New Organizational Structure Approved

An administrative organization was approved by the Board of Regents at the May 12-13 meeting. The organization, as recommended by Southern Technical Institute president Stephen R. Cheshier, was approved to become effective on July 14, 1981. It is designed to support Southern Technical Institute's special educational mission of engineering technology.

"According to President Cheshier, a rigorous process was undertaken on campus to analyze administrative needs and to develop an organizational structure that will serve Southern Technical Institute well as a senior-level University System Institution," the Regents were told through an agenda item.

President Cheshier met with all of the institution's administrative and faculty units to discuss organizational proposals; following submission of the organizational structure to the Board of Regents office, he met several times with staff members to discuss the paper. In the meantime, the Regents were also told.

Research and access; and director of public relations.

Southern Technical Institute became a senior college of the University System on July 1, 1980. Previously, the institution had been a division of the Georgia Institute of Technology since its opening as a two-year division in 1948. Southern Tech became a four-year division of Georgia Tech in 1970.

Under the administrative organization:

--- Five new positions will be required: vice president and dean of the faculty; director of industrial relations, institutional research and access; and director of public relations.

--- Southern Technical Institute officially became a senior college, the 33rd institution of the University System of Georgia, on July 1, 1980. The occasion resulted in the dissolution of Southern Tech's status as a two-year division of the Georgia Institute of Technology.

All? The Case of Leo M. Frank

By Allen D. Bearden

Prejudice against minorities and foreigners is nothing new in America. We have at different points in our history hated the Jews, Blacks, alleged witches, Communists, and other types of people that we do not understand.

The anti-semitic feelings in the southern United States boiled over in 1913. A young factory working girl, born and raised in the south, was stalked and beaten to death.

July 17, 1913
Justice For All?

had agreed to testify, but later refused. She was never called at the trial.

Mrs. Maggie Miller testified under oath that the Solicitor General's office had offered her $1000 to testify that she had sexual relations with Frank on several occasions inside his office. She refused to lie.

The statements of a black semiliterate janitor at the factory contradicted those of affidavits and repudiated two of these. At the trial, the defense produced several witnesses who testified of Conley's ill repute. But the judge told him to sit.

In his final affidavit, he said that Frank had approached him on the second floor of the hotel the day of the murder and confessed the crime to him. He said that his boss asked him to write the murder notes naming Newt Lee as the killer. Conley said he wrote the notes and carried them to the basement for Frank. He said Frank paid him $200 to keep his mouth shut.

Conley was obviously well coached by the Solicitor General, Hugh Dorsey. He spent countless hours in conference with him before the trial. Dorsey gave him a haircut, a shave, and a new suit of clothes. This made him look more respectable than he really was. Conley was imprisoned in the state jail by Dorsey and his visitors were cautiously screened. No one from the defense was allowed to confer with the prisoner.

Conley made a statement to the press that Frank was actually greater than the evidence against Frank, according to C. Vann Woodward, an uninvolved historian. The Grand Jury wanted to indict the black man rather than Frank, but Conley appealed that decision. He told one of the members of the Grand Jury that he would be back in two minutes. Dorsey was able to convince them to indict Frank instead.

Why did Hugh Dorsey, the press, and people of Atlanta hate Leo Frank? There are several possible explanations. But, the south was poor— the people were tenant farmers on exhausted land or itinerant in sweatshops. Mary Phagan was a symbol of their cause, a young and innocent virgin. But Frank was a rich, northern lawyer who wanted to suppress the white man's psyche.

Mary Phagan

The trial began on July 28, 1913. Frank had seven lawyers, led by Luther Rosser, Dorsey's brother-in-law, and considered the best lawyer in Atlanta. Dorsey led the prosecution's team of three able lawyers. The presiding magistrate was Judge Leonard S. Roan, 64 and in failing health. He was considered by his peers to be a timid man but honest and fair.

The trial was a farce. Since the new oon, or air-conditioners, in the courtroom did not work, the windows had to be raised. The summer of 1913 was a hot one.

On every single day of the 30-day trial, a massive mob gathered outside. These spectators brought their fried chicken and cold beer and made a party out of the justice system. Crowds as large as 5,000 gathered to cheer for Dorsey and jeer the defense. Frank's lawyers were consistently drowned out by the mob.

The trial was over on July 17, 1913. Frank was convicted of murder and sentenced to death. On August 27, 1915, the Supreme Court of Georgia upheld the conviction. On July 7, 1916, Frank was hanged on a tree at the Atlanta City Jail.

The case of Leo Frank, an innocent man who was lynched in the name of justice, is a tragic example of how the justice system can be corrupted by prejudice and racism.
Frank....

boos. Judge Roan made only feeble attempts to maintain order. He could not prevent the jury from hearing the mob shout: "Hang the Jew or we'll hang you". No jury in their right mind would vote not guilty under such a direct threat of death. No one doubted that the mob would fulfill this promise.

The actual evidence presented in the trial was also the object of a lot of controversy. The defense tried to prove that Conley was a liar and probably the murderer himself. They brought up the fact that Conley had been caught washing blood off his shirt, but no one ever seriously questioned him about it.

A reenactment of the crime showed that it would have taken Conley at least 34 minutes to drag the body down to the basement, confer with Frank, write the murder notes, and accept money from his boss to keep his mouth shut, but both prosecution and defense testimony gave Conley only 14 minutes at the most.

The defense tried to prove that the defendant had been framed and had not been given a fair trial. They proved that fingerprints had been taken by police but had been "lost". They also proved that police had fabricated evidence about the murder notes. Frank's alleged sexual habits and had savagely beaten his maid to get her to testify against him.

Dorsey used underhanded methods to inflame the mob, such as making the claim that Frank was a "pervert" and a "capitalist". Neither claim was ever proven. The defense produced 50 character witnesses and even five albino witnesses. But Roan himself said, "If Christ and all his angels came to show this man innocent, they would still vote him guilty." They did, on August 29, 1913.

The crowd cheered wildly, drowning out the prosecutor as he polled the jury. For fear of Frank's life, he was not brought to the courtroom when the verdict was rendered.

The trolley cars stopped in their tracks, business shut down and the stores closed while everyone threw the biggest party in the history of the city. It was the biggest celebration since Georgians secured the Union before the Civil War. Telephones were ringing off the hook all day and every phone call was placed on this day than on any other previous day in the history of the state.

The trial had taken the World War off the front page for the 14 days, not only in Atlanta, but all over the nation. When the results came in, outcries poured in from all over the country, from thousands of groups and people. Georgia stood alone in her wrong.

Frank never had a chance, ever with the brass of his seven lawyers. Rosser did his best, but was naïve enough to believe that he could win. But it would probably be safe to say that no lawyer on earth could have defended Frank under these circumstances probably not even Tom Watson.

Judge Roan said, "I do not know what Leo Frank is guilty or innocent," but the good Judge still sentenced him to hang.

(In the next issue of THE STING: Tom Watson and the Mob--The Lynching of Leo Frank.)

Governor Busbee has signed a proclamation naming the week of July 11-18 Astronomy Week in Georgia. Along with several state parks, museums and nature centers, Fernbank Science Center is planning special activities to celebrate the week.

One of the approximately 34,000 insulating tiles that covered about 75% of the "cold plate" surface will be on display at Fernbank Science Center. Without these insulating tiles, the shuttle would have burned up on re-entering the Earth's atmosphere. In addition to protecting the shuttle from temperatures exceeding 2300 F., the tiles make up the aerodynamic shape of the orbiter. No two tiles are exactly alike. One can sometimes get theاث -j ust the correct combination to cut the tiles. Identification numbers on each tile identify the exact location of the tile. In addition, the orbiter can provide the information needed by the people to produce an identical tile.

Since I met you
I've had to THINK
Not only of MYSELF
And of the wounds of past promises
But of YOU!
And of how I never want to hurt you,
But being such that I am
I will
And you won't like it.

As if we never met
