

SOME COLLEGE COURSES ARE MORE EXCITING THAN OTHERS.

How many college courses teach you how to shoot the rapids? Or rappel a cliff? Or find your way out of a forest with nothing but a map and compass to guide you?

At least one does— Army ROTC.

And you could find yourself doing any one of a number of exciting adventure training activities like these in the Army ROTC program.

Activities that develop your stamina. And your self-confidence.

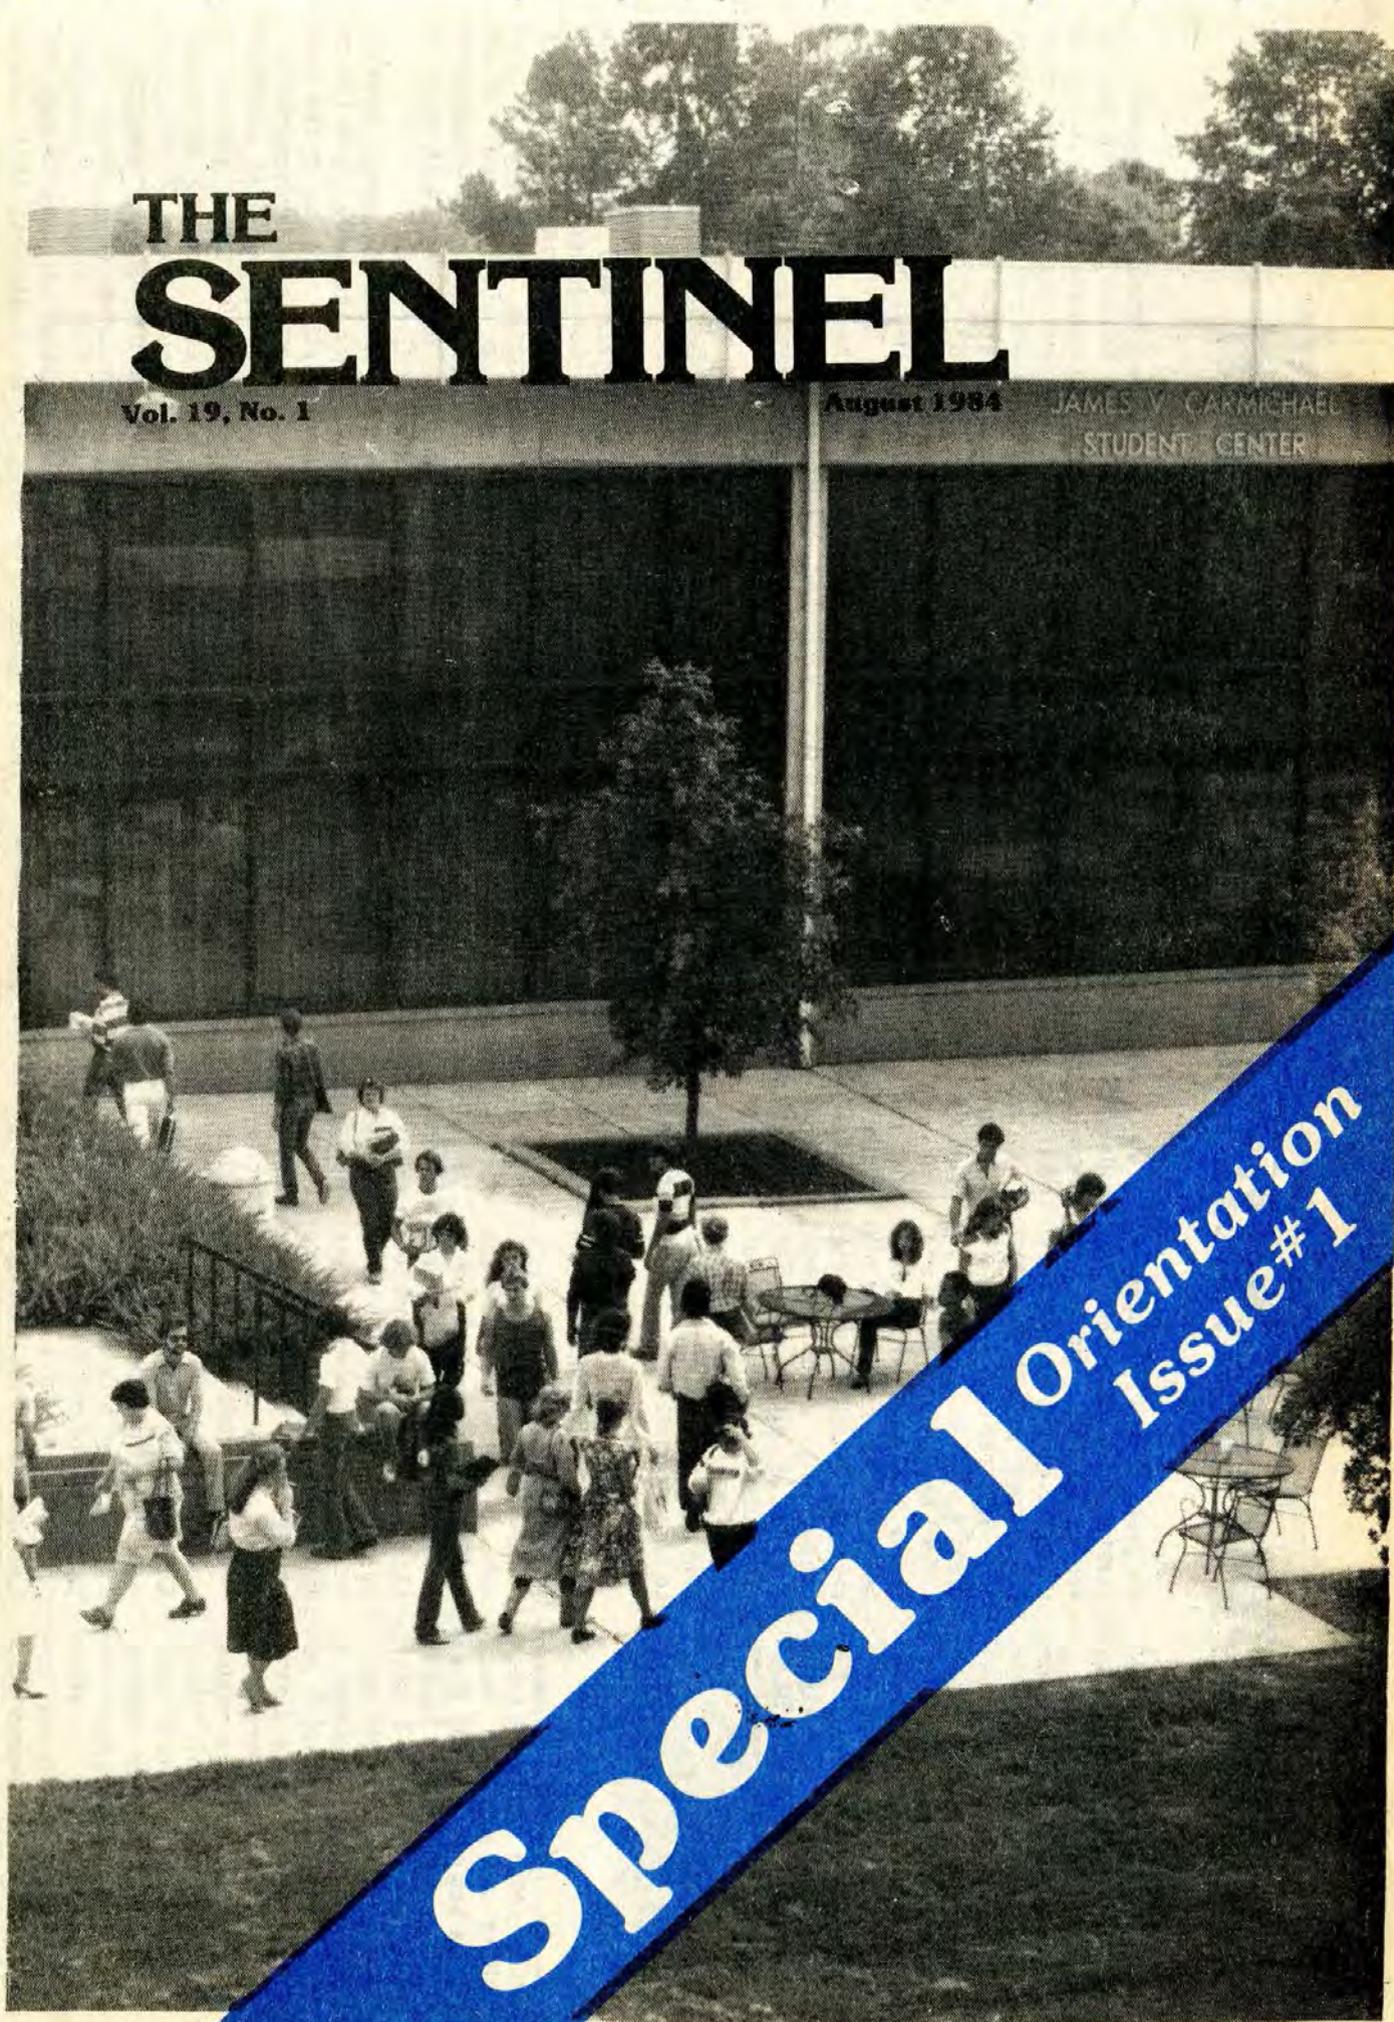

But adventure training isn't the only way you develop. You'll also learn the basics of leadership and management by attending ROTC classes, along with the subjects in your major.

And you'll be excited about two other benefits Army ROTC offers. Financial assistance. Up to $1,000 a year for your last two years of Army ROTC. And the opportunity to graduate with both a degree and a commission in today's Army—including the Army Reserve and Army National Guard.

Avoid Scholastic Pratfalls

by Jeff Grable

Take a few minutes to ponder your future.

You've made the decision to enroll at Kennesaw College and you want to make the most out of your involvement here. But you don't know where to begin. Allow me to lend you a hand. I've got some great ideas.

By way of introduction, my name is JEFF GRABLE.

"I decided that I wanted to go to school to marry a doctor."

Four years of ceaselessly pulling on my own bootstraps has elevated my class standing to that of a second quarter sophomore. I have been around, you might say.

In my time in college, I have seen generations of students come and go. I have seen new students perplexed by the same problems which puzzled each of their predecessors. I have concluded that there is nothing new under the sun and I am compelled to offer suggestions based on my own wealth of experiences as a student.

My advice is free. However, you must be aware that great knowledge brings on great sorrow. Be sure to carefully consider the consequences that direct application of my tenets may have upon your life. After all, ignorance may be blissful.

As I have found, there are seven pratfalls which can keep a student from attaining fulfillment from scholarship. Avoid these snares at all costs. Entanglement in any one of them could lead to the ruination of your future as a college student.

1) Get your priorities in order:

This is extremely important. Decide what you want out of college and go for it heart and soul. I decided that I wanted to go to school to marry a doctor. I have pushed myself, beyond my limits in some cases, to achieve this end. Do you think I'm disappointed because I can't even get a second date with a Chiropractic student? Of course I'm not. The reason is I have no conflicts of purpose. My priorities are in order. If I can't find a Chiropractic co-ed, I'll start looking for a Veterinary student.

Many people find frustration because they work while attending college. My advice to them is simple and clear. Decide what you are and then be that thing. If you're a student, be involved in scholastic endeavors. If you work at McDonald's, flip your burgers with a passion. If, like me, you're looking for medical school candidates hang out with chemistry and biology majors.

2) Allot time from your busy schedule for study:

The classic advice is to set aside two hours of study for each hour of lecture. With a full academic load you'd be in for at least 24 hours of out of class book work.

I find that much time devoted purely to study to be excessive. I only study enough to keep pretty biology majors from thinking I am stupid. I can usually find enough time to study while stopped at traffic lights on my way to school.

"I only study enough to keep pretty biology major from thinking I'm stupid."

Sometimes in the evening, I study during commercials--unless, of course, it happens to be one of those clever beer commercials.

However, different people have different requirements. You should study until you feel comfortable enough with the material to accomplish your particular mission.

3) Stay on top of your class assignments:

This is an important and often overlooked aspect of successful scholarship. Often projects, reports or exercises slip past an unprepared student and ruin his prospects of a satisfactory grade.

I've seen Dean's list students use pocket calendars to post the due dates of their assignments. I admire their style, but I find it rather unimaginative. Personally, I prefer to sit near these people in class and when they begin to buzz among one another I know that something must be due in the near future.

4) Develop intellectual activities in your spare time:

To become a well rounded collegian you need to develop hobbies which will compliment the knowledge you're gaining. I suggest symphonies, Ayn Rand novels, Trivial Pursuit and trout fishing. These activities are bound to stir up your intellectual curiosity.

Be sure to keep the intellectual merits of television programs in mind while you're deciding what to watch. While Tom Selleck might be handsome or Suzanne Somers sexy, neither one of them has as much to say as William F. Buckley. I make it a point to watch PBS--unless "Gilligan's Island" is on Channel 17.

5) Be heard in class:

At every opportunity tell your instructor you're awake and learning. If the lecture is tedious, be sure to tie the instructor up on some trivial point. Pick out something original and off the wall. Your instructor will be impressed with your intuitiveness.

If the instructor tries to skirt the issue, force him to explain why he thinks your question is unimportant. I once bogged down a History class for thirty minutes by asking probing questions about George Washington's step children and their descendants.

You must remember, asking an instructor any stray thought that ambles through your mind is not a waste of time. Their lesson plans are made to be broken.

The 5 Most Asked Questions About ROTC

1. Q: Will I be obligated to the military if I join ROTC?

A: No, not during your freshman and sophomore years and only after that if you want.

2. Q: Are there scholarships available?

A: Yes, there are many scholarships available that pay for tuition, fees, books and $100.00 per month for your use.

3. Q: If I complete ROTC do I have to go on active duty?

A: No. ROTC graduates

may either serve on active duty, Army Reserve or Army National Guard.

4. Q: How physically demanding is ROTC?

A: ROTC is no more physically demanding than a college PE course.

5. Q: Where can I get further information?

A: At Kennesaw, contact 2LT Roger Hackler or MAJ Barry Wingard at 429-2929 or come by the ROTC information table at orientation.

KC ROTC formation begins to assemble.

The Chautauqua Committee is a committee of the Student Union. The committee selects and presents distinguished lecturers to provide a significant contribution to the students and college community relating to current national and/or international issues.

Speakers are chosen to increase the awareness of students as well as aid in their overall education--in addition to the classroom.

Students wishing to be a part of this committee contact Eva Johnson, student chair, or Dr. Pete Silver, Faculty Advisor.

Its first speakers will be Jeff Greenfield, of CBS, and columnist Richard Reeves.

They will debate "The Media Impact on Presidential Elections" at 9 a.m. October 18 in the college's gym.

Financial Aid Still Available

Financial aid in the form of grants, scholarships, loans, or work programs is still available for students planning to attend Kennesaw College fall quarter, 1984.

Approximately six weeks are required to evaluate all information in order to determine an applicant's eligibility and, with registration taking place on September 17 and 18, the possibility exists that all forms will be back in time for registration. If a delay occurs in the processing of an application, a student must pay tuition and fees at registration; however, upon approval of the student for financial aid, re-imburement may be made for expenses paid by the student.

Many eligible students hesitate or fail to apply for aid because they believe that a recipient must be enrolled as a full-time student. Full-time status is not a requirement to receive most financial aid. Academic scholarships do have full-time enrollment as a criteria but need-based assistance may be awarded to applicants enrolled in as few as six quarter hours. The amount of the award may not be as much as for a full-time student but the cost of attendance is not as great either.

The Office of Student Financial Aid is located in Room 155 of the Administration Annex. Students who are interested should go by to pick up necessary forms and to discuss financial aid possibilities or call 429-2774 to have forms mailed or to make an appointment.

Pratfalls Can Be Avoided

6) Always use proper academic titles when addressing your teachers:

Technically, only those people who have attained the rank of Professor or Associate Professor are afforded the salutation of "Professor". However, this is a trivial point of etiquette which is easy and acceptable to depart from.

I call everyone "Professor". It may seem to lessen the value of the term, but then again, it makes those people who don't deserve it feel good. The use of "Professor" on a college campus is like using garlic in Italian food: You can never use it too much.

I apply the title liberally. Policemen, custodial staffers, library assistants--They're all "Professors" to me.

7) Be yourself:

When there are so few strong personalities around it seems reasonable to imitate those people who are winning friends and influencing people. At some point everyone has found himself adopting mannerisms he does not understand or dressing in a way that isn't his usual style. These are just symptoms of insecurity which every young person faces. The important thing is to keep them from affecting your school work.

The main ingredient to being yourself is taking responsibility for your own actions. You may congratulate yourself if, when you make a bad grade you don't accuse your instructor of incompetence.

Sometimes I'm criticized by my friends for acting like Steve Martin all of the time. I don't think it is a problem at all and if they don't like it they can just EXCUUUUSE ME!

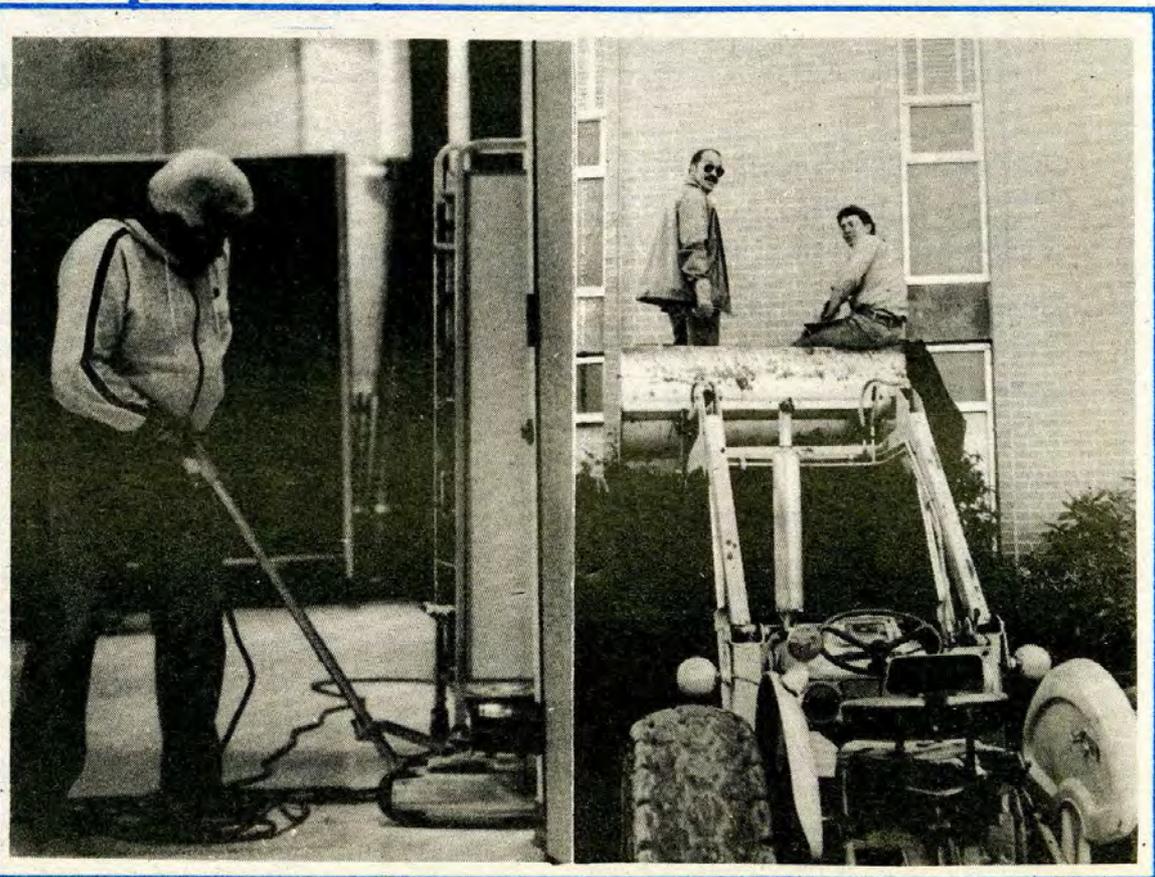

Besides, the girls at the Chiropractic College go wild over my Czechoslovakian playboy routine.

Counseling, Placement Services Offered

by Rose Kovacs Hochman

If you're wondering what major to declare, or maybe you need a job or perhaps you want to improve your study skills or just talk to someone about what's going on in your life — there is help here on campus.

The CAPS center offers a wide variety of services, from job placement and vocational testing to counseling for personal and family problems.

Staffed by trained, dedicated professionals, the Counseling, Advisement & Placement Services are here for the Kennesaw College student free of charge.

CAPS is conveniently located in the center of campus, on the second floor of the old library.

As director of CAPS, Dr. Ruth Hepler explains, when speaking of the new arrangement of student services, "CAPS provides an integrated approach to interrelated services. The location of CAPS in the hub of campus reflects the work of CAPS, because CAPS works in concert with all divisions of the school."

Developed by CAPS from a national program, Kennesaw College now offers a new course in orienting new students to college life. Kennesaw is one of only four Georgia schools with this type of program.

Called KC101, this course is highly recommended by Dr. Hepler for entering freshmen of any age.

Not a remedial course, KC101 is worth 5 credit hours and can be used as a free elective as part of the core curriculum.

The topics covered by KC101 range from effective note taking to health and creativity. The course is taught by enthusiastic faculty volunteers, who undergo special training in order to teach KC101. The student taking this course can also expect to become well acquainted with all aspects & facilities of Kennesaw College.

The course is "a unique and outstanding opportunity for students on this campus."

Because 75 percent of the student body of KC work, the placement component of CAPS is a growing and busy area. In addition to Deborah Waller, the director of placement services, Maxine Price will be joining the staff in the full-time position of Job Location and Development Specialist.

Besides assisting in job placement, the placement staff offers seminars in resume preparation, interviewing techniques and job search strategies.

Placement is also in charge of the co-operative education training program, which allows students to obtain paid work experience related to their areas of study while continuing their academic careers.

As Waller reminds us, "This is the job resource place on campus. We have new job listings coming in everyday for both on and off campus jobs. We have part-time jobs, full-time jobs, and temporary jobs available."

The final unit of the CAPS center is the counseling and testing department.

Working with both individuals and groups the department affords the student at K.C. a unique opportunity to explore his or her potential.

"We are much more than guidance counselors," said counselor Chuck Goodrum.

The staff of four, including director Inez Morgan, has degrees in counseling as well as being trained in practical issues such as study skills.

The counseling department administers the Regent's Test and discusses scores with students. Counselors can administer a number of vocational and aptitude tests to help discover possible career or educational choices.

In the area of study skills, a student can use the center's computer to get a personalized printed analysis of his or her study needs.

This and many other services are offered to students through counseling department of CAPS.

To make use of CAPS or to just find out more about CAPS center, call 429-2966 or stop by and make an appointment. They are ready to help you make the most of your time at Kennesaw

Being Involved: Easier Than You Think

by Julie Cotton

Kelli Burnett, an education major, had been at Kennesaw for one year before she decided to get involved in student activities. Now she has a full-time job with the Admissions Office for the summer as a result of her involvement.

During her first year, someone asked her to join the student government but she refused.

"I lived in Douglasville and I thought it was too far away (from the college) to get involved, which was silly," Burnett said. Finally, she accepted an offer to be an orientation leader.

"Now that I'm involved, I see how easy it is. I guess everybody's just afraid to make the first step. I was afraid," Burnett said.

Burnett is an orientation leader, an Ambassador (a group that acts as a liaison with the community), and a member of the Kennesaw Association of Student Educators (KASE). Previously, she was on the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and the Teacher's Education Council, and she now hopes to be accepted to Blue Key, an honor society.

She is very excited and appreciates the college more now that she is involved.

"Here you can really be a leader and other places you're just a number. You get lost in the crowd," Burnett said.

The co-curricular programs here at Kennesaw are abundant, diversified, and especially beneficial to the students.

Those who participate in this part of the college's educational program not only have fun and enlarge their circle of friends, but they also establish important contacts, which prove to be very useful in expanding career opportunities.

Educational research has shown that students who are involved in activities outside of the classroom have better chances of employment upon graduation.

Mary Griffin, who has recently been promoted to Director of Student Activities, said one of the reasons for this is that the involved student is "more likely to establish relationships with faculty and department heads and acquire valuable references."

As the old adage goes: It's not what you know, it's who you know. "A large majority of jobs filled, about nine out of 10" are filled through referrals, Griffin said.

Those who participate in the student government, publications or special interest groups create contacts through faculty members.

"Networking," establishing a support group and letting one contact lead to another, can be achieved through extra-curricular activities.

"If you get involved in one (club), suddenly you'll find yourself in several," Burnett said. "People will come to you."

"What was really satisfying for me was this job that opened up in the Admissions Office," she said. Part of her responsibility there includes organizing a reception for incoming honor students, a skill she learned through many of K.C.'s programs. She is surprised that job opportunities are already opening up because of her involvement.

"I lived in Douglasville and thought it was too far away...to get involved."

"The opportunity exists for everyone," Griffin said. "All of the departments have complementing organizations, honor societies, or interest clubs."

Griffin and Burnett agree that students who do not get involved are missing out on a lot. "It's not just all work and no fun," Burnett said.

When students say they don't have the time, "it's basically an excuse," Griffin said. "It depends on your priorities. Some people think there's no time and some waste time.

Co-curricular activities have a lot to offer and students must invest their time, Griffin said. There are varying degrees of involvement and participation and students "must take a risk" and set their goals.

"The things we teach," Griffin said, "are time management, planning, and dealing with conflicts." Extra-curricular involvement also teaches students leadership and managerial skills, and it creates self-confidence, which are all beneficial later in life.

"If you're going to get an education," Burnett said, "you need to get a well-rounded education, and education is more than just going to class.

"When you come to college you need to develop academic, social, and leadership skills."

An involved student's resume is very appealing to employers. The participation shows a linking with the community, and a "reflection of commitment and cooperation," Griffin said. Business managers want to establish a sense of loyalty and pride with their employees and KC would like to do the same with its students.

There are many leadership opportunities available

now. "Too few people are doing too many jobs," Burnett said. "We just don't have enough people getting involved."

Burnett would like to see some kind of recruitment policy to encourage participation.

"All the clubs and organizations need people," Burnett said, but "a lot of people just don't bother to find out what's there."

Student Susan Johnson invested her time and this fall, through KC, holds an internship with Senator Sam Nunn (D - GA) in Washington, D.C.

She joined the Chautauqua Committee, a lecture committee, and later became its chairman. A year later, she became Chairperson of the Student Union, the major programming board on campus.

To get the most out of your education you should get involved in co-curricular activities. It is especially beneficial to join an organization of your major.

"You'll get things you just really need and may not get in the classroom," Burnett said. "If you're going to pay for your education, get everything out of it that you can. If it's there for you, then take it."

At Kennesaw, there is every reason to be involved in the numerous extra-curricular activities. Everyone benefits.

Clubs and Organizations

Student Government

Student government is a long-standing tradition in American education. But student populations change with their times and their values. Kennesaw's student body, therefore, is different from other student bodies.

So we find ourselves facing unique situations and unique needs presented by the fastest growth rate in the state, a rapidly expanding student activities program, and one of the most rigorous academic environments in the University System of Georgia.

Kennesaw's Student Government Association has strived to meet the challenges provided by recent years, and we have risen to positions of leadership among the University System's many Student Governments. But we depend on the fresh spirit and energy brought to us by new students every year.

You represent the leaders of the years to come. But now is the time for you to start learning about the issues that confront you as you enter college and the avenues students have available to meet their concerns. And we can always use your support and innovation—because when you register for your first classes this fall, you become a part of us.

Don't hold out on the other side of your education. By attending SGA forums and meetings—and sharing your questions and opinions—and by voting in the elections, helping in the blood drives and other projects, you join in an on-going process that has as much to offer as you can demand of it.

Remember the Student Government Association in this and following years. We won't forget you. You are a part of us.

Phi Chi is the National Honor Society in Psychology. The membership consists of those who have or are currently pursuing a major or minor in Psychology. Phi Chi serves as a direct reflection of the scholastic achievement and interest of its members, and the society recognizes and speaks for those who teach Psychology on our campus.

The purposes of Phi Chi are to encourage, stimulate, and maintain scholarship of the individual members in all fields, particularly in psychology, and to advance the science of Psychology. To achieve these goals, Phi Chi brings a wide range of programs to the campus, and in addition, Phi Chi offers programs on a regional and national level as well.

You will find the programs Phi Chi provides on campus are designed to augment and enhance the regular curriculum, to expose students to academics not otherwise available, and to promote interaction among the membership, faculty, and other psychologists.

The requirements for membership are as follows:

1. Overall GPA of 3.2
2. Psychology GPA of 3.2
3. Completion of at least 3 Psy. courses

We are pleased to invite you to apply for membership now or as soon as you qualify (associate membership is available).

The KC student affiliates of the American Chemical Society, also known as the Chemistry Club Branch of the Associated Science Clubs at Kennesaw College, was one of the most active clubs on campus last year.

The Chemistry Club sponsored several outside speakers, co-sponsored several outside speakers, went on several field ex-piditions, and enjoyed several demonstrations and talks from members of the club.

The Chemistry Club meets regularly in the Science Building; we urge all students to come to the meetings. We especially urge all chemistry majors to join the club, and become a Student Affiliate of the American Chemical Society.

Phi Gamma Alpha

Phi Gamma Alpha is probably not your typical fraternity. But Kennesaw is not your typical college. Most of Kennesaw's students are limited in their free time by work as well as class activities.

With this situation in mind, Phi Gamma Alpha tries to give its members many fun activities to fill some of their free time.

This coming year, we hope to continue growing as a leader on campus. Our fraternity participates in many of the intramural sports and includes newer members in these activities.

We also have a busy fall schedule planned, including many parties, rush period from October 1 - October 14, and various other activities such as working with elderly people. A partial list of dates include a farm party on Sept. 29, a rush party on Oct. 6, a Halloween party on Oct. 31, and many other activities throughout the school year.

Student Activities: A Good Investment

by Michael Martinez

"Student Activities" is not a file maintained by the FBI on politically active students. "Student Activities" is another name for opportunity, adventure, and fun. Kennesaw College offers a well-rounded and expanding co-curricular program with areas that are of interest to all kinds of people.

Whether you are interested in exploring and applying the knowledge and skills you acquire as you work toward your degree--or you enjoy meeting and being with people--if you want to get experience as a manager or leader and work in positions of achievement and responsibility--Student Activities is the door to the other side of your college education.

Every year, when academic awards and scholarships are given out, many outstanding students are overlooked simply because there is a limit to how much recognition can be shown. But outstanding workers and leaders can all enjoy the fruits of their labors in Student Activities. You can begin a task, follow it through to completion, and know you have done your best--and others will, too.

There are more than 50 clubs and organizations for students here at Kennesaw. These groups represent opportunities for students to learn more about specific fields, skills, and intangibles in many areas. But the friends you make through these groups are the factors that will most keep you interested and involved.

Yet there is far more here than just membership in special groups to help you explore and satisfy your interests. You become involved in Student Activities merely by attending the seminars, shows, socials, and other activities the various groups program for you.

By reading this newspaper you show there is a purpose for it--to provide students with a chance to speak to other students, both formally and informally. By attending the free movies, the annual Bonfire in December, KC Day in May, Chautauqua and Forum lectures, and by answering surveys or voicing your opinions at Student Government meetings and elections you demonstrate your support for Student Activities.

How much time you invest in your education is for you to determine. But if you don't do your homework you risk earning a poor grade. And the time you give to supporting and (hopefully) participating in Student Activities may be an investment that pays off from the day you get your first post-graduation job until you retire and beyond by returning to you new experiences, friendships, and knowledge you may not acquire elsewhere.

Whether it's for furthering your formal education, developing your hobbies, meeting new friends, or simply taking advantage of the recreational trips and activities offered through our many programs, your involvement in Student Activities will always mean as much as you want it too--and you will always get back at least what you invest.

Each student must pay $16.00 in student activities fees per quarter, and we believe that everyone should benefit from their money. Don't you? Then we'll be seeing you over the next four years, won't we?

SHARE YOURSELF

Share Magazine is the literary and creative magazine of Kennesaw and is a wonderful opportunity for students, faculty, and staff to share their creative efforts with everyone in the college community. Kennesaw students have talent in various forms of writing such as poetry, short stories, and lyrics and in various forms of art such as pottery, painting, etching, sculpture, and photography. Share is a vehicle for showcasing this talent.

Anyone may contribute to Share by supplying the creative piece with your name, address, and telephone number (your name must be on the piece, but if you wish a pseudonym may be used when printed). Contributions may be placed in the mailbox for Share in the Student Activities building.

Interested in working on this publication? Applications for editorial positions are available in the Student Activities Office on the second floor of the Student Center.

Baptist Student Union

The Baptist Student Union (BSU) of Kennesaw College (along with the Southern Tech BSU) will sponsor a before school retreat on Sept. 14-16 at The Days Lodge in Chattanooga. Our group will leave from the Noonday Baptist Association (1348 Canton Road) on Friday, Sept. 14 at 5 pm, and will return Sunday afternoon. Cost of $22 will cover both nights' housing. You will be responsible for your own food at nearby restaurants or prepare you meals in groups in the well-equipped kitchens.

The weekend activities include a picnic to Chickamauga Lake, two nights out, and Bible Studies on "Responsible Christianity". To register send name, address, phone number, and $22 (payable to "BSU") to Baptist Student Union, 1348 Canton Rd., NE, Marietta, Ga. 30066. If you have questions, call Johnny Pierce, Campus Minister at 422-3347. All incoming and returning students are welcome to attend.
