

MEALOR RESIGNS AS S.G.A. HEAD

by Robert Webb

Letter from Allen Mealor to the Kennesaw Jr. College S.G.A.

It is with much regret, and after much thought, that I hereby resign as president of the Student Government Association. This action is due to many things, among them my academic average (2.0), financial reasons, and my health.

I have enjoyed my term of office, and I leave with no ill feeling toward anyone. I have many pleasant memories of working together, as well as against, many S.G.A. members; however, I hope I have been able to keep things in their proper perspective enough to have lost no friends, only gained them.

I will continue to support the S.G.A., and would like to chair the S.G.A. budget committee. I feel that I am leaving this organization in good hands, and that it will prosper.

In closing, let me say that working with the S.G.A. over the past two years has been an invaluable learning experience, but all good things must, at some times, come to an end.

Respectfully,
Allen Mealor

And so ends the term of office of another president of the Student Government Association. In an interview for the Sentinel, Allen elaborated on his presidency, and offered some general views on the S.G.A.

"If students would stop sitting around waiting for a few people in the S.G.A. to do something for them, then these students would realize that they ARE the S.G.A., and that those in office are just the voices of the people.

"I think," he continued, that when those in office hear no voices, no input from the students, then they must rely on their own intuition, and the result is a minority trying to second-guess a majority."

Allen said that he resigned from the S.G.A. primarily because the duties of office were draining him of energy and depriving him of the time he needs for study.

"The meetings, the legwork and all, were just getting to be a bit much," he continued. "I was going without meals, which was affecting my health, and I

MILITARY SCIENCE COURSES PROPOSED

By Steve Kendrick

The feasibility of offering two military science courses at Kennesaw Junior College was discussed at the February 14 Academic Council meeting.

Dr. Robert Akerman, chairman of the Academic Council and Dean of the College, stated that he introduced the topic solely for discussion and to obtain opinions. He explained that the proposed program was not in a "stage to present as an official proposal to the faculty."

The Dean disclosed that KJC had received a request from the Military Science Department at Georgia State University for a cooperative arrangement to offer the courses Military Science I and II. The courses would be totally voluntary. Upon completing the courses, the student would be able to enter the ROTC program at the junior level at another college.

A member of the GSU Military Science Department, paid by GSU, would be sent to teach the courses. The main cost to KJC would be providing classrooms and office space for the instructor.

Dr. Akerman further explained that the ROTC program officials think it will find more people interested in a military career at the junior college level than at a senior institution.

Dr. Akerman described the proposed course as "opening another career opportunity for students."

SYMPOSIUM '73 SPEAKERS SLATED

By Paul Flanagan

The eighth annual Cobb County Symposium will be held April 27-29 in Atlanta, with the first night to be hosted at Stouffer's restaurant and continued speaking to be held in the Kennesaw Jr. College gym.

The Symposium, entitled "The Creation of Man", examines the experience of human existence through the eyes of the theologian, the sociologist, the woman, the philosopher, the scientist, and the lawyer.

Among the speakers will be Harold Taylor, the controversial advocate of wholesale university reform, Dr. George Schweitzer, chemist and religious philosopher, Dr. Paul Ramsey, Harvard theologian and scrutinizer of the scientific community. Other speakers will include Rabbi Alvin J. Reines, Jewish Philosopher and theologian, Professor Howard Higman, sociologist and civil rights worker, and Professor Harold L. Marquis, law professor at Emory University.

The Cobb County Symposium began in 1966, when the Cobb Medical Society, the Cobb Bar Association, the Cobb County Ministerial Association and Kennesaw Junior College decided to pool their resources to produce a symposium whereby speakers could be brought to provide informative, educational lectures on a variety of subjects of general interest to the public.

The seven Symposiums that have been held since 1966 have covered topics which have usually had some element of contemporary relevance. This year's theme, "The Creation of Man," differs from preceding themes in that it covers a topic not easily discussed except in very metaphysical terms.

The purpose of the symposium, as outlined by Sybil Williams, Assistant Administrator of the Community Services Office, is "to provide a place where questions can be asked and answered. Since Kennesaw is a liberal arts college, it should allow the community the opportunity to expand its thinking. It may sound idealistic, but that's the way I think it is."

DRUG ABUSE

Our newly duly appointed S.G.A. President, Kathy Sherlock, has requested of President Sturgis that the old Drug Use and Abuse Committee be reorganized, given a chairman, and probably a budget, all for the purpose of "educating" students at Kennesaw to the evils of dope.

Let's face it, there is a dope problem at Kennesaw. . . too many dopes. Students here that are inclined to use drugs already know more about them than anything these little propaganda packs from the U.S. government or other uninformed sources could tell them anyhow, so why go and waste good students money and peoples time with an organization that didn't work in the first place? Kathy is to be commended for her concern with the welfare of the student body, and possibly for her concern with S.G.A. elections next quarter but the way back into the president's office isn't by squandering valuable resources on a worthless project.

The only exception to failure that a committee such as this might take would be if ALL intoxicating substances, from grass to strychnine, was legalized, and it was recognized as an infringement of a person's constitutional rights to prohibit him from putting anything he wanted to into his body. . . as long as it was done quietly and caused no harm to others. Then drug education on a sweeping scale would be the order of the day. . . but not to tell a disinterested pack of card-playing students that marijuana will turn them into raving psychotics after the first puff. This is the quality of drug education that we have received in the past, and until farcial pamphlets such as this are taken out of circulation and replaced with objective, educational material that can be placed in the hands of those who really need it (i.e. grammar school children, or, more importantly, their parents), then the hopelessly inane Drug Use and Abuse Committee is just as well off dead and buried in the collegiate red tape that binds Kennesaw so hopelessly to the past.

LINES ON LINES

By Vickie Poteet

In days of old, a person had the right to defend what was his and to protect what he had worked so hard to accomplish. This unwritten code apparently seems to be the only effective solution for a person to guard his line position from rude, selfish, and inconsiderate line breakers during pre-registration at KJC. Line breakers are people who are too lazy to get up from a card game and wait in line for their own position. These inconsiderate people would rather rely on a friend who has waited for a decent position to put them ahead and the friend doesn't have the heart to tell the line breaker to get in the back of the line where he or she belongs. These line breakers display a lack of character and conscience in my opinion.

It's funny how these line breakers are willing to lose friends to get ahead in line of others in order to get the classes they claim they so badly need. Yet, after they have successfully gotten the classes they wish and in the process lost some friends, these same line breakers can be seen sitting in the student center two weeks after the new quarter starts. To do what? Play cards, drink coffee, and tell about their newest dope or drinking experience from the preceding weekend.

It's sad to me that a student must resort to knocking the hell out of a poacher to defend his place in line.

I have no solution to the line breaking problems, except to resort to the old unwritten code, "defend your position." I have no solution to the pre-registration problem itself. But the reason this school has hired counselors is to solve student problems around the campus. I believe the way pre-registration is set up is a definite student problem.

Any solutions to this problem, counselors?

EARTH DAY REVISITED

By P.E. Bostick

One of the most interesting social phenomena of the past year or two is the return to apathy of the American college student. Some of the evidences for this are the Nostalgia craze that is sweeping the country; college students are having beer busts and are worried about their GPA; fraternity initiations are up 18%; and we might expect a panty raid or two on residential campuses this spring. Whatever happened to the student radicals of the Sixties. . . the Age of Civil Rights, Berkeley, Columbia, Hippies, Yippies, and the Woodstock Nation? Most of them have just grown older. But why the return to blandness of the present student generation? College students are traditionally the avant-garde of society and have been up front in most recent social movements. Now their energies are devoted to driving to Dallas for Coors beer.

My main concern is the environmental/ pollution problem that is still with us. Remember May 1, 1968, Earth Day, when everyone picked up trash and cleaned out streams? No one seems to care anymore or at least care enough to become an ecological activist. There may be a couple of reasons for this apathy. One of these is probably the apparent futility of demonstrations against (and for) certain aspects of the "Establishment". Few, if any, pollution problems were solved by Earth Day five years ago; I do not believe that the Vietnam War was shortened by one second by twelve years of protest; and most people involved in the Sixties civil rights movement feel that it was unsuccessful in erasing racism, even though it did result in some legislation.

The second reason for the unconcern or at least unwillingness to confront power probably stems from the Kent State episode and others like it in 1968. Student activists began to believe that their causes were not worth dying for and the various movements either dried up or went underground.

Ecologists and conservationists are still aware of the continuing environmental crises with air, water, pesticides, and population growth. These problems do not go away by themselves; but nobody seems to be interested in them any more. We were bludgeoned over the head with ecological problems for several years and nobody ever actually saw a major crisis that resulted in loss of lives and money. These things will happen eventually and we will probably see an attitude change then.

MOANS FROM MARSHALL

By Marshall Trawick

Since my first day on the SENTINEL staff, I have heard arguments between the SENTINEL and the Student Government Association continuously. I do not remember any discussions which were published to be invalid.

It is the SENTINEL's job to report any malfunctions in S.G.A. We understand that like all governments, S.G.A. has its problems. Our sympathy runs short however when they continue endlessly.

Apparently, apathy extends down to many senators and officers of S.G.A. It is nearly impossible to be absolutely sure just who the senators and officers are. Resignations are announced at nearly every meeting. Recently, the President, Vice-President, and Secretary decided to throw in the towel. It seems as though the torrid pace that S.G.A. marches to is just too much for some people to take.

At the time of this writing, I have been waiting nearly three months for a copy of the attendance record of Senators at S.G.A. meetings. During the February 21 meeting of S.G.A., I was told that the minutes for many meetings have been misplaced.

Incidentally, the secretary for this meeting was one of the Senators, Connie Guy. It seems as though she has had to take over the the regular secretary. Surely the S.G.A. needs these minutes more than the Sentinel.

The SENTINEL would be more than happy to work with S.G.A. However, S.G.A. has to make some attempt, no matter how FEEBLE, to get with it.

met at Kennesaw are not exactly lacking in emotion. It's painfully true that they don't, for the most part, have any idea of how to focus all these budding emotions, or how to kindle interests that are going to do them any good, but the potential is there. . . indeed, as my empathetic ideal, George Bernard Shaw, pointed out in Man and Superman, the potential is always there, and it's just a question of the breeding and feeding of that human potential that's needed. Until people, not just at Kennesaw Junior College, but everywhere, realize that God still helps them that help themselves, they are, at best, going to wallow in the sad mire of realizing that they aren't doing what they want to with their lives, and that this is due to some "mysterious" inaction. What they'll never see, though, is that the inaction they are griping about is not in those around them as much as it is inherent in their own undernourished little souls. People may still believe in God, but I don't think that God still believes in people. . . and until people realize why, they are just going going to stay a step away from the apes that so many fear they may have evolved from. . . and I'll be damned if sometimes I don't think that some people DO have a good dose of simian ancestry. . . and it's not as far lost in the haze of the past as they think it is, either.

Arabs Are Nice

by Rick Hayden

Ms. Karen Parks, a former Kennesaw Junior College student, told a sparse KJC audience last week that "Arabs are a graceful people, not like Americans."

Ms. Parks, a Georgia State student, recently returned from Saudi Arabia, where her father was stationed as an employee of the Lockheed-Georgia Company.

She explained that she had grown to love the Arabs because of their great hospitality and easy-going manner.

NURSING

Editor, The Sentinel
Kennesaw Jr. College

In reply to the editorial in The Sentinel of February 16, 1973. The Sentinel made an outcry for better health facilities for all students at this college. I could not agree with you more. I disagree with your solution to this problem. You suggest that the nursing department should carry the responsibility for this type of service.

The nursing department offers a problem of studies at KJC comparable to any other program of study on campus. Students enrolled in the nursing program are attending classes and labs as are students enrolled in other programs, such as pre-med, pre-engineering etc. Nursing students have the same objectives as other students on campus, they attend college in order to obtain an education which will enable them to function as professional nurses when they complete the program. They pay the same fees and tuition as students enrolled in any other academic program.

You may wonder why the nursing faculty cannot take on staffing a first aid facility as one of their functions. The role of math faculty is to teach mathematics to students, and the role of nursing faculty is to teach mathematics to students, and the role of nursing faculty is to teach nursing students those courses unique to their program of studies. Nursing faculty are employed with the same duties and responsibilities as are all other academic faculty, be they mathematicians, biologists, or specialists in the social sciences or humanities. Nursing faculty can be found on campus rather infrequently, as most of them spend a great deal of their time in the clinical areas, be this the hospital, nursing home or some other facility. Yes, they teach theory on campus, at regularly scheduled hours, much like other faculty. Do you suggest that they be called out of class to attend to a fainting student? Or do you suggest that nursing students should be required to staff a first aid station in lieu of classes or labs?

Graduates of the nursing program at Kennesaw Junior College have performed well on their licensing examinations, and are functioning at a high level in the employment situations. Do you suggest diluting the educational process by having them attend a first aid station?

HOGGING IT?

Mr. Webb:
You write really well; you have quite a good vocabulary. I commend you.

I don't, however, see many news stories here. I can't understand why you don't make use of the news stories from the Shanty Rag. They are the kinds of stories needed in a school paper and are "ready made."

It appears to me that you have a tendency to do too much editorializing and to do too much of the writing yourself. Six of the articles in this small amount of copy bear your name. The Sentinel should not be just a vehicle for the editor's "pet subject" (yours appears to be drugs).

In most papers with which I am familiar the editor's name as a contributing writer appears infrequently. The editor usually controls it all but seldom does he write more than one or two editorials per issue.

I already hear some criticism to the effect that the paper is Webb's paper. It would be wise not to "hog it."

David Jones

APATHY

Dear Sirs:

Webster's Collegiate Dictionary defines apathy as a lack of feeling, passion, or emotion, and as indifference. After wandering the hallowed grounds of Kennesaw, I realized that the plague of apathy prevails. Admitting also that it is a detrimental fact, I realize that it is growing with each passing day, encompassing not only minds but bodies.

If cards, smoking, and coffee were all that was required for a Ph.D., K.J.C. would be well endowed with Doctors of Apathy. Do you suppose the Board of Regents would vote for such a program?

To see the clear nature of life on campus, one turns to a flashing sign that displays on its gaudy features events of the future (you mean no one noticed?) The discussion of apathy dominates conversations, shrinking the whole scope of life at Kennesaw.

along with i.d. cards, the school should issue apathy cards, by which the student that shows the most apathy hole-punches at the quarter's end receives the much-coveted "Purple Aardvark of Apathy". To apply, one needs only to drain 176.5 cups of coffee, play 4,032 hands of bridge, and smoke 2,430 cigarettes, all in one week. . .small prerequisites for such a lively group.

The S.G.A. started a vicious rumor the other day. They leaked the word out that forty students attended a council meeting. Don't worry, students, the source of information was quite unreliable. K.J.C. has become the home for manic depressives, those glassy-eyed refugees from Apathy, Inc. This majority has a hold over Kennesaw students, and is preparing to take over by means of a cry-in. Everyone bring your crying towels, for the big event is not far away!!

PARANOID RAVINGS FROM THE INNER OFFICE

By Robert Webb

Not a day passes that some bright individual isn't in my office, usually sitting in what I fondly refer to as "my" chair with both smelly feet on what I fondly refer to as "my" desk, telling me that I should take the bull by the horns and write some stunning editorial on apathy that will mobilize all the students at KJC into some sort of earth shaking action. Apathy has been, and in all probability will continue to be, one of the pet subjects of high school and college journalists from now until the revolution. . .whenever that will be. Personally, I am sick of apathy, and I say the hell with it. Apathy is the foundation of the American people, and I'm not about to try to destroy the ideals of a whole nation, and get my paper closed down in the process.

My many detractors are fond of telling me that my "go to hell" attitude carries over from apathy into everything else I talk about, and to an extent, this is true. However, right now I want to tell you dear readers all about apathy, primarily so people will get off my back and let me try to run a paper that can concern itself with something more important than apathy. . .empathy. Rather than sit around and wear my fingers to a nub trying to convince people that they should get off their collective asses and go to work to build a better world, I would urge them to try to have a little empathy for their fellow man. Empathy, for those of you who went to public schools for twelve years, is the projection of one's personality into the personality of another for the purpose of reaching a better understanding of the other person; in short, the intellectual identification of one person with another.

This, then, is what I am calling for. Not a moratorium on apathy, for, as I said, apathy is a way of life for so many people that to call a person apathetic is, indeed, a case of the pot calling the kettle black. Instead, I say that people should look at those around them, and try to put themselves in the places of others. Every day, people come crying to me with a flower in their hand, telling me that others don't understand. If there were more feeling for others by all the quasi-apathetic people here, then there would be possibly a little more human action, and a little less crying about how cruel and insensitive people really are. Damn, I know how cruel people are. . .I've been dragged through it just as much as all those people who've lived at home with Mommy and Daddy for twenty years, and I know a good deal from firsthand experience about how little most people care for what happens to others. This lack of empathy is but another form of apathy anyhow, and it's just as hard to live with when it walks all around you as it is to go on with life when your "steady" for the last three months finds someone else to go out and ball with. There's one difference, though, between all those people who have lived with Ma and Pa all their lives and a wandering bum like me. . .I've realized that the world doesn't come to an end when your feelings are hurt or when people won't do anything to better themselves. This is my credential for having the sheer audacity to advise others as to the way they should live. . .God knows I may be wrong, and everyone who reads this may disagree with my ideas. I might not agree with your ideas, either, but I'll pick up my axe and fight like a barber to defend your right to disagree with me; more importantly, I'll try to plant some small seeds in your mind so that you'll pick up your own razor and fight for yourself.

This, then, is why I ask you to have just a bit more empathy for the people you associate with on a day-to-day basis. Apathy is defined as a lack of emotion as well as a lack of interest, and most of the people I have

"It was, though, a beneficial thing to do, working with people and learning the advantages of working through the proper channels. If people recognized the potential of the S.G.A., then they could make it into an effective campus organization, with the centered in the student body."

Mealor expressed approval of Kathy Sherlock's appointment as acting president of S.G.A., and said he hoped she will be re-elected next quarter.

"Kathy seems to be doing a good job for the time she's been in office," he elaborated. "I'm quite pleased. She's well organized and level headed. I think that she's able to choose priorities and stick to them, and I think that S.G.A. will prosper under her direction."

LAWYERS, LOVERS AND LUNATICS

by Tread Beastly

In the past ten years, the name of F. Lee Bailey has become a household word, almost a synonym for a good defense. Most people view the man as the ideal lawyer, and there are very few who would turn down his counsel, if they could obtain it to begin with. Francis Lee Bailey is a fascinating man, by virtue of his cases if not because of his personality. Now he has put down some of his more interesting experiences for consumption by the masses, and the result is The Defense Never Rests, an autobiographical book that covers Bailey's work in criminal law by telling the stories behind his most famous criminal cases.

They are all here, those headline makers that we all saw in the papers. The "rogue's gallery" that Bailey mentions includes Sam Sheppard, the real life "Fugitive", a man who really was innocent of his wife's murder, Carl Copolino, the doctor who found out the hard way that hell doesn't have the fury to match a woman who feels jilted, and the case of Albert DeSalvo, the Boston Strangler. Bailey took these cases on, not always because he felt that the man was innocent, but because he felt that there were injustices in the establishment of the law, and that by going into these trials he could help make American justice a better, more efficient, and a more just system.

Bailey's courtroom style carries over into his writing, and the rapier wit of a man who has been renowned and villified as the lawyer who always gets his man off comes through, especially in the accounts of courtroom exchanges. The bite of his opinions is twofold, though, as he goes about describing some of the most controversial, emotion packed cases in a singularly detached manner, as though he is both the trial judge and the attorney for the defense. The book leaves one thinking in terms of changes of venue, legal writes, and the thousand and one other legal terms that are always to be reckoned with in a criminal case. It is a dry book in places, with a bit too much harping on points that the author feels have never really been cleared up in the courts. Still, there is a great deal of good reading here, if one takes the time to pick the book up. From cover to cover, it stands both as a chronicle of a great man, one of the foremost criminal counsels of our day, and an indictment of the terrors and criminal injustices that are as much a part of the legal system of America as the criminals caught up in it. Send a copy to a friend in jail.

BIOLOGY COURSES INCREASED

By Rick Hayden

The number of biology sections offered on the new schedule for Spring Quarter at Kennesaw Junior College has been increased by two to try to compensate for the early filling of all sections during pre-registration, Dean of the College Robert H. Akerman revealed Friday.

Dr. Akerman explained that two sections that normally have 25 students have been expanded to 48 students. The dean added that since the labs are designed for only 25 students, two labs will have to be run and more student assistants will have to be added.

Even more sections may be added. Students should check at registration to see exactly what has been done, the dean said.

GO FLY A KITE!

Think you can keep a kite in the air for over eight hours? The Stone Mountain Memorial Association is offering you the kite, the wind, and an unusual place to fly it from...the top of Stone Mountain.

The Memorial Association, under the direction of Ms. Jann Sailors, is sponsoring the event March 24. The kites are flown by teams of two to four members over the age of 18. The team keeping its kite in the air for the longest period of time is awarded a championship trophy. Any kind of kite may be flown, as long as it does not exceed the weight limit of five pounds.

The current record, set in 1972, is seven hours, and 42 minutes.

Interested parties must register for the contest by March 16. Registration may be completed by sending names, addresses, telephone numbers, the name of the team, and the team members.

All registration information should be mailed to Public Relations, Stone Mountain Park, P.O. Box 778, Stone Mountain, Ga. 30083; or call 469-9831, Ext. 216.

registered for fall quarter, 1972.

If the percentages hold true, Mr. Rogers predicted, the enrollment should jump from 1,452 last spring to between 1,500 and 1,600 this spring.

Mr. Rogers commented that he had observed no real reactions from the faculty. "They did a real fine job of advising," he added.

The major problem encountered, the registrar reported, was that many students cut classes to stand in the lines that clogged the student center.

Pre-registration is designed to help students become aware of problems of study and obtain advisement from their academic advisors, Mr. Rogers explained. If corrections in programs are needed, the students have the time to evaluate their records. Pre-registration also gives the students time to react to class and schedule changes, and gives the administration time to open new classes.

Mr. Rogers praised the Student Government Association volunteers, along with all the students who helped.

"The students," he stated, "made their own pre-registration successful."

The purpose of this article is to present an objective cross section of student opinion on questions relevant to the affairs of Kennesaw Junior College. The opinions herein are the solicited, personal views of students on questions asked them by a Sentinel reporter.

The question asked was: "How do you feel about a voluntary R.O.T.C. program at Kennesaw?" The answers were:

Earl Carney: "I find a voluntary R.O.T.C. program very acceptable. If you don't like it, you don't have to participate."

William J. Jackson: "I feel that it would help some people."

Kieth Floyd: "As long as it is not voluntary."

Everything You Could Possibly Want to Know ABOUT LSD but never cared to find out

Stockton, Calif. - (I.P.) - (The following article is excerpted from a bulletin produced by the University of the Pacific School of Pharmacy titled "Pacific Information Service on Street Drugs" sponsored by the Beta Omega Chapter, Rho Chi.)

Our laboratory and others have not found strychnine as a contaminant of street drugs, but reports of "strychnine" poisoning persist. This report will review some of the history of LSD and indicate a solution to this mystery.

LSD (Lysergic acid diethylamide) is a semisynthetic hallucinogen manufactured from chemicals isolated from a fungus (Claviceps purpurea) that grows as a parasite on rye. Closely related lysergic acid amide is found naturally in the seeds of the common "heavenly blue" morning glory (Ipomea violacea) and also in another rare member of the same family (Convolvulaceae) known as Ololiuqui (Rivea corymbosa).

It should be noted here that the eating of commercially processed seeds is not recommended since all such seeds are treated with a variety of toxic fungicides and pesticides to prevent spoilage.

In 1938, A. Stoll and A. Hoffmann of Sandoz Research Laboratories in Switzerland synthesized LSD (1) starting with alkaloids isolated with the rye fungus (commonly called ergot). Hoffmann discovered its hallucinogenic properties by accidental ingestion on April 16, 1943. He lapsed "into a kind of drunkenness which was not unpleasant and which was characterized by extreme activity of imagination" — the first good trip.

Not knowing the dosage he had accidentally taken, he decided to repeat the experiment and took what he thought would be a very safe dosage (250 micrograms). Soon he was "shouting half insantly and babbling" — the first bad trip. He later found that he had taken 10 times the effective psychedelic dosage.

Providing that the LSD is pure, an effective psychedelic dose is 20-30 micrograms orally (2) Classical schizophrenia-like symptoms begin to appear when the dosage exceeds 30 micrograms (3) With doses of 400-500 micrograms there is definite increase in blood pressure, profuse salivation, lacrimation, sweating, a marked increase in pupil size, an exaggeration of reflexes, total disorientation and marked tremors of arms and legs (4) These symptoms resemble the classic textbook descriptions of sub-convulsive doses of strychnine.

A word about dosage is in order, a level teaspoonful of table salt weighs about 4.8 grams. This amount is equal to 4,800 milligrams and 4,800,000 micrograms. Weightwise a teaspoonful of table salt is equivalent to 192,000 psychedelic doses of LSD (assuming the psychedelic dose to be 25 micrograms).

This inconsistency in dosage plays a major role in the quality of the trip since levels of 20-30 micrograms will be consistently safe, levels of 70-100 micrograms will be unpredictable, and levels of 300 micrograms and above will be consistently bad. High doses of LSD can be easily mistaken for beginning strychnine poisoning.

Chlorpromazine (Thorazine) is the best antidote for overdose with LSD, and its use was first recommended in 1955. However, it will not antidote all of the psychedelics, and severe drug interactions have resulted when chlorpromazine was used to treat LSD poisoning that turned out not to be LSD but PCP (phencyclidine) or one of the scopolamine-like drugs. It should be emphasized that the FDA does not guarantee the quality of street drugs.

Quite often the manufacturers of LSD are users and tolerant to LSD, hence they manufacture dosages that are effective for them — blissfully ignorant that the same dosage will be a gross overdose for an individual that has not taken such drugs regularly. The first notice that LSD causes tolerance was noted by Isbell and co-workers at the Lexington Hospital. Significant tolerance can be seen within four days of routine usage.

KENNESAW ENTERTAINS DANCERS

By Rick Hayden

A group of approximately 250 students and faculty witnessed renditions of everything from the Ballet to the Funky Penguin last Monday. The dances were part of a demonstration by the Atlanta School of Ballet.

What started out to be a seemingly typical demonstration of ballet techniques turned into a review of dances from the seventh century to today. Included in the review were such famous dances as the Jitterbug, the Twist, and the Charleston.

Decked out in costumes to match their dance, the performers drew constant applause from the KJC audience as they exposed them to sambas, formal dances, and waltzes.

TEACHER BECOMES CITIZEN

by Tread Beastly

Mr. Mich A. Chan, assistant professor of Mathematics at Kenesaw Junior College, became a naturalized United States citizen February 13. For Mr. Chan it was a goal that he had been planning. Mr. Chan explained that when the decision was made to become a citizen, he received a booklet to study which included facts on American history, structure of government, and the constitution.

The test, which is not hard, according to Mr. Chan, is administrated orally by an attorney.

The real requirement is the desire to become a citizen, he said.

When the test was passed, the appointed attorney represented Mr. Chan in Federal court to petition for citizenship. The petition was accepted, and Mr. Chan became Mr.

Chan: American citizen.

Mr. Chan's other brother is also a naturalized citizen and lives in Hong Kong. The Chans are from Main-land, China but immigrated to Hong Kong before the Communist movement started.

Mr. Chan's thoughts on America were summed by saying America is the best because the people have individual freedom with potential for self-development.

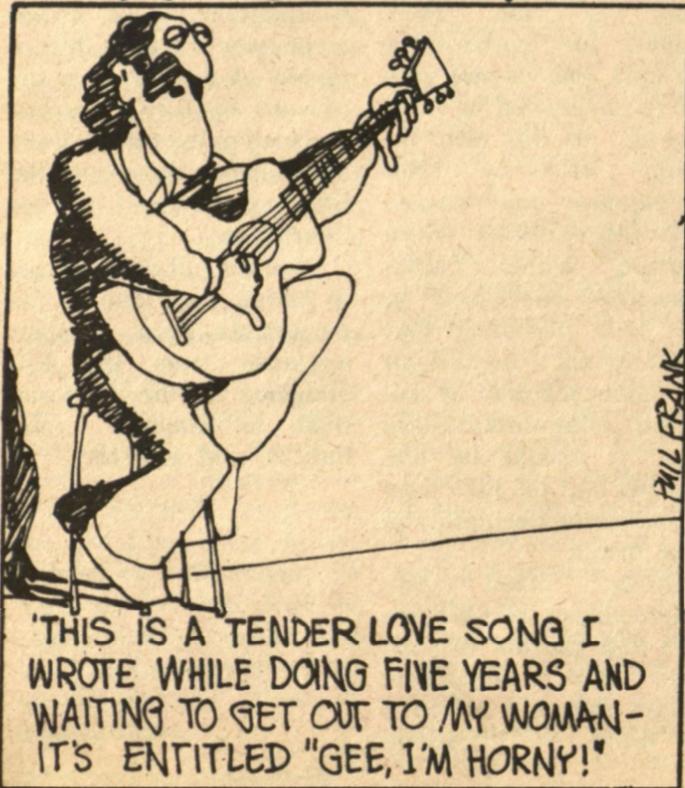

He felt that from the first day Americans were warmly concerned people with understanding for new people. He remarked that the faculty and students have made him feel as a member of the big family since he has been at K.J.C.

Mr. Chan, a modest man, looks forward to many years in America, hoping to learn through experience and to be a good citizen in this nation.

How can you get it together
if you can't take the pepper

God, you pray

though I'm not God in any way you would understand have you ever wondered how it would be to have vision to be able to hear colors,

Crazy, they say, lynching fever strong,

Broken arrow, shoot me, save yourselves

The Sentinel Sensual for March is the Arabs answer to Henry Kissenger, Miss Vickie Poteet. Ms. Poteet, a sophomore will transfer to the University of Georgia in the Spring. Currently a Journalism major, she plans to change to a political science major, minoring in Philosophy.

Vickie serves as associate editor on the Sentinel. She has worked on the Sentinel for two quarters.

After a busy day at the Sentinel office, Vickie enjoyed cooking Armenian and American dishes. She also sews and does some hiking in her spare time.

Vickie takes a no-nonsense attitude toward life in general. When questioned on how she felt about K.J.C., "I have enjoyed going to K.J.C. immensely and will miss it next quarter." With that, all we can say is, watch out Henry Kissenger!

TOAD AWAY

by Griff Cash

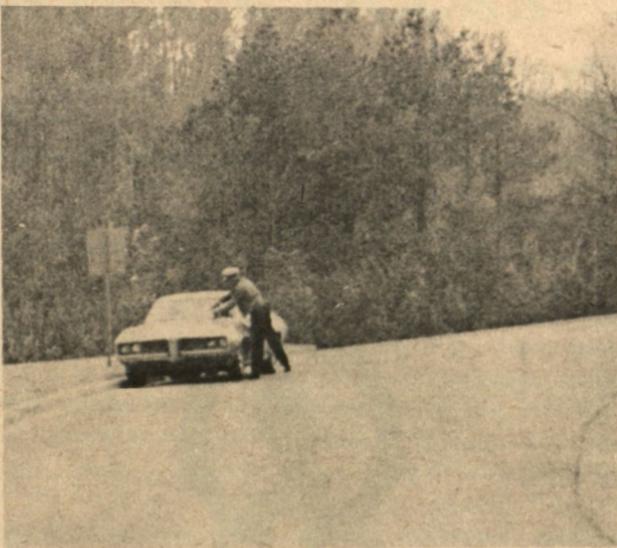

Students at Kennesaw have been warned by Controller Roger Hopkins that parallel parking is "not going to be condoned for safety reasons."

Mr. Hopkins explained that delivery and utility vehicles will not be able to travel safely on the campus if cars are parallel parked along the streets.

"I hope that students will respond to the announcements that are being circulated concerning no parallel parking," he stated. "It isn't over 150 yards from any parking place to any building, and we are going to add the other lot behind the maintenance building to help with the problems of not finding a place at all."

Mr. Hopkins added that towing away cars that are illegally parked was one

A Student English Review Committee has been established at Kennesaw Junior College to deal with students who fail the writing portion of the Rising Junior Test.

The Committee is composed of Miss Alice Knierim, instructor of solution to the traffic problems arising from the closing of the student lots for construction of the new student center.

"We are also planning to survey the campus, and in places where the parallel parked cars aren't blocking traffic, we will line the areas off as regular parking places."

Until this is done, the campus police will continue to hand out tickets to cars that are parked illegally.

REVIEW BOARD FORMED

English, chairman; Mrs. Opal H. Cosey, assistant professor of English; and Dr. Virginia C. Hinton, assistant professor of English.

Students who failed the Rising Junior writing test will be provided with work similar to that on the test. The Student English Review Committee will be responsible for the students' doing the work.

The committee will decide whether the students' work is comparable to that expected on the Rising Junior Test. If the work is not, the students will be required to repeat English 099 or English 101.

All units of the University System of Georgia are required to give the test to students who have 60 credit hours. This test must be taken before a student can graduate from any unit of the university system.

Sex Ad Howls

The student publications board at the University of Nevada in Reno has suspended the editor and business manager of the campus newspaper for publishing a sex-oriented ad.

The board will hold a hearing this week to determine whether to allow editor Buddy Frank and business manager Barbara Raymond to continue in their posts on the paper, published by the student government association.

University President N. Edd Miller commended the board for suspending the editor and business manager, terming the advertisement "deplorable and in extremely bad taste."

The ad was for a sex stimulation device that plugs into a car's cigarette lighter.

Dr. David Harris, head of the Physical Education Department at Kennesaw Junior College, and approximately 12 members of the Physical Education Majors Club will attend the annual Georgia Association's Health, Physical Education, Recreation meeting.

Dr. Harris is president of the state group, which is gathering March 30 at Jekyll Island.

The meeting will provide participants with a variety of activities. There will be workshops as well as speakers from throughout the country.

Kennesaw Junior College's part on the program will concern "Camping for Credit."

"Camping for Credit" is a plan to provide five credit hours for a short course in camping. Students under the leadership of an instructor will camp out for a period not exceeding two weeks.

Times for these camp-outs would be between the Spring and Summer Quarters or the Summer and Fall Quarters.

Those against the course think that the students would take the camp-out as a fun trip instead of a learning experience.

President Hendix and two students from the University of Georgia will have a panel discussion on "Camping for Credit" on March 31. Mr. Hendix explained that he will favor such a course.
