To the FREEMEN of PENNSYLVANIA.
My dear Countrymen,

I N my last, I laid before you a brief state of facts, together with a resolve of the Supreme Executive Council, of February 17, injoining the agents for the city and county of Philadelphia, to render an account of their proceedings, on or before the 10th of March following; and that on the 19th, two days after the date of the said resolve, I received their verbal injunction to conform thereto, with their promise, that on my so doing, all would be well: Yet, that I had, notwithstanding, been deprived of the benefit of the said resolve, by my books being taken from me on the 22d. On the 23d, I received new orders, namely, to pay all the money by the 25th. On the 26th, I received a letter from the President, setting forth, that I had "made no payment since their order of Tuesday;" In which letter there are two mistakes, as I did not receive the orders till Wednesday afternoon, and also, that I did make a payment this same day, and 'tis more than probable before this letter was wrote: And had I been fortunate enough to have paid the whole, it seems, that all those extraordinary measures would have taken place notwithstanding. On the 29th, the death-warrant of my credit, as well as my good name was published in the newspaper, in a resolve bearing date the said 26th day of February. On the 3d of March, a writ was taken out, by which I was committed to goal the 6th, five days before the time fixed for me to settle my accounts, as, by the by, the resolve do not injoin the payment of the money, but only to ascertain the balance in my hands.

Now my countrymen, to say nothing of duplicity, dishonor, and other acts that degrade the human mind, could those men be acting for the interest of their employers, by taking every method that wit and malice, joined with power, could invent, to put it out of my power to conform to their own legal injunctions? First by taking and detaining my books, and thereby effectually preventing me from settling my accounts. Secondly, by raising a "hue and cry" against my character, and thereby destroying my credit, to hinder, if possible, my paying the money. Report, say they, and we will report it. We will seal it with the supreme authority, and every one must believe; for we are sworn to execute faithfully, and to do equal right and justice to all men. All my familiars watched for my halting; saying, peradventure he will be enticed, and we shall prevail against him, and we shall take our revenge on him. But, whatever my faults were, that swelled the mole-hill into a mountain, I should in every respect, have fully complied with the resolve of the 17th; and also, which was not required, have paid, nearly all, if not the whole of the money by the time. Of this they seem persuaded; for, they could have had no just advantage against me, which I shall make appear.

But on this ground, I shall confine myself chiefly to the Council's resolve of the 17th. I might enlarge on their declaration, which, as the words of the Supreme Executive Head, in whom the majesty of the people center. Was there no written act that would be found binding, and of sufficient validity, to non-suit any action that could be brought against me, till after the 10th of March? As to those other acts, what could be more disgraceful than their manner of obtaining my books? And oh strange! after almost two days close hunting, they caught a disappointment, as nothing like fraud could be found in them; yet, never returned them, notwithstanding their multiplied promises, and that upon their honor, to restore them, after perusal. Add to this the dissimulation and mockery contained in the Governor's letter. But it's painful to think, and much more so, in this public manner to relate, those disagreeable truths, so degrading to human nature. We can justly find courage and freedom, in exposing the base and pernicious conduct of men three thousand miles distant: But would it not become us to look at home, and as freemen, to take courage, and inquire into the conduct of our own rulers? Alk yourselves, my countrymen, this question.--With what propriety can we reproach the British King and Ministry, for breach of honor and good faith; for violations of oaths, charters, and covenants, till we have purged ourselves of things equally base, faithless, and dishonorable, by bringing notorious abusers of power, to a legal, and proper account for their conduct. We see that God has turned the councils of the nation we sprang from, into foolishness: We see disgrace, misery and distress await them. Ought we not to guard against the fatal cruse, lest we should split on the same fatal rock? What will become of us, if God should desert our councils?

But I shall proceed to inquire into the validity, nature, and immutability, of the resolve of the Supreme Executive Council of February 17, 1780. And first of its validity, which rests on the right the council had to make it, which none will dispute, they being the supreme head, and sworn representatives of the people, and by their office enjoined to this business; and, also by the acts of Assembly, under which the estates are confiscated; therefore, this act is just, and valid, it being the act of the whole people in their supreme head. But an act in the breast of the representative, is not a law, till it is promulgated; therefore, this act was published in the newspapers, and printed hand-bills thereof sent to the respective agents through the state (myself among the rest) whom it specially respected, and to whom it became a law. A rule of action; whereby, as officers, they were bound to govern themselves.

Secondly, in its nature. This act differs from the acts of the legislature.--those general laws which may be repealed by the same power that makes them: But this being a special act of the Supreme Executive Power, who represents God in the state, and, as God in a very solemn manner, is called upon to witness all their actions, becomes thereby a party concerned in their official proceedings; therefore this act, could not be revoked, repealed, or disannulled by any power on earth.--And having in it the qualities of an act of grace, it became, and was, an absolute suspension of every law, by which any Agent could be prosecuted for non settlement, or non payment, till after the time limited for that purpose by this act. Therefore,

Thirdly, this act was immutable, it resting on the laws of eternal justice, and as the laws of god and evil

GK

ODE to JUNE.

YE Virgin Nine, inspire my lays,
Now aid my artless song;
For I to June this tribute pay;
To June my lays belong.

She's come in verdant mantle clad,
With dew bespangled o'er;
The lucid drops by her exceed
Bright gems on India's shore.

Majestic now amidst the year
She bears imperial sway;
And Nature decks her stately brow
With all the spoils of May.

The new-blown roses grace her train,
And scent the ambient air;
The rich perfumes of caldren climes
Can fauce with them compare.

How beautiful now the lovely morn'g
When Sol begins to spread
His gildings o'er the eastern world,
And lift his beamy head.

But when the vertex he ascends,
And shoots his torrid rays;
How faint the most athletic then
Beneath his mighty blaze.

In groves, with leafy honours crown'd,
Let's seek a cool retreat;
Or hide us in sequester'd bow'rs
From his meridian heat.

The mowers, who, at early dawn,
Exerted all their power,
Now sunk in aromatic hay,
Out sleep the noon-tide hour.

'Till rolling down the western sky,
Sol shoots forth milder beams;
And to their feythes and labour calls
The heavy Dumber'g swains.

But when in western seas immerg'd,
And night begins her reign,
Then homeward to the lowly cot
Returns the weary swain.

JUST PUBLISHED,
And to be Sold, by
CHARLES CIST,
On the North Side of Market-Street, between Fourth and Fifth-Streets,
An elegant American Edition of
JULIA DE ROUBIGNE,
A SENTIMENTAL NOVEL,
In a SERIES of LETTERS,
By the celebrated Author of the Man of Feeling, and the Man of the World;
In two Volumes, neatly bound in one.
(Price Ten Shillings)

THIS Performance has been so very universally and justly admired, that it needs but little Recommendation from a Publisher. The Story is highly interesting; the Language elegant, harmonious, pathetic, and impassioned. Its Characteristics are an amiable Philanthropy, and peculiar Delicacy of Sentiment, conspicuous through the whole. While it entertains the Fancy and delights the Imagination, it has an irresistible Tendency to improve the Heart and impress on the Mind the noblest and most exalted Sentiments.
To those who contemplate with Pleasure the Dignity of Human Nature supported with many Firmness amidst the reiterated Attacks of adverse Fortune, it will afford the highest Entertainment. And to the Soul of Sensibility, which melts at every human Woe, and finds a Luxury in indulging the sympathetic Tear, this tender Tale of soft Distress will be an unrivaled Favourite.

To the FREEMEN of the City and County of PHILADELPHIA.

GENTLEMEN,
Report being generally circulated through the City and County within two Weeks last past, that I had declined soliciting the Interests of my Friends, to be on the Return with Col. Will, as Sheriff of the City and County of Philadelphia, at the ensuing Election. I take this early Opportunity of informing the Gentlemen, that I will continue my Intentions of soliciting my Friends for said Office at the Expiration of Col. Will's Time, which, if my Fellow Citizens think worthy of, will be esteemed and acknowledged a Favour done,
Gentlemen, your most obedient,
Humble Servant,

THE PHILOBIBLIAN LIBRARY, kept by WILLIAM PRICHARD,

Removed to Market-Street, opposite Lætitiæ Court,
HERE the Proprietor pursues the Business of Librarian, Bookeller and Stationer, is possessed of an extensive Collection of Books in all Languages, Arts and Sciences, also a great Variety of Stationary, selling on the lowest Terms.

Learning, says Bacon, is the Perfection of Reason, the only Note of Distinction between Man and Beast; it delivers the Mind from Wildness, Barbarity, &c.

In this rising Empire, whose Basis exists on the Abilities and Integrity of it's Senators Literature should be universally encouraged, Arts vigorously prosecuted, and the Sciences patronized by the first Characters in the Republic.

Our Senate Walls would soon re-echo the flowing Eloquence of a Burke, Chatham or a Richmond. The Pulpits breathe the Fervency and Devotion of a Tillotson, Hervey, or a Watts. The Bar adorned with the Accuracy of a Blackstone, the Finesse of a Wedderburne, and the Equity of a Camden. And our Stage (when necessary) produce the Talents of a Garrick, Western or Foote.

Our fair Readers may rove through the Shelves of dear Variety, sometimes sipping the Sentiments of a Sereene and Goldsmith, at others Times the Vivacity of a Richardson, and conclude their Repast with the pious and grateful Mrs. Rowe.

N. B. The Proprietor has for Sale, Chamber's Diccionary of Arts and Sciences, English, French, Italian, Dutch and Latin Diccionaries, also Julius de Roubigne, a new Sentimental Novel, Sterne's Works complete, and a very elegant Edition of Goldsmith's deserted Village. Likewise a general Assortment of Stationary, an Electrical Machine, with the necessary Apparatus, a small Telescope, a Quadrille Box, and Draught Board.

A new Catalogue of the Library Books may now be had.
May 25, 1782.

ALL Persons indebted to the Estate of Dr. JOHN KEARSLEY, deceased; are desired to make speedy Payment, and those who have just Demands against the said Estate, to make them known without Delay to the Subscriber: Persons having any of the Deceased's Effects, Books, or Writings in Possession, are requested to deliver them to HILARY BAKER, Jun. Administrator.

On Mondays and Fridays the Stage Waggon will leave the above mentioned Places, at the Hours appointed for the Coaches, and will perform the Distance in the same Time, by returning to Philadelphia and Baltimore, on Tuesdays and Saturdays; so that the Passengers taking their Seats for Philadelphia or Baltimore, may rest assured of arriving at the End of this Tour, in 48 Hours. The Stages will stop 5 Minutes at the Indian King in Wilmington.

Persons taking Seats in the Stage Coaches, are to pay 2 Guineas each, and for each Servant 6 Dollars, Baggage 4 Pence per Pound.

Passengers in the Stage Waggon are to pay the usual Price of 50 Shillings each, and the like Sum for 150 Weight of Baggage. Passengers not going the whole Distance, will pay in Proportion.

Postage, (Single Letters delivered by Penny Post, 10 Pence.

Double Letters, do. 12 do.

Application for Seats in the Carriages, to be entered with Messrs. Andrew and Alexander Robinson, Merchants, in Baltimore, and with Mr. Bergen, at the Bunch of Grapes, in Philadelphia.

As the Utility of the present Undertaking must be obvious, the Subscribers think it unnecessary to make any Observations thereon; but content themselves, by assuring the Public, that no Pains shall be wanting on their Part, to give entire Satisfaction, not doubting but the public Spirit and Generosity of their Countrymen, will enable them to support this necessary Institution to their mutual Benefit and Convenience. They return their sincere Thanks to the Ladies and Gentlemen, who have been pleased to favour them with their Censure.

NATHANIEL TWINNING, GABRIEL VANHORNE,

N. B. Baggage will be received and delivered by Messrs. Robinson and Bergen.

PHILIP THOMPSON, Taylor,

Formerly of New-York, in Market Street, at the Sign of the Blue Ball, at his Shop, at the old Post-Office,

MAKES in the latest and neatest Fashion, regimental and plain Clothes of every Sort; also makes Ladies Riding Habits in that neat, genteel Fashion, which is so much admired by the most celebrated Huntresses in Europe. Likewise makes long Cloaks for Ladies, furnishes all Manner of Trimmings, and has a Variety of the neatest Patterns of Cloth in the City, where Gentlemen may suit themselves without Trouble.
