THE fully the of the following Poem is taken from the Screws of Wester, a German performance, aniverfally read and admired. The Author has endeavoured to express in verte, forem of the incidents and fentiments with which he was chrefly flruck in the perudal of that a fife ling flory. The following epithle is supposed to have been written by Wester, at that period when he was under the most violent agistations ot disappointed love and frantic despair. How for the Author has been successful, in representing the emtions of foul, natural in such a fact of mind, he has no right to determine: he commits he cause to the impartial decision of the public. Hemight plead that his youth gives him some claim to indulgence; but the were to reful upon this apology alone, he is senfished that intrinsse merit ensy can procure lashing approbation to the composition, either of young or old. If the Poem, now offered to the Public, he deferring of approbation, he is considered that it will be hond, with it, and he will shaukfully teccive it; if not, he shomies to the impartial award, though his versethould beat short lived as the unhappy love which thy
