Release and solicited your cooperation to inform readers of the great need in Nicaragua due to the disasterous earthquake. Thanks to your efforts the immediate response has been outstanding.

Most people soon forget the great needs which exist from such a disaster, even though it will take many months to get the survivors in a position to help themselves. Therefore, we ask if you will provide space in your paper to remind your readers that much is still needed by the unfortunate victims of the Managua earthquake.

Enclosed is a photo with a caption which stresses this point, and we sincerely hope you will be able to provide space for it in your paper.

Your invaluable assistance cannot be expressed in words, however, the results are measured in eliminating human suffering, and we are ever grateful.

Sincerely,
Bee H. Brown
Southeastern Field Director

Another fainting has highlighted the need for better medical facilities at K.J.C. The victim, who was attended by a P.E. instructor, cannot be identified for reasons of privacy.

An ambulance came with oxygen (unavailable on campus) which revived the girl and took her off to a nearby hospital.

The scene in the student center was one of considerable confusion. There gathered a sizeable crowd around the girl, which ambulance attendants had to fight through to carry her out. Many among them wondered aloud why, with a nursing program on campus, an ambulance and a P.E. instructor were called instead.

This event occurred on Wednesday, the 3 of Jan. It recalls a similar incident last fall, when someone fainted in the class room. Then, too, an outcry was made for better first aid facilities.

At this time the closest that K.J.C. has to such facilities is the rackfull of patent medicines in the bookstore.

Now a school with a full scale nursing program should be able to take care of its own health, Kennesaw isn't. When one gets sick here, he can only go one place — off campus.

This is a ridiculous state of affairs. There must be a change. The Sentinel recommended it in the fall and it recommends it again the the winter.

Sirs:

Your space-occupying article on the lower left-hand corner of page seven, in the latest issue of the Sentinel, is an open and very public attack upon the respect of a late president.

The connotations of this picture relate the mind of a hypocrite, and the heart and soul of a barbarian. The person responsible for this act is not capable of being on a decent journal like the Sentinel. The office of the presidency is what killed L.B.J., and, though most will disagree, he was a human being. . . and a damned good one. Touche'!

"Ozymandias" in chronicling the fall of a great man. Mr. Johnson was one of the greatest civil rights workers of the past decade, and although my opinion of his political actions was, and is not the most favorable, I refrain from elucidating out of my hypocritical respect for a man who can no longer defend himself. As for your opinions concerning my character and credentials as a journalist, I assure you that they are both of the first order.

Letter to the Editor
Concerning the Jan. 24, 1973 issue:

I found the picture entitled "In Memoriam Lyndon Baines Johnson" quite disgusting and in extremely poor taste. A certain amount of respect should be paid to the deceased whether or not some infantile and quite immature individual cared for the man's politics. One cannot please everyone certainly, but I think it is quite narrow-minded of someone to be so crude after the man has passed away. What is to be gained? I was offended and though I did not advocate all of Lyndon Johnson's opinions, I do not care to be subjected to another individual's lack of courtesy.

JENNIFER WILLIAMS

Dear Editor:

Unfortunately, the ever-present ill-feeling that seems to exist between any student newspaper and the governing body of the school is once again growing to outrageous proportions between members of the staff of the Sentinel and the Student Government Association. As a former staff member of a student newspaper, I can understand the frustration and aggravation that is apparently plaguing the staff. However, as an elected representative of the student body I feel that their fear of complete censure of the paper is completely unjustified. I do now, and always have believed in a free press, and will continue to do so until events merit my change of opinion. Although it is the sacred right and duty of any free press to criticize a government, I feel that the pages of the Sentinel should be devoted to more important matters than personal grudges and useless nit-picking. There are matters of utmost importance occurring on campus and in the world that have been needlessly neglected because of space allotted to useless personal opinions directed toward certain individuals.

We are hopefully mature adults, and I see no reason why we can't settle our differences of opinion by other means instead of through the pages of the

Paranoid Ravings

From the Inner Office

By Robert Webb

The other day, one of my familiars, a pseudo-intellectual ne'er-do-well who seems to constantly pop up, in the manner of the Cheshire Cat, at various collegiate gatherings, said in the course of some forgotten rap session that what America Herself really needs to survive in modern times is a benevolent dictatorship. What I neglected to mention at the time, and have felt remorsefully negligent in doing so ever since, is that we are already living in a dictatorship, but it's lacking in benevolence.

Once upon a time, America was a land that saw the birth of a totally new subculture, the hippies. These "flower children", as they were fond of calling themselves, ignored the realities of the reign of Lyndon Baines the Mad Bomber in favor of recapturing some of the old-fashioned innocence of their not-so-forgotten childhoods. Innocence, though, is a fragile animal, and dies quickly when it is shot down in the streets. The powers-that-were set out to show this potential threat to the security of the country that they were full of shit, and by blasting it out of them succeeded, in a way. The results of this were the bombings and shootings that have been belabored since their perpetration by high-school editors and professional journalists alike.

Now, though, things are different. The faces in the high offices change, but the attitudes never do. In the traditional American fashion, everything that the freaks of the turn of the decade stood for has been co-opted into the plastic society that the rebellion sprang from. Now the only people who say right on! and mean it are the young marrieds in the Dodge Charger commercials. Dope has changed its nature from the "killer drug" marijuana, which is now the middle-class escape it deserves to be, to the subversive menace of heroin. National heroin hotlines are being used to "fix" the pusher, who has replaced the longhair as a symbol of anarchy. Everyone today has longer hair than he did six years ago, and it's hard to tell the players without a comb. Shit, long regarded as an obscenity, has become one of the most ambiguous words in the English language.

Where, you might ask, is all of this leading us? That, dear reader, is up to you. The songs have been sung, the wars have been fought, and the dead are buried. . . and forgotten, for the most part. The young people of America, for all their indulgence in the forbidden practices of growing hair and smoking weeds, have forgotten why they started doing this so few years ago. The dead college students are reviled as villains now, and the fact that they were killed is lost in a jumbled mass of ideological ramblings. All that men can say about the horrible nature of man as a race has been spoken, and all that is left now is the regression towards the 1950's, when the bomb was the ultimate weapon without a serious thought of use, and security, despite the occasional economic fluctuations, was an easy thing to take advantage of. My peers today are suffering from some kind of trauma, a shock that I would equate with the terror of being pulled from a mother's womb. The realities of the times have closed in, and with discouraging consistency, we are again attempting to escape. However, maybe Jim Morrison was right when he sang that the cold, grinding grizzly bear jaws were hot on our heels. The road runs on forever, and only we can decide where to get off.

Mr. Bridges:

Since I am the barbarian who is responsible for such tasteless philandering in photo-journalism, your letter carried a great deal of interest for me. Although I feel that your defense of Mr. Johnson's honor is a valid one, I think that it is a bit unwarranted. There has been a good bit of uproar concerning the interpretation of the photograph in question, and, while ambiguity was one aim of the article, it was not intended as the vicious attack that you insist it was. I chose this particular picture because I felt that it was symbolic of the way Mr. Johnson was ravaged by his years in office, and because I considered it to be highly suggestive of Shelley's

Reporter Dons Skis

by Karen Spence

Does the thought of sliding down a ski slope for the first time horrify you? If so, then perhaps you should try applying for ski instruction at American Adventures in Roswell.

Two Saturdays ago, this reporter was invited out to American Adventures to take a free ski lesson. I was particularly scared because I had never stood on a pair of skis in my life. However, my fears were quickly dispelled when I met five other people who were in my same position.

First, the group was fitted with skis and ski boots, all of which were supplied by American Adventures. We were then taken out to the slope by our instructor. At first glance, the slope appears to be covered by fresh snow, which can easily cause the most confident beginner to have second thoughts. So, when our instructor explained that we were looking at 150 feet of plastic-covered polyturf, I stood just a bit easier on my skis.

For the first lesson, the group only skied downslope twice, as most of the lesson was spent learning to apply the necessary techniques of ski safety. We learned how to fall without injury, how to get back up to our feet after falling, the method for climbing a hill with skis on, how to slide across level ground, and the way to turn around on skis. We were also instructed in how to avoid injuring other persons during a fall.

There are qualified instructors at the slope, and they offer beginning, intermediate, and advanced lessons. American Adventures offers a package of five lessons for $25.00, with all the equipment provided. They also offer private lessons at the rate of $10.00 per hour. Recreational skiing is from 2:00 until 5:00 on Saturdays, with a price tag of $3 for the whole afternoon. If you are interested in skiing, or in any of the other adventures offered by American, contact manager Steve Lewis at 993-6601.

Internationals Vote

by Diana Moody

Katrina Martin of Marietta was elected president of the recently formed Kennesaw Junior College International Club at its organizational meeting, on January 18. Buddy Wilson of Alpharetta was elected treasurer at the meeting.

Despite the conflict with the Rising Junior Test and lack of publicity, several students attended the meeting.

Spanish instructor Judy Myers explained that to keep the club informal only two officers were needed. Therefore, nominations were made for a president and a treasurer only.

The next meeting of the International Club will be held at noon on Thursday, January 25, in Humanities 223. Miss Myers stressed that the club is not for language students only but for anyone interested in what it has to offer.

According to Miss Myers, Southern Technical Institute has a large International Club that is very interested in the formation of a Kennesaw club.

The first of many joint activities being planned with Southern Tech is a casual get-together to be hosted by the KJC International Club on Friday, January 26, at 4 p.m. in the Student Center.

Vets Elect Officers

By Tread Beasley

The Veteran's Club, in a meeting January 18, has elected new officers for the winter quarter in actions taken on three motions raised.

The new officers elected were Buster Herren, President; Richard Humes, Vice-President; Chip Russell, Secretary-Treasurer; and Skip Sartain, Sergeant-at-Arms. All officers elected will serve until the spring quarter.

The second motion on the floor was an issue brought up by Buster Herren. He stated the need for the Veteran's Club to become involved in community actions that would prove beneficial to the people of the college community, and proposed an activity plan to take juveniles from the Cobb County Detention home for an outing. The plans are being made so as to allow the juveniles to take part in any activity they wish on the outing. The plans are being made for the expedition through the the Cobb County Judiciary and the Kennesaw Junior College administration.

The third motion was a vote on whether not to join the National Association of Veteran's Clubs. The cost, according to Chip Russell, is not a significant factor, and the benefits by being a member, he says, are more than worthwhile. The members voted to suspend the motion until the next meeting, while all pertinent information on the NAVC is gathered.

The last few minutes of the meeting were taken up in discussion of what effect the Viet Nam Veterans Against the War and other peace movements have had or will have on the present standing of the club. Most members concurred that the club, as a unit, should not take a very definite stand on the war. The war, they felt, was an individual matter that had to be dealt with by each member in his own way, and it was duly noted that each member had the right to voice his own opinion at any time.

The club meets every Thursday in the private dining room of the Student Services Building at 12:15.

They Put the Books WHERE ?

The Kennesaw Junior College Library has approximately 22,000 books that most students have never seen. Each volume is recorded on a three-by-five card and is part of a progressive and futuristic system called MICROBOOK. The 4 x 6 cards are called microfiche.

Each microfiche card resembles a large piece of smoke-tinted film with up to 1000 very small rectangles printed on it. Each rectangle is one page of a book.

A viewer for the microfiche cards, called a MICROBOOK reader, is found in the microfilm room in the back of the library. Instructions for operation are found on the machine.

A collection of books called The Library of American Civilization, which contains material relating to all aspects of American life and literature prior to World War I, accounts for 20,000 volumes. The remaining 2000 volumes are called The Library of English Literature.

Both collections are published by the Encyclopedia Britannica Company. They include pamphlets, periodicals, documents (public and

Dean Explains Aid

Federal aid that Kennesaw students may receive was explained recently by Thomas Patterson, Assistant Dean of Admissions and Director of Financial Aid at K.J.C.

The three types of federal aid, he explained, are the college work-study program, Educational Opportunity grants, and National Direct Student Loans.

Mr. Patterson went on to say that the federal aid Kennesaw receives is decided by the state legislature. The legislature is allotted the money by the Federal Government, and divides the funds among the state supported schools.

The college work-study program provides jobs for students attending school. These participants may receive from $1.45 to $3.50 per hour, but may work only 15 hours a week while attending classes.

The Educational Opportunity grants provide from $200 to $1,000 for persons who would be unable to attend school without this aid. Applicants must enroll as full-time students and be academically capable.

There is no repayment on this type of loan.

The National Direct Student Loans are different from the other loans in that they must be paid back. The interest on these loans is 3 percent per year beginning nine months after the student has ceased to be enrolled as even a part-time student. Repayment may be spread out over a ten year period.

The Federal Government also offers special loans for students in the fields of nursing and law enforcement.

Viet Nam Footnotes

By Robert Webb

The official ending of the Viet Nam War marks the end, hopefully, of twenty-four years of fighting in Viet Nam. The Conflict began with the expulsion of French provincial troops in 1949. Fighting raged on after the French were gone, though, as the country was split into two nations, one ruled by Communist-oriented factions, the other by a military dictator. President Eisenhower first sent 900 Army advisors to Viet Nam in the 1950's, and President Kennedy pledged to send unlimited aid to the Vietnamese people as long as they were threatened by the Communists. It wasn't until after Kennedy's death that the huge buildup that sparked so much turmoil in America began. As the 1,500,000 U.S. troops fought a war of counter-insurgency, the young people of America began to fight a war of their own, with a price in human lives that rose to a cost that no one in the nation really wanted to pay. At the end of 1971, when it was announced by a Gallup poll that 54% of the American people were opposed to the war, the beginning of the end was initiated. President Nixon began to utilize the "secret plan" that he had spoken of during the 1968 elections, and slowly, inexorably, the war drew to a close. Now there has been the official announcement that there will be no more American involvement in Viet Nam, and the long, long war has ended.

CAMPUS COED

Photos by Barry Banks

by Marshall Trawick

"He who reasons rather than storms is the stronger." This old Chinese proverb seems to aptly fit Miss Diana Benson, our campus coed for February.

Diana is a fifth quarter sophomore, majoring in physical education. After graduation, she plans to work at the Georgia Retardation Center in Atlanta. Diana feels that retarded children are neglected because people are afraid of those they don't understand.

After class, her favorite pastime is riding horses. Diana began riding at a tender young age, and has participated in quite a few equestrian events across the Southeast.

In addition to her grace and style as a horsewoman, Diana plays the piano and organ. Quite proficiently, we might add.

Pre-registration Dates Set

THE SHANTY RAG

Important Dates:

The dates for pre-registration and pre-advisement for the Spring Quarter have been announced by the Registrar's office.

The dates set for pre-advisement are Feb. 15-16, a Thursday and Friday, and Feb. 19-20, the following Monday and Tuesday. Before these days a student must make an appointment with his advisor to get his course schedule card filled out.

Mr. T. H. Rogers, Registrar and Director of Admissions for Kennesaw Junior College, urged students to take advantage of the services offered at pre-registration, both for their own convenience and for the lessening of the load on the school's advisement staff.

The dates named by Mr. Rogers for pre-registration are Feb. 21-22, a Wednesday and Thursday, in the private dining room of the Student Services Building.

Sophomores will register on Feb. 21 with the freshmen and all others registering on the next day.

"A person who isn't pre-advised must go through all the difficulties of the regular registration day," Mr. Rogers stated.

"A student must have a completed course schedule card by the time he gets to pre-registration, or he will have to go through the regular routine on March 22, the regular registration day," he explained.

According to Mr. Rogers, any student who does not know his advisor should check either the Registrar's office or the Guidance Counseling Office, or they should see the divisional office for the division they plan to major in.

Mr. Rogers stressed the importance of as many students as possible going through pre-advisement and pre-registration, saying, "Students who are pre-registered and want to change a course can do so between Winter and Spring Quarters. They will go through registration in about 15 minutes, and they will have more courses offered to them.

"This way," the registrar continued, "everyone will be more likely to get the course he wants. The advisors will be able to spend more time with each individual student, and this will result in better advising for the students."

"I urge all students to take advantage of these services."

A committee of registrars and academic deans, formed to make uniform the calendars of all institutions in the University System of Georgia, has submitted three recommendations to the University System Advisory Council.

According to Kennesaw Junior College Dean Robert H. Akerman, "The revised calendar has been approved by the presidents of the institutions, it will go into effect in Fall, 1973."

The recommendations are as follows:

1. The three regular quarters are to be not less than 11 calendar weeks each, including registration, instruction, examinations, and reporting of grades to the registrars. This will normally include ten full weeks of instruction.

2. The scheduling of summer quarter work may be flexible but with the stipulation that all summer quarter work be equivalent to that done in other quarters with respect to instructional time.

3. The following earliest beginning and latest ending dates will be observed by all institutions in the System:

(The quarter is listed first, then earliest beginning date, and latest ending date.)

Fall, 1973; Sept. 10, Dec. 18; Winter, 1974, Jan. 2, March 21; Spring, March 25, June 8; Summer, June 12, August 30; Fall, Sept. 9, Dec. 18; Winter, 1975, Jan. 2, March 21; Spring, March 24, June 9; Summer, June 11, Winter, 1976, Jan. 2, March 20; Spring, March 24, June 9; Summer, June 11, Aug. 28; Fall, Sept. 13, Dec. 18; Winter, 1977, Jan. 3, March 21; Spring, March 23, June 8; Summer, June 10, Aug. 27; Fall, Sept. 12, Dec. 18; Winter, 1978, Jan. 3, March 21; Spring, March 23, June 8; and Summer, June 12, Aug. 30.

private), biographies, autobiographies, fiction, poetry, collections of various kinds, materials of foreign origin relating to the particular subject, and many rare books not generally available.

Bibliographical access to the collection is provided in four ways — Author Catalog, Subject Catalog, Title Catalog, and BIBLIOGUIDE Index (found in the first of two volumes in which the index appears). The Index, listing general topics, is especially good for students doing term papers.

In order to request a certain book, one must get a particular catalog, look up the book, title, or author and obtain a particular number, and present the number to the librarian.

If any assistance in operating the MICROBOOK reader is required, any librarian or assistant will provide it.

Sergeant Pepper

Epitaphs are written every day, they don't mean much to this world and this one is no different.

I'm not so vain as to believe many, if any, of you who have been so kind to read have been understanding what I've tried to say.
The title of the column alone is enough to tell you where to look for a beginning to some of the answers you seek-Listen, Children, what's that Sound?
Listen to the music and let it open your minds and your hearts and let it bleed if that's the way it has to be.

Don't be afraid to be hurt or to choose not to be hurt, or afraid to hide or show your feelings or thoughts.
It's you who decides - don't be afraid to be free to love the best you can with what you know of love.
Through loving you learn love more,
but don't sacrifice yourself on the alter of anyone else's ego either, only on your own, though you'll find in time that all our alters are the same, that Love is constant, and that we are all merely a many splendored rainbow expression of one love in action.

Love is the answer,
honesty is a key to the door of Love,
and honesty begins with your own self.
Realize anything you do or say is going to be misunderstood by someone, but also realize that it hurts more not to say what you feel, not to be what you are.
Respect yourself, and you won't feel the need to put anyone down, to hate, or hurt, anyone else Black or white, souls the same, and you are beautiful just the way you are if you'll let yourself be, and respect others as you would like to be respected.

It's your choice.
you're not selfish, bad, or evil,
if you think of yourself first.
You're as much God as anybody and as awareness of self grows love and awareness of the sanctity of others must follow.
You cheat yourself more than anyone else by shutting yourself off. Deprived, you deprive me, there's a world of love
"hidden deep within your eyes."
I'd love to stand in your sunshine
while I have the time, but it's your world. . .

Column too long, epitaph continued some other time.
Train's awaiting at the station: Roll up, Roll up, for the Magical Mystery Tour.

Ms. Virginia Hinton, Associate Professor of English at Kennesaw, has announced that specially discounted season tickets to the Alliance Theatre are available through her office. In addition, she stated that a series of "teacher's previews" will be run by Alliance, with reduced rates rates on groups of ten or more students for these performances.

The regular season tickets, student priced at $12.50, are good for the next four performances by the Alliance Theatre Group. The productions are:

The Glass Menagerie by Tennessee Williams-Feb. 1-17.
The House of Blue Leaves by John Guare-Feb. 22-March 10
Heartbreak House by Bernard Shaw-Mar. 15-Mar.31
Tobacco Road by Jack Kirkland, adapted from a novel by Erskine Caldwell-April 5-April 21
The Comedy of Errors by William Shakespeare -Apr. 27-28, May 4-5, May 11-12

All interested parties should contact Ms. Hinton in Humanities 208, or call her at Extension 268.

Science

Dept. Experiments

By Paul Flanagan

The Natural Science and Mathematics Division of Kennesaw Junior College is undergoing a series of changes and experimentation that may bear watching by the rest of the school. The changes are designed to increase the efficiency of the department in the field of educational capability.

Among the innovations being put into effect are: Videotape programs being used to teach chemistry and biology courses.

An introduction to computer sciences in Math III.

A programmed approach to math that allows the teacher to depart from the textbook at what he considers the important points of the course.

A self-study program in physics that allows the student to pick a project which he can work on at his own speed, with the only time limit being the end of the immediate quarter that the student is involved in the course.

The Frank Walker contract method, where a student may agree to reach a certain level of proficiency in a given subject. If that level is reached by the end of the course, then the student passes, and if it isn't, then he doesn't. A mock trial format in biology to examine the pros and cons of genetic engineering.

The importance of these innovations to the other divisions of Kennesaw should not be overlooked. They apply not only to science and math, but to every course of study at the college. That these advances may soon be seen in the Humanities Division is a conclusion that is soon, we hope, to be reached.

Alabama on Way Up

by Marshall Trawick

Everyone is familiar with the famed University of Alabama football team. After all they have attended 15 consecutive bowl games which is a national record. The U. of A., although proud of the football team, has always tried to hide the fact that it has a basketball team. The wraps are now off and the Crimson-Tiders are off running and gunning their way to the S.E.C. crown.

The tide is led by Charles Cleveland, a 6'4" sophomore forward. Leon Douglas is the surprise of the team. Only a freshman, Douglas poses a problem to all the teams the Tide face. Against Kentucky, Douglas pumped in 32 points in a losing cause. Wendell Hudson is one of the shortest centers in the S.E.C. Although only 6'6, Hudson has the leaping ability of a man much taller.

Alabama should win the Southeastern Conference. If they do, it will bring some well deserved fame for a team that has come a long way.

Today the S.E.C.
Tomorrow the N.C.A.A.
