No official student input is sought

12% Increase in Student Services Fees is proposed

by Kathryn Burns and Sara "Sissy" Bowen

A 12 percent increase in all student services fees at Kennesaw was proposed this week with no formal student input.

Dr. Eleanor T. Hopper, Interim Dean of Student Development, recommended this proposal to Dr. Betty Siegel, President of the college, for her consideration and approval on Tuesday.

The proposal must be received by the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia by Monday, March 25 — during Spring Break — for it to be considered at its April 9 meeting.

Members of the Student Activities Committee (SAC), which is charged with advisory responsibilities regarding the activities budget, said they have not been contacted about the proposal. The committee is comprised of 50 percent students and 50 percent faculty, staff and administration.

Tom McDonald, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, said Friday that usually requests for student services fee increases include statements about student support, such as the results of a referendum.

He said that Kennesaw has traditionally had strong documentation of student support.

Dr. Hopper is seeking to tie the increase in student services fees to a 12- to 12½ percent tuition hike that the Board of Regents is considering next month.

That increase in statewide tuition for the 1985-86 school year will be proposed to the Regents in April, said Jacob Wamsley, Vice Chancellor for Financial Affairs and Treasurer of the Board of Regents.

The increase, to become effective this summer quarter, is based on the Board of Regents' policy requiring that students provide 25 percent of the cost of their education and is also based on the annual increase in the cost of living, Wamsley said.

The tuition will increase each year to achieve and maintain 25 percent student support, he said.

Proposals outlined

In an interview Monday, Dr. Hopper expressed concern over developing "an equitable method of assessing fees."

In her opinion, "tying all fees to the Board of Regents tuition increase seems to be the most equitable."

Dr. Hopper explained, "all fees under this plan will be tied to and limited by the percent increase on tuition."

According to Dr. Hopper, without such a plan, the result will be "disproportionate funding" from several different areas.

The proposed student services fees increase will involve all fees, including student activities fees, athletic fees, applied music fees, and fees tied to off-campus courses such as ski and bowling classes, according to Hopper.

With the new funds generated by the fees increase, Dr. Hopper plans to support new programs for adult students because she maintains that 50 percent of KC's students are over the traditional age and that a great majority of existing programs are for 18 to 22

As of Monday afternoon, members of the Student Activities Committee had not been called for a meeting about or informed of the proposals.

Beginning Summer Quarter, tuition and all student services fees could be increased.

year olds. Two such programs which will be recommended by Dr. Hopper are an Institutional Wellness Program and an Adult Learning Center.

The Institutional Wellness Program will take form of a Wellness Drop-In Assessment Center with on-site evaluation by non-medical personnel of health interests, such as nutrition, lifestyle, percent body fat, vital capacity (lung function) and vision screening. There will also be an outreach program by trained, non-medical student assistants.

The center would be open half the day, four days per week and would use computer evaluation through specially-designed software.

The Adult Student Learning Center recommendation is in response to a petition presented by the group, Students Over the Traditional Age (SOTA), which collected approximately 60 signatures.

The center would be in office space manned in the beginning by student volunteers from SOTA and would be designed to provide students with support in areas of concern such as peer interaction, study aids and procedural orientation.

The facilities would include a study/lounge area with coffee as well as an area devoted to distribution of literature and personal counseling.

According to counselor Kathy Pollard, in the Counseling, Advisement and Placement office, some elements of these programs exist in CAPS now, but with only two counselors without administrative duties to service all KC students, new personnel and equipment are needed.

College states: "The Student Activities Committee shall serve as an advisory group concerning the annual budget for the activity portions of the student services fee....The committee will serve as an advisory group to appropriate administrators concerning policies governing student activities."

Introduces proposal on Friday

On Friday, Dr. Hopper did introduce her ideas in a meeting with Don Sams, president of the Student Government Association, Mary Griffin, Director of Student Activities, Frank Wilson, Assistant Dean of Student Development, Ed Rugg, Executive Assistant to Dr. Siegel, Roger Hopkins, Vice President for Business and Finance and Walt Collier, from the business office.

It had been proposed that some members of this specific group of people be an Executive Committee capable of making "emergency" expenditures for the SAC. The SAC, at its last meeting, voted down the proposal.

Dr. Hopper said that Sams was "very supportive" of her proposal in Friday's meeting and that there was no opposition from anyone at the meeting.

Sams said in an interview Monday that although he supported the increase in student activities fees if new programs were started, "I did not support" the tie to annual tuition increases.

He said he was not even aware that there was discussion about tying student services fee increases to annual tuition increases.

When asked whether he felt strongly enough about the programs to consider his approval enough for the administration to proceed, Sams said, "No, because only one-tenth of the student population voted when I ran for election."

He said he tries to represent the students, but without discussion with them regarding this proposal, he cannot say he is representing them.

"I think that the administration was unfair to propose this with such short notice. It's like taxation without representation."

In the past, he said, students have been given time to discuss increases. He said that calling an SGA meeting was impossible at this late a date.

Sams said he supported the wellness program and felt that it was a welcomed need to the campus, but was unclear about the specifics of the adult learning program.

Griffin, the Director of Student Activities, said Monday she had been unaware that Hopper's proposal was on the agenda for this meeting and that, as a result, she had no time to prepare for the topic.

Griffin said she has no problem with the basic philosophy of tacking on a student activities fee increase with the tuition increase because increases are inevitable and it is better to increase a little at a time than a lot at once.

She said she made the point in the meeting that she was uncomfortable with the proposal because there was no formal student input other than that of Sams.

"Based on current programs and the projected increase in enrollment for next year," she said, "we (Student Activities) would not have asked for an increase in fees, although there has been an increased demand to fund programs out of the activities budget by clubs and organizations."

From her recollection, there was no discussion in Friday's meeting about fees other than student activities fees.

She said that no vote was taken in the meeting on the proposal.

Frank Wilson, Assistant Dean of Student Development, who was Director of Student Activities for 13 years, said that "to the best of my knowledge, never has there been an increase in student activities fees or athletic fees without it going through either the Student Activities Committee or the Intercollegiate Athletic Committee. The SGA has always been involved to some extent in the process."

Wilson said that Sams was alerted to the possibility of the increase on Wednesday and that he did voice his approval in the Friday meeting for the fee increase neighboring 12 to 12½ percent.

"His assumption and everyone else's in the Friday meeting, in my opinion," said Wilson, "was that if there was a fee increase, the new money would be used to support new programs such as those relating to the concerns of night students and non-traditional students to benefit those students that possibly aren't deriving benefit from fees to the extent

Alcoholics Anonymous will hold Thursday meetings

by Michael McGuire,
Certified Addiction Counselor

Contrary to public belief, alcoholism is not a character flaw nor a sign of weakness. Alcoholism is a disease, a progressive, incurable disease that can result in tragedy and death.

The American Medical Association declared alcoholism a disease in 1958. Most studies show one in ten people living in the United States is an alcoholic. For alcoholics less than twenty-one years old, at least half are also addicted to other drugs. In this article I will refer to the alcoholic as 'he', but at least one-third of the alcoholic population are women.

The first step in treating alcoholism is recognizing its symptoms. Common symptoms include blackouts, the "shakes", increased depression, anxiety and paranoia, increased withdrawal—turning inward, DUI's and other alcohol-related arrests, family conflicts, loss of friends, choosing social inferiors as peers, missing time from work or school, decreasing academic performance, marked mood swings, having regrets about things done while intoxicated, and sexual dysfunction.

Many of these symptoms are obvious to people who know the alcoholic. However, the alcoholic is usually the last to realize he was a problem. Typically, the alcoholic denies the real problem by blaming his troubles on other people or outside situations. He believes everything would be o.k. if only Mom, Dad, girlfriend, boyfriend, the police, etc. would leave him alone. Usually the alcoholic clings to his belief that alcohol or other drugs help him to live with his problem rather than accepting the reality that alcohol or other drugs are causing the trouble. His life revolving around drinking, an alcoholic fears living without alcohol. Many recovering people state they thought they would have nothing once they stopped drinking but found they were much happier alcohol-free.

Recovering from alcoholism and drug addiction involves meeting other people who have shared common experiences and have chosen to live differently. Recovering alcoholics learn to feel better about themselves and the world around them.

How much you drink or how often you drink does not determine whether or not you are an alcoholic. What alcohol does to you is the deciding factor. If you believe you may have a drinking problem, contact the Student Development office, second floor of the Student Center (429-7410) or Alcoholics Anonymous. Your phone call will remain confidential.

Alcoholics Anonymous will meet Thursday, April 4th, at 10:00 a.m. and 8:00 p.m. in the Small Conference Room, Student Development Department in the Student Center and will continue to meet on following Thursdays.

that the typical day student does."

When asked if the establishment of new programs had to be approved by the SAC or the Student Affairs Council, Wilson said, "If we are subscribing to the process which has evolved over the past 15 years, yes."

Wilson went on to say that to fund a new program, historically, it would require approaching the appropriate student committee if it is funded out of Student Activities.

"I would assume that any new program proposals would reach these committees for discussion," he said. Although, he pointed out, "I don't see how the SAC or any other council could meet on this proposal before March 25."

Regarding the student input that has been given to this proposal, Wilson said, "I would be a little more comfortable with it if there had been more discussion among students, primarily of the SGA, appropriate councils and committees and/or a broader spectrum of faculty and staff."

Wilson also said that the April meeting of the Board of Regents has for some time been designated for fee increase requests.

SAC members not contacted

Ed Bostick, chairman of the SAC and a biology professor, said in an interview Saturday, "I don't see how it (the proposal) can go through. I think it must go through either the Student Affairs Council or the Student Activities Committee." The Student Affairs Council reviews and recommends policies concerning student activities.

Bostick said no one has called an SAC meeting and said he felt like he should have been notified about the proposal.

"There should be no raise of student activity fees without at least some consultation with students, or at least the Student Activities Committee," said Jimmy Dorsey, a member of the committee and an SGA senator.

When told of the proposals in an interview with The Sentinel Saturday, Dorsey said he did not object to the proposals, but he condemned the fact that there was no SAC involvement.

SGA senators elected recently

The following is a list of the Senators of the Kennesaw College Student Government Association that were elected in the recent campuswide election. The names listed are in no particular order.

Sandra Benjamin, Liz Skinner, Andrew Bresnock, Debra Jane Luney, Lisa VanWelf, and Sam Hunter. Chrissie Parker, Sandra Washington, Nancy J. Southern, Amy Griffith, Laurie Ann Houghtling, and John Curley.

The SGA says that the elections were close, but those who lost, lost by a decisive margin.

Out of almost 6000 student enrolled, only 197 voted, which is less than 4% of the student population at KC. SGA leaders were disappointed by the turnout.

Little student input sought on fee increase

Fariborz "John" Movagharnia, a student member on the SAC and vice president of the SGA, said Friday he was not aware of the proposal and said he thinks the SAC should be involved in the decision.

Movagharnia said he had "no idea" of why fees should be raised.

"I know KC students can't afford much more than they're paying," he said.

When the athletic fee was increased last year, "we were promised that would be the last raise in four years, but now they'll increase it again."

Leslie Brown, a member of the SAC and an assistant professor of nursing, said Monday she had not heard about the proposal and said she believes the SAC should approve all expenditures.

"In my experience, one of our major functions is budgetary decisions," said Brown, who has been a committee member for two years.

"I don't doubt that there are some programs needed to be implemented, but I would like to see it done on a per-year basis rather than the automatic, annual increase," she said.

Brown said she had heard of the two programs because of her contact with Wellness Committee members and because of her membership on the search committee for a director of CAPS.

"I support both programs, but I would be reluctant to say that they merit a 12 percent increase, because I don't know about the costs. I would want more data."

Brown said there was never any mention of funding those programs through student activities fees.

"I think the committee should meet any time there's a decision to make such as this," she said.

Daryl Gessner, a student on the SAC and a member of the Student Union, said he had heard about the proposal by way of rumor.

He was told that the leaders of the SGA and the Union were approached last Wednesday but that no input was requested — they were just told of the proposal.

"Why do they call us student representatives?" he asked.

The SAC, he said, should have a vote on the proposal before the regents' meeting.

"With this being carried through at the end of the quarter when all student organizations are closing down, and they were given no earlier notification, it seems that this was somewhat planned to be rammed through the system with the least amount of resistance, that resistance being the students," said Gessner.

He said he could see a need for new programs, but he had seen no documentation of any new programs.

Steve Hadley, another student member of the SAC, said he has no knowledge of any type of programs such as the ones Dr. Hopper is recommending or of any student activities fee increases.

He said he thinks the SAC should meet on "anything to do with student money."

When told in an interview with The Sentinel Monday about the programs, he said he did not think the programs would work or were needed.

He said the non-traditional student is already overstrapped for time and that SOTA already does what the proposed program would do.

Hadley, who is in charge of the Union's indoor recreation programs, said he had tried to organize some for non-traditional students and got little response.

Time constraints addressed

Roger Hopkins, Vice President for Business and Finance and a member of the SAC said Friday, "I don't know if there will be an increase or not. Ideally, if there was more time, SAC should have been involved. I think there's time for everyone to meet."

When asked whether the SAC should meet, he said, "Yes, there should be (SAC) support."

Explaining the time constraints, Hopkins said, "We received a letter from the Vice Chancellor of Fiscal Affairs of the Regents (Wamsley) regarding the Regents' April meeting. We got this notice on Monday (March 11)

"It said if we were entertaining the idea of fee increases, we must have the proposals into the regents on March 25. This is what stemmed the action to consider increases, and if we had any proposals to have them in by March 25.

On Wednesday (March 13), I relayed the information to Dr. Hopper and asked if she was contemplating an increase in fees to respond by the deadline."

Hopkins added, "No one has been slow in acting on it at such a short notice. No one should be criticized."

He said, however, that the letter was a reminder of the standard budgetary process and time to increase fees if needed for the April meeting. This is annually the time these proposals are handled, he said.

Hopkins said there has been no SAC meeting regarding an increase in activities fees, and added, "I don't think any one (person) should have the final say."

The SGA, Student Union and SAC should meet to see that this proposal will benefit as many students as it can and also to make sure it is what the students want, he said. Dr. Siegel would want student support for this proposal, he said.

When asked his opinion of the increase, Hopkins said, "There's a built-in philosophy that all fees are raised at the same percentage as tuition is raised. There's no way around increases in fees. If we don't stay abreast with needed increases, something will have to give."

Kennesaw's student activities fees are among the lowest in the state, and KC's enrollment is growing at a rate of 15 percent per quarter, he said.

Regarding the proposed programs, Hopkins said, "I think we need to do more for the non-traditional students and the night students. It would be nice to have a refreshment time for the students."

He said the college has already invested money into the wellness program. "Private donors have contributed and the college has matched external fundings, and we can get additional external fundings for the program," he said.

In an interview Monday, Dr. Siegel said, "I understand that Dr. Hopper and Don Sams have good ideas about new services that could be developed through the increase, particularly for the adult students. To me, that kind of addition to the campus would be very good."

Dr. Siegel said she has not been involved in the planning of this proposal, but said she is confident that Student Development officers have solicited the proper input. She said she did not know whether the SAC had been contacted.

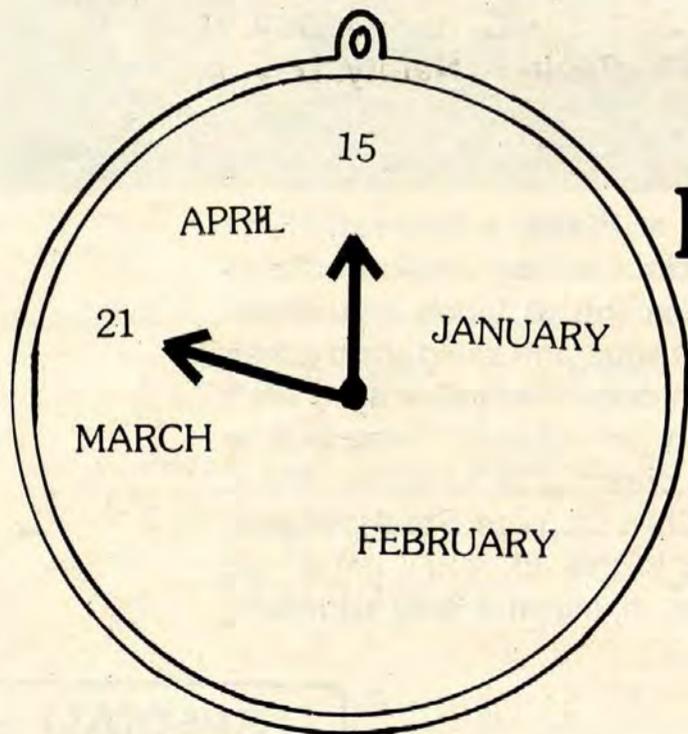

"Don Sams serves as a very informed student and I respect his leadership ability," she said. Dr. Hopper and Sams are abreast of the needs of the students and have a good reading on what needs to be done for the students, Dr. Siegel added.

"You try to gauge as much as you can based on your constituencies," she said.

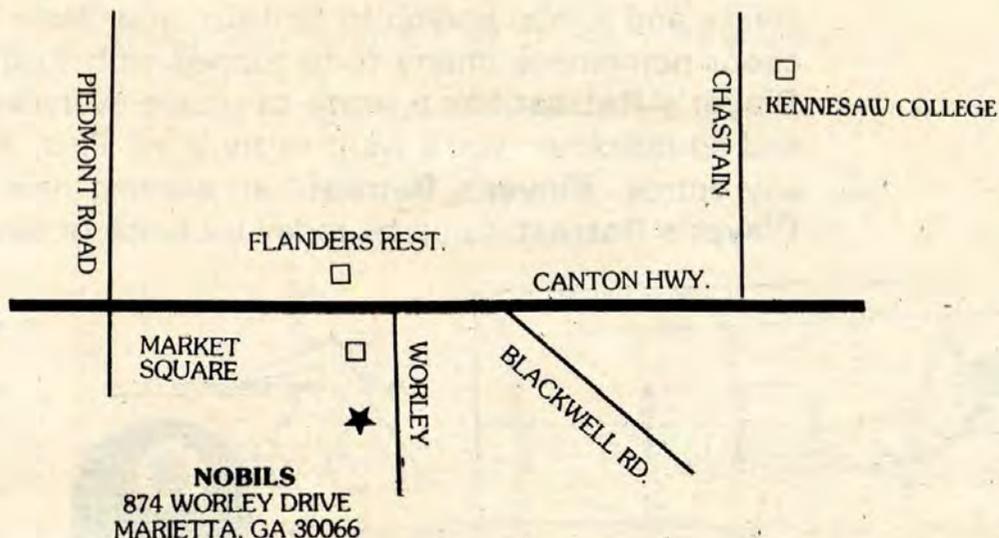

The college is limited on funds and resources and it wants to build new programs, but "we can't do it with nothing," she said. By increasing fees, "we're just eliminating (those) concerns."

Sams said Monday he hopes to start some sort of SGA action on the proposal at the beginning of Spring quarter.

Fill in as many words as you can according to the clues at the left. Each letter has a number below it. Match those numbers with the same numbers in other words to come up with the answers to the clues you can't figure out. For example, if, after answering the first clue, you find that number 6 is 'E' you can fill in 'E' for every number 6 you find in this puzzle.

Armed Angel and The Michael Milsap Band play Marietta

by Stan McPhail

Another bad week on the club circuit, boys and girls. Not much happening at all. I guess that should be expected when one goes "clubbing" in beautiful Marietta. Marietta is a decent place to live, but let's face it, if you want good live music you almost have to go to Atlanta.

The first band I saw this week was "Armed Angel". This is a repulsive little band that one should miss at all costs. They play heavy metal, and they play it badly. The sound was running about 103 decibels at its peak, and the slow songs roared in about 5 decibels lower. The light man must have been on drugs because the only spot light was being used as a strobe. I might also add that this was the only front light the band had. You really couldn't tell who was playing what (as if you would want to).

The band seems to want to be known as a "high-tech" band, and use those horrid microphones you strap to your head. They sound awful at best. The thing I really don't understand is why anyone would pay to hear a band like this. It became apparent that no one had. When the show was over, most of the audience got up to help clear the stage. If I rated bands with stars, these guys would owe me four for sitting through the set.

The second band I endured this week was "The Michael Milsap Band." This band has some potential, not much, but some. The first thing they need to do is learn their songs. They do a version of U2's "Gloria" that is frighteningly bad. The lead guitarist did not know his part, nor did the bass player. The only one that seemed to have it all together was the drummer, and he just wasn't that good.

Michael Milsap himself didn't have the songs timing down, nor did he know the words. I know part of the song is in Latin, but if you're going to do a song you should at least have some idea of what the words are.

The sound for this band started muddy, but did improve some as the volume came down. The people at the Strand need to learn the value of a sound check.

The band did have a few good points. Michael does have a good voice, and the band plays ballads well. But they need to stick with the slower, pop music. You know the stuff I mean. Songs they play on "Warm 100."

In all fairness I should tell you the band has only been playing together since November. That's really not enough time to get it all together. I'll give them another few months and go to see them again. I think former members of Myron Lefever's band deserve as much.

"Baby Maurice" (Murry Sabloff) from the ill-fated "Pacifiers" announced this week that his band will be reforming. The band broke up over a personal dispute regarding their back-up singers almost two years ago. Once owners of the Bistro, a former avant-gard club on West Peachtree that was torched a few months ago, the "Pacifiers" drew crowds that were both steady and large. They played music that was at that time classified as "cabaret-rock."

The band did have minor hits on WRAS radio with "After You Jump" and "Growing Pains." The band will re-form and start playing in late April with only two of its original members. Jon Hoppe, the keyboard player will also be with the band.

I doubt, however, that the band will be able to regain its former grandeur. They were cute, but hardly as sophisticated as bands like "Illusion" or "Guadal Canal Diary." I guess we'll just have to wait and see.

It is also important to note that "Squeeze", one of the biggest "New Wave" bands of the 70's is re-forming. The term "New Wave" was originally applied to this band so their sound would not be confused with the harsh edge of bands like "The Clash" or "The Sex Pistols." This group was a joy to watch and listen to. They did not exude the anger of other bands coming out of Europe at that time.

The group will include former members Chris Difford and Glen Tilbrooks, drummer Gilson Lavis, and the original pianist Jools Holland. This will be a welcome addition to the world rock market, and Billboard magazine reports A&M Records will once again be producing the band's albums.

If you have a band you would like reviewed, drop us a line here at the Sentinel. We'll be happy to take a look.

KC is a great place to be a night student

by Denise Severson

One night during the elections I was approached by a student in the student union and asked to vote for someone he was campaigning for. During the conversation I told him that I was a night student and that I was not familiar with many of the people running for office. His response came as a surprise and went something like this: "Don't you know that elections at Kennesaw are just popularity contests?" Then: "Night students are not really part of this campus, they do not really try to be part of this campus." Although I realize that the student did not intend to be derogatory regarding night students, it struck me that it might be helpful for something to be known about night students. We sincerely feel that we are a part of Kennesaw College and desire the day students to take us as seriously as we take them.

Night students begin filing into the student center around 4:30 each afternoon. Many have come from work. Some are homemakers, and others are also "regular" students who take classes during the day. The student center has a different ambiance during the evening. As one looks around, there are many students studying, something that is next to impossible during the day when the noise level discourages studious thinking.

Speaking in general terms, night students are much like day students. They are studying for a degree--some to meet current job requirements, others to change careers. They are concerned about being prepared for class, having sufficient time to finish papers, projects and homework, and GRADES. Night students enjoy talking with and getting to know their professors. They may even attempt to have class dismissed early and/or their work load decreased! Night students also like to have time to visit with other students, including day students!

Yet there are also some viable differences between night and day students. Night students are generally older than day students and hold full time jobs. They, therefore, pay for their own education so studies take on added earnestness. Where day class schedules allow extra time to discuss topics with professors and classmates, night students work under somewhat greater time restraints. Their social lives are severely limited by their work and study load. The amount of sleep they get while keeping work and studies current is equaled only by the time they spend at meals. Missing class means catching up on two hours of information. Night students start on term papers and projects early in the quarter to assure that there will be enough time to finish everything. Considering their time restraints, catching up with school work is well nigh impossible.

Kennesaw College is a great place to be a night student. We like the students and professors we meet. The professors are highly accessible and understanding about the limits on a night student's time. They meet their night students on an adult level and treat each student equally. Kennesaw professors make it an equal opportunity college.

It is also good to be an evening student at Kennesaw because the college facilities available during the day are also open at night. There is therefore time to get to the library, student center, and labs until 9:00 p.m. or later. Also, there are always staff members in these places to help if needed. These accommodations help make the most of the time available for study and other school work.

Night students even like to participate in the various extracurricular activities available on campus. This gives us a better opportunity to get to know the regular students. It is true that we cannot always do this. However, it is always rewarding when we can because day students help to make it so.
