"Students don't vote. Do you expect me to come in here and kiss your ass?"

Georgia Senator Wyche Fowler addressing the student activist group Lead... or Leave.

Trouble for Rezak

By Larry Philipp
Staff Writer

Dean Rezak's management style. Based on several interviews, this disapproval seems to have grown over the last year or more.

On September 21 of this year, a memo initialed by five department heads in Southern Tech's School of Technology presented a faculty vote count that expressed a lack of confidence in the school's administrative officer, Dean Rezak.

During a Sting interview on October 9, Dr. Cheshier outlined his concerns and the action taken to date. A memo dated the same day and addressed to the school's faculty, did much the same thing. Dr. Cheshier stated he is investigating the problems between the dean and the dean's faculty. As of the interview, he had met with department heads as a group and individually. Dr. Cheshier has also met with each discipline's faculty. The president said his "next phase is to interact with Dean Rezak and Dr. Travis," Vice President for Academic Affairs. In his memo, the president also included interaction with the Chancellor and the Regents' legal advisors as a necessary step in reaching a decision. Dr. Cheshier "expect[s] that we are looking at three or four weeks for the process."

The five departments (of six in the school) are Apparel and Textile Engineering Technology (ATET), Civil Engineering Technology (CET), Electrical and Computer Engineering Technology (ECET), Industrial Engineering Technology (IET), and Mechanical Engineering Technology (MET). Construction (CNST) is a department in this school, but is not involved in this action. With essentially no information about the problem until the last minute, CNST chose not to participate.

The actual vote totals were: 44 for the statement of concern, 2 against, and 6 abstentions. Roughly 85% of the 52 polled supported the measure. According to Sam Baker, assistant to President Cheshier, 64 people comprise the full-time faculty for the School of Technology. Faculty with two years or more at Southern Tech were allowed to vote by secret ballot at individual departmental meetings. The overall percentage (total full-time faculty vs. faculty supporting the concern) is 69%. Whatever the specific circumstances behind each vote, the common link is majority disapproval of

Faced with the responsibility of a decision, Dr. Cheshier would prefer "win-win situations." As he stated, he must weigh the concerns of the faculty with "Dean Rezak's knowledge and good representation of Southern Tech." The president voiced disappointment that the situation had reached its current proportions without earlier resolution or indication of such a problem. He cited Total Qual-

Pi Kapps Fined $300

By Jennifer Waller Pool Table Casualty

On October 6, Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity was charged with defacing private property, conduct unbecoming a fraternity member, disregard to rules and standards, and a blatant act of aggression against Sigma Pi Fraternity. According to several eye witnesses (one of whom was Mike Bushaw, Sigma Pi's national), Stan Hughes, a brother of Pi Kappa Phi, sprayed charcoal lighter fluid on the two by four supports of Sigma Pi's letters and then advanced toward the letters as if he were going to light them.

Sigma Pi submitted a proposal for the punishment of Pi Kappa Phi. The suggested penalties were a fine of $500 and/or no Rush until Winter 1994, no Goat Night in Fall 1992, and no Greek Week in Spring 1993. The fine was to be donated to the United Cerebral Palsy Foundation in the name of Sigma Pi Fraternity and the Southern College of Technology Interfraternity Council.

The Pi Kapps claim that Mr. Hughes was not intending to actually set the letters on fire, but only trying to be funny in front of his fraternity brothers. Mr. Hughes wrote a letter of apology to Sigma Pi. Even so, Pi Kappa Phi was found guilty by a vote of 8-3 of the IFC, but the penalties were reduced considerably. The fine was reduced to $300, and the Pi Kapps must supply Sigma Pi with new letters.

Barry Birkhead, IFC Advisor and Director of Student Activities, said that he thinks the Pi Kapps are taking the whole situation quite well. He said that the brothers of Pi Kappa Phi have acted responsibly in the time following the penalties by taking action against Mr. Hughes and Southern Tech is one of only four schools in the state that has a STATEWIDE MISSION. The other schools are: Ga. Tech, UGA, and The Medical College. The STATEWIDE MISSION allows Southern Tech to develop an Outreach program which will assist two year technical institutes.

Southern Tech is governed by the State Board of Regents, while two year technical institutes are governed by the State Board of Technical and Adult Education which offers only two year associate degrees. Southern Tech will help them make a four year degree available.

Dorm Security Tightened

By Tony Perez
S.A.E.K.

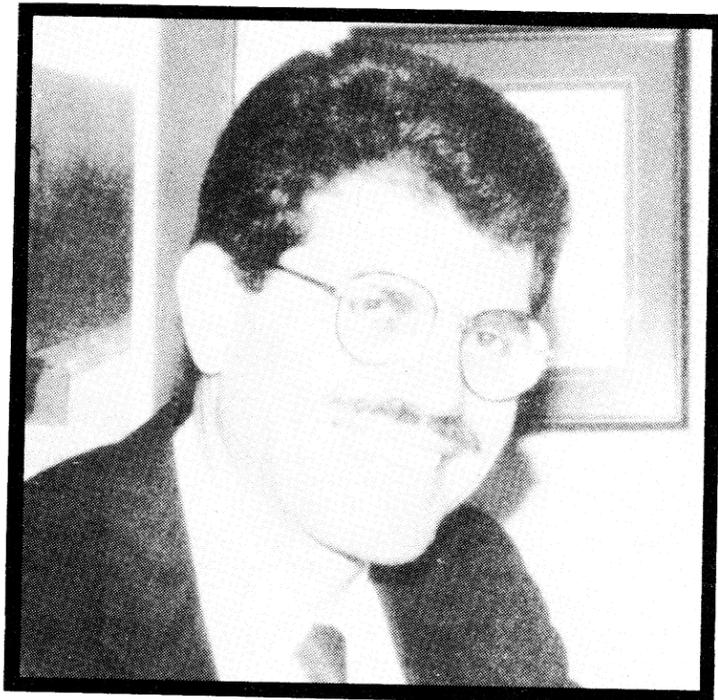

This quarter dorm residents are having a little more difficulty getting into their dorm rooms. Ed Klein, director of housing and residence life, mandated that all of the doors leading to dorm halls be locked 24 hours a day. This led to much negative response from the residents in the dorms and thus calling for an open forum that was held on Wednesday, October 7.

Until last year, the residence halls remained unlocked so that students could easily come in and out to go to their classes and back. Each door to the individual dorm rooms had its own deadbolt lock for the occupants to lock.

Last year, Ed Klein announced that the exterior doors to the buildings be locked after 8 pm. This was suppose to prevent non-dorm residents from entering the buildings. The policy proved, however, to be more of an inconvenience than a security precaution. Non-residents still were able to get in almost as easily. Keeping the exterior doors locked 24 hours a day just made it

“Students don’t vote. Do you expect me to come in here and kiss your ass?”

Georgia Senator Wyche Fowler, to young volunteers campaigning for deficit reductions. Fowler denies making the statement, but the volunteers insist he did.

By Ed Hardy
S.G.A. President

This quote from YOUR senator calls attention to a pressing problem that we college students have to find a solution for: our age bracket has the worse voting record in the country. That’s right, only 36% of 18- to 24-year-olds bother to vote.

Why is this?

It can’t be because we don’t care who our leaders are. I have had about 500 thousand conversations, discussions, heated arguments, etc. in the past months about who ought to be President. And the irritating part is I know that a majority of the people whose silly opinions I had to listen to probably won’t bother to vote, if they even got around to registering.

And it can’t be because we don’t care what happens to the country in the future. If our leaders (who we aren’t bothering to help elect) screw up foreign policy, guess who fights the war: that’s right, 18- to 24-year-olds. Or if they screw up the domestic affairs, guess who is going to graduate soon and go on to a wonderful position standing in the Welfare line. Again, the correct answer is YOU. Oh well, at least there’s lots of opportunity for advancement in the Welfare line.

And the reason we college students don’t vote can’t be because our votes don’t count. Did you realize there are 25 million 18- to 24-year-olds? That’s about 10% of the U.S. population. Most election results are close. If all 25 million of us voted, I’ll bet we could decide who the next president was.

So why don’t college students vote? The only reason I can imagine is the people who are running for president don’t really compare well to the likes of Thomas Jefferson or FDR. So this election is about damage control: which candidate will do the least bad job as president. So your vote is even more important. There might not be a candidate you really want as president, but there surely is one you DON’T want to have the job.

Another reason why voting is so important right now is the politicians who will be elected need to find a solution to the deficit. No solution to this problem is going to be tremendously popular, so it is important that we elect some people with guts, or the solution the politicians will come up with for reducing the budget deficit will be: ignore it and hope it goes away by itself. And we, being the youngest bracket of voters, will have to live with resulting damage to the U.S. economy the longest.

So vote on November 3, even if you aren’t sure who to vote for. At the very least, your vote will help remove the stigma that college students don’t vote.

A Noble Emotion Or A Sears Special

By Dave Punk
Staff Columnist

Well, this is my first new column in about twenty blue moons, but I’m in the mood to write right now, so what the hell. My topic for this issue is that most frightening of emotions, love. Love is probably the worst thing that has ever happened to the human race since it’s introduction back in the early fifties.

Sears Roebuck Inc., in order to keep up with demand from the general public for a new and stimulating product, set fifteen of their top research and development people on the project. The premise was simple; invent a product that was affordable to the masses, and inviting enough for everyone to want one. Later, of course, as demand and need for this product grew, Sears planned to introduce better, and more costly, versions to the market. Sears wanted a product that would eventually overpower even the automobile in sheer selling power.

The project head, Thurman T. Warmonger, first introduced the idea of ‘love’ to the team in early 1951. An emotion that could instill a feeling of intense caring and desire for a member of the opposite sex, and could be installed for a low fee. Love would simply be installed in adults first, and could be installed into babies as an option at birth.

The team worked for minutes on the new product, brainstorming for seconds, even tens of seconds at a time. Working well after most of their bedtimes one night, the team put the finishing touches on the preliminary sketches of the new product.

Love was installed into the first human recipient in late 1951, and the result was a smashing success. Larry Fencepost described wonderful feelings of warmth and light-headedness as the new product kicked in when he saw the beautiful secretary, Ms. Asphalt. The word was soon leaked to the general public, and before a consumer version was even finished demand had grown to overwhelming proportions. By the middle of 1953 every man, woman, and child in the United States had love installed, and the country basked in their newfangled feelings. It wasn’t long before the world was overwhelmed by this miracle product.

It wasn’t until December 1953 that things began to go awry. Larry Fencepost, love’s very first recipient, was going through fits of fear, depression, anger, and other generally nasty moods. Sears sent a crack team of investigators to the scene. The cause was painfully clear. Ms. Asphalt, Fencepost’s first love, was now in love with another man because she didn’t have the emotion installed until 1953, and therefore never knew she didn’t love Fencepost until that time.

Unfortunately, it was too late. An epidemic of these horrible emotions was sweeping the country faster than a cow on acid. Letters and phone calls poured into Sears headquarters asking that the sweet emotion turned foul be removed from their psyche. Sears, however, overlooked the possibility that people might want the emotion removed. They were up a creek without a pork chop.

They'll Spend Your Money, But Not Their Own

By G. Vanheidrick
Staff Writer

Every once in a great while there is a Southern Tech student who decides to get involved on campus. Granted our campus life leaves a bit to be desired, but there are still some of us who decide to do it for a vast array of reasons. My reason is that I flat out like to do it. It gives me pleasure to know that I can contribute something to the lives of others as they contribute to mine. On that premise I attempted once again to gain acceptance onto the Senate Judiciary Committee, a forum for which I applied just a few weeks ago. After a storm of controversy I was still willing to be a participant. I was accepted just last Thursday, and I remain grateful to all of those who supported my effort.

But something strange happened during the Student Government meeting. As a reporter for The Sting I am always, always, always on duty. I figured since no other reporter was present and the peanut gallery was so very small (only Barry Birkhead and myself) I was obligated to bring what I thought was "the story" to my colleagues (that means you). During the "new business" section of the meeting, it was proposed that the SGA send a memo to various administrators questioning the appropriation of dollars used in the Athletic Department. Nothing wrong there. What they wanted to know were questions about the approximate $200,000 in funding the program receives and the fact that it supports a sometimes losing team.

Now granted we here at Southern Tech don't always care about what the basketball and baseball teams are or are not doing. For some of us they could all take a long dive off a short pier. But if you were to ask certain administrators about it, they would tell you that the teams offer community exposure and in peak seasons they offer statewide or regional exposure (God forbid any national exposure). The teams also keep some students in school. I don't need to recount to you the sad but triumphant story of youths with no future using the art of sports to get to college. Oh I'm sorry, maybe you haven't been there.

All of this aside, that didn't bother me so much as this next point. The SGA as a student body has the right to make such questions. However earlier in the meeting someone said something about SCT's policy not to allow students who are not attending classes or paying student fees to participate in EXTRA curricular activities. Most other institutions have this same policy. It came to the attention of administrators recently that we had two SGA members, who were not attending classes, but still actively involved in the EXTRA curricular activity. The administrator allowed them to continue participation, but warned of future policy infractions. The SGA plans to follow up with a proposed policy change. The proposal will include allowing students who are "eligible for enrollment, and attend school at least 3 of the four academic quarters." Exemptions would be made for students with medical disabilities or military orders. That didn't even bother me.

So what did? The members of this esteemed body are planning to propose that not only would the absent student not pay tuition (well they shouldn't because they have no classes), but that he/she would also not pay the $30 student activity fee. That would be as they put it, "paying SCT for work we do for them."

Somehow I have a strange feeling about someone who wants to make decisions about things that involve student activity fees (such as memos to the administration about the Athletic program, and requests for funding by organizations on campus), but doesn't want to at least pay the student activity fee. I feel that for as much as a person brings to this campus, he/she comes away with just as much if not more. Let's just say there is no such thing as a free lunch. If there is, then I want to know. If anyone knows me then they know there is nothing I like more than free food. It always tastes better when it comes off someone else's plate.

I love the SGA, but if they know where there is free food and haven't told me, then I stand here today and question their loyalty to me, the newest member of their Judiciary Committee - a student fee paying participant.

an exception basis. Why? A few years ago there were 250 co-op students here at Southern Tech, and I think the number is probably still the same. This makes up 7.5% of the student population, a higher percentage than the one of students who vote in SGA elections. Co-ops should not be considered an annoying afterthought to be taken care of on an exception basis.

Now not all co-ops are able to even be on campus during their co-op quarter, and not all of them use their right to vote in the SGA or write for The Sting or whatever. But I can think of 5 co-ops off the top of my head that do come to campus during their co-op quarter. And this particular co-op is now the Editor of this newspaper and has been the General Manager of WGHR, a member of S.A.I.L., a member of CAB, and even the Vice President of the SGA. And all of that while co-oping.

I think the SGA should look around and actually try to represent the student population with their proposal instead of trying to patch a whole in Southern Tech policy to protect the immediate interests of their members. If not, then during co-op orientation when it is said, "Co-ops are considered full-time students," someone should tack on, "NOT!"

Then They Stab You!

By Andrew Newton
Editor

I think Golda makes an important point in her editorial (above). People who wish to restructure the finances of the Athletic Association and sit upon a $5,000 give-away fund should not be picky about paying the $30 Student Activities Fee that gives them the power they have. But I've got two points I wish to enter into this fray of policy bashings and meanderings.

First, I'm not in full agreement that they should have to pay the $30 fee. I'm not sure that any student should have to pay the fee because they choose to take a quarter off. By the way, this policy applies to all student organizations, not just the SGA, despite the fact that the Student Handbook only mentions the SGA. This college has enough problems with students not running for Student Government, not accepting leadership positions like The Log Editor, and just plain not showing up for CAB events without this added deterrent. And how can you tell a student that they can't participate in a student activity when faculty, staff, friends, family, and just plain strangers often benefit from free food and show from CAB and Cultural Series events?

Secondly, I think our SGA is not representing all of the students to the best of their ability. They claim they represent our interests and act as a consolidated student voice to the administration. But their proposal to include students who are "eligible for enrollment, and attend school at least 3 of the four academic quarters," ignores co-op students.

Ed Hardy, SGA President, tells me that co-op students should be treated on

More Potholes

Dear SGA

We would like to respond to the pothole problem in your October 6 issue of The Sting. I have watched the so called "attempt" of fixing potholes by the plant operations, and can only describe it as a joke. Why doesn't Southern Tech try a long term solution to the problem, like repaving the entire campus. Sure, this will cost money, but if UGA can get millions (from the state) to renovate their golf course, Southern Tech can get money to fix our potholes.

Another problem at Southern Tech is the collection of rotten wood signs that is suppose to mark the campus. How about replacing them with something a little more modern... like metal. Furthermore, Southern Tech should place signs in front of each majors building like the sign in front of the registration building. Finally, a couple campus maps would help Freshmen and visitors find their way around Southern Tech. These simple improvements would make Southern Tech look like an institute of higher learning, instead of a second rate community college.

[ Don't we have better things to do than to argue over potholes? I never really noticed any potholes until this came up, and I don't really think it is a problem.

By the way, Southern Tech is "an institute of higher learning." And to keep from becoming a "second rate community college," we should give funding for better lab equipment, recruiting, and scholarships instead of modernizing signs for the lost sheep.

The IBM Grant

To the Editor:

I am writing to commend you and your staff for the excellent news coverage in The Sting. Oftentimes I learn about developments taking place on the campus solely by reading The Sting. This issue was no exception.

For instance, it came as news to me to learn that Southern Tech had received a million dollar grant from IBM to go to the Center for Quality Excellence (and Clark Atlanta University). Since the Usability Lab, which is described in the article, was my idea brought to the Center and my description for implementation incorporated into the proposal, it was certainly helpful to learn that the grant had, indeed, been awarded to Southern Tech and that the Usability Lab is to be established by 1995.

It was also news to me that the award notification was received on September 23. So, thank you Sting staff for your excellent reporting. Without The Sting many of us would be in the dark on a number of important issues affecting the future of this campus.

ity Management principles that look for "incremental improvements for incremental problems" as the basis for his concern. No one interviewed for this article felt this situation had come on overnight, though some surprise was evidenced that the situation existed in the first place. One possible explanation--offered anonymously--for the seemingly sudden onset of this situation is poor communication. Individuals may have felt they were the only ones experiencing problems with the dean, until common problems came to light.

More than a dozen people were interviewed either in person or by phone for this article. Some spoke candidly, but off the record. Others did not feel a story of this nature would benefit Southern Tech, and therefore had no comment nor wished anyone to report that they had no comment. Considering collective curiosity subordinate to the privacy of any pending personnel action, this writer chooses to wait for an actual decision rather than speculate. It does seem clear that communication, at many levels, was not a positive factor in this situation. More than one person agreed.

accepting the fine without animosity.

Some view the punishment as a hindrance to fraternity relations. Michael Weldon, a Pi Kapp brother, said, "I thought that the fraternities (on campus) were becoming really close and now they're broken apart."

Another view comes from Scott Wages, Vice President of Pi Kappa Phi. He and the Pi Kapps stood firmly behind the fact that Mr. Hughes acted alone and that the other members of the fraternity were trying to convince him to stop his prank. They were wondering if a whole fraternity could be held responsible for the actions of one.

Since the letters were never actually damaged and are still usable, Mr. Wages views the whole situation as "... more of a 'How dare you hurt my pride' kind of thing."

The president of Sigma Pi, Stan Burton, said, "I believe that this will set a precedence that frats need to leave other people's stuff alone."

Mr. Burton pointed out that a brother is always representing his fraternity, especially when he is wearing his letters, as Mr. Hughes was at the time of the incident. Mr. Burton also added that the lighter fluid used belonged to the Pi Kapps.

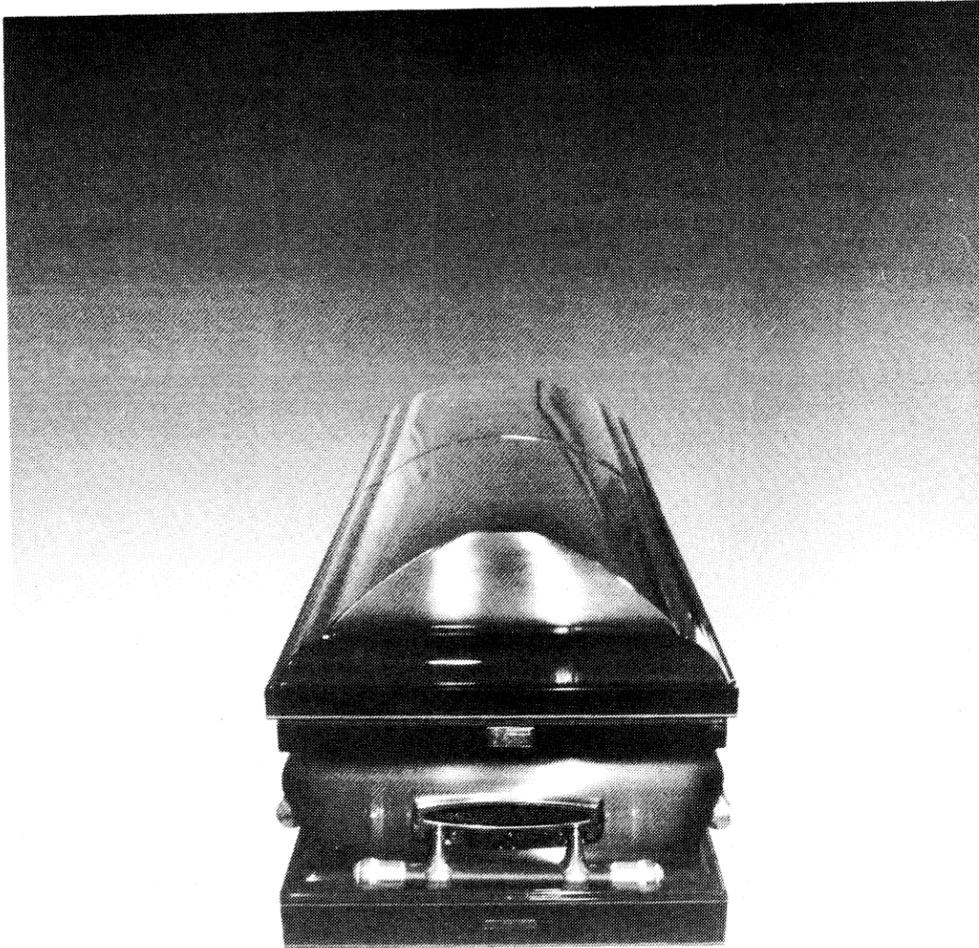

Mr. Burton says that Mr. Birckhead urged him to take action against the Pi Kapps, but Mr. Birckhead supported a much smaller penalty than the one originally sought by Sigma Pi.

As to Pi Kappa Phi's defense that the act of one member should not penalize the whole fraternity, Mr. Burton responded that when he joined a fraternity that it was for life (not just the good times) and he felt as if the Pi Kapps were really doing a bad thing by laying all the blame on Mr. Hughes.

Sigma Pi has received many complaints about their requests, as many believe they are too harsh. One Pi Kapp said, "When you're on top, everyone wants to get at you".

lished the initial story in their September 24, 1992 issue. Education reporter Mark Lackley's article said "...assistant Sam Baker, said he had received...an unsigned memo indicating that the faculty had voted 44-2 to express dissatisfaction with Mr. Rezak's management style." When contacted by phone, Mr. Baker stated that was not correct--he had not said the memo was unsigned. Mr. Lackley, also contacted by phone, felt he had represented Mr. Baker's statement fairly. When asked if he, Mr. Lackley, had an idea of the size of the School of Technology and the percentage of faculty represented by the vote, he stated he "didn't know" and didn't believe such a question was significant anyway. Mr. Lackley's article indicated contact with two people in following up his anonymous lead: primarily Mr. Baker of the president's office, and Professor Katherine Hall of the Mathematics department in the School of Arts and Sciences.

Twentysomething Generation Seeks New Directions

By Shawn Emery
Special Correspondent

(CPS) — Each generation fervently strives to establish the separation between young and old. In the 1950s, it was the Beats; the 1960s produced hippies. Now "Generation X" is groping for recognition. The twentysomething generation is comprised of 48 million Americans ages 20 to 30. Shaped by their parents, who came of age in '60s radicalism, this generation is an enigma, full of conflicting desires and needs.

Twentysomethings shun materialism, yet they seek the comfort that it brings; they are suspicious of the status quo, but unsure how to change it. They are media savvy, sophisticated, open to change and scornful of the excesses of '80s. Torn between the opposing forces of making money and doing philanthropic work, Generation X recoils to a simpler life and closer relationship to the land.

Many in their 20s postpone growing up, leaving home and starting careers. Traveling to exotic locales or joining the Peace Corps seem more worthwhile. When a career move is made, job satisfaction is at least as important as a paycheck, perhaps more so.

"Students feel things are different now. They feel pressure to make a living," says sociologist Wini Breinest, who teaches a class on the 1960s at Northeastern University in Massachusetts. "There's still that wishfulness and nostalgia about the '60s, when people had more time to act on social problems."

Yet, twentysomethings share many of the same frustrations as youth in the '60s. In that decade, the Vietnam War created a counterculture that proclaimed contempt for mainstream society.

Activism, new birth-control methods and later marriages resulted in declining birthrates.

As a result, twentysomethings have been overshadowed by the 72 million baby boomers born between 1946 and 1964, a group whose sheer numbers have defined social institutions as they squeezed through them.

The twentysomethings also are savvy enough to know that boomers wield the power, particularly in the business world, and will continue to do so for some time. That means the average college graduate today has much less mobility in moving up the career ladder, a fact that many twentysomethings find depressing because they're not sure what opportunities — if any — are out there for them.

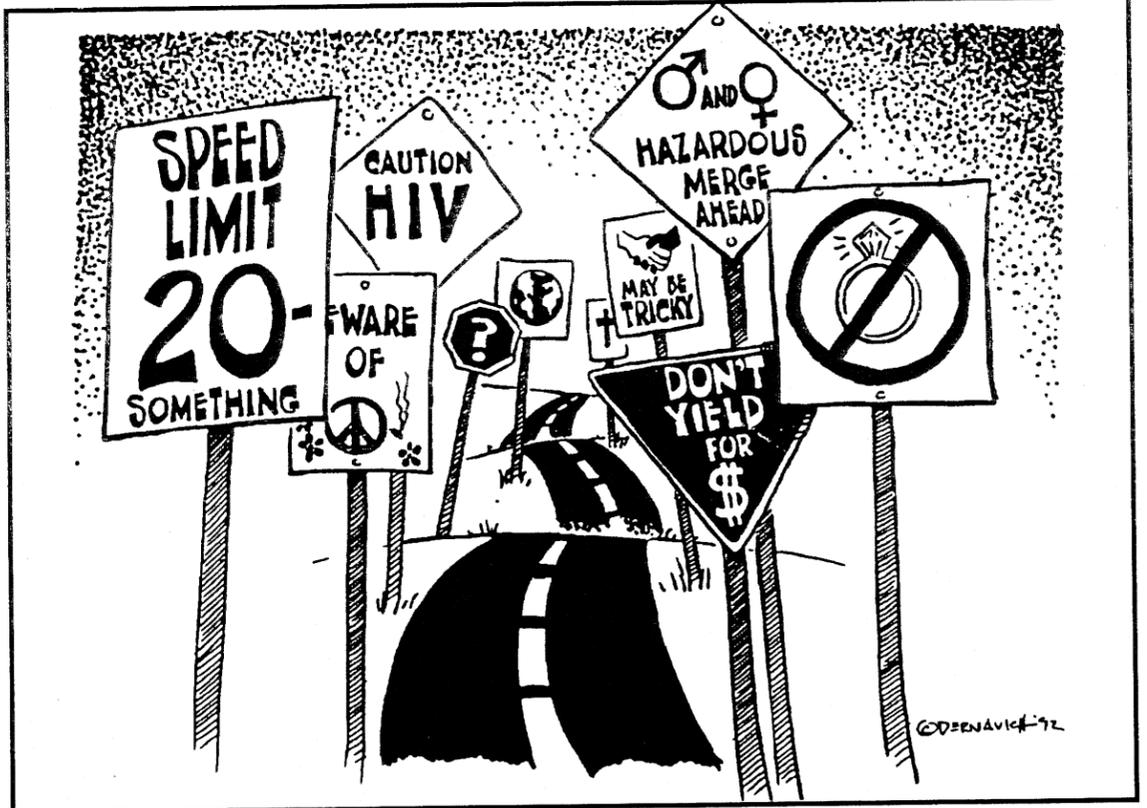

In 1991, author Douglas Coupland published "Generation X." It was the first novel to capture the irreverent angst of the twentysomething generation faced with "McJobs," defined as "low paying, low status, low future."

Now TV, newspapers and magazines voice the discontent of the new generation. Movies like "Singles" and TV shows such as "Melrose Place," "Going To Extremes" "The Round Table," "The Heights" are examining twentysomething attitudes about marriage, careers, education and politics.

Two Harvard graduates recently launched Blast, a slick magazine targeted at the twentysomething crowd. Lukas Barr, 23, and Sean Gullette, 24, were literature and philosophy majors who grew bored with their studies and started publishing a student pop culture magazine.

In the words of their own publication, "Blast is the magazine of today's strange breed of youth: typically overeducated and underestimated, smart, postmodern in consciousness, laid-back and edgy. Ours is a new sensibility, a fin-de-siecle cool-culture renaissance from the ashes of the American Dream — and maybe a new Dream for the 21st Century."

"The baby-boom generation came of age in a really exciting time. They had power. There were so many young people they could have a mass movement," Barr said. "In the '80s we had the epitome of a Max Headroom presidency, Ronald Reagan. It's sort of hard to take at face value. I think that explains why a media-savvy approach toward our generation tends to work."

The general discontent with business-as-usual sends shivers up the spines of twentysomethings when a career is mentioned. Their biggest dread: dead-end office jobs with cubicle seating arrangements.

"We're not willing to go out and get a straight put-on-the-tie-in-the-morning job. People are thinking a lot more about what they're getting out of their jobs and are not so willing to fall into a pattern," Barr said.

For example, 24-year-old Denise Hall describes her position in a large Boston financial company as "meaningless."

"I want to do something to help people, not just make a corporation money," she said, echoing a twentysomething desire to weaken reliance on the old ways and become successful entrepreneurs.

"They feel like that because they want to do something, to make a difference. Money isn't that important. That's not what I'm after in life," said Hall, a graduate of Siena College in New York.

Many realize that college degrees aren't tickets into high-paying jobs and only a master's or post-graduate work ensures stability. Consequently, the twentysomething generation is one of the best educated generations in history, with 59 percent of 1988 high school graduates in college.

"My college degree did pretty much nothing for me," said Hall, another common sentiment among graduates who are vainly beating the pavement for jobs.

One result is that the umbilical cord to the family is staying intact longer. "Most of my friend's parents are supporting them to some extent financially," said Paul Robertson, 24, a graduate of William and Mary College in Virginia.

High in Manhattan's maze of glass towers, 25-year-old Lara Jakubowski works 80 to 90 hours per week at Lehman Brothers as an investment banker. She is a bright Ivy Leaguer chosen for a competitive two-year training position. She also is something of a black sheep among the twentysomething crowd.

"I certainly have friends who would not be happy doing the same thing I've done," said Jakubowski, a University of Pennsylvania economics graduate.

On the political front, youth who matured in the '80s are looking for handholds to pull themselves out of apathy. They realize the benefits of involvement, but feel defeated by the enormity of social cancers — drugs, AIDS, national debt, homelessness and threats to the environment.

"People are cynical about politics, for good reason. There was a certain kind of idealism (in the '60s) they don't have now. They feel overwhelmed," Breinest of Northeastern says.

Many twentysomethings want progressive change that will shake up the status quo, but many feel don't have as much time, political power or focus as their '60s counterparts.

"I'm not out to save the world... because there's too much to surmount," Robertson said.

This year's unusual presidential election is prompting increasing numbers of young people to shed their political apathy. Rock

The Vote has registered 225,000 voters. Still, there is an expectation of disappointment.

Jonathan Cohn, an assistant editor of The American Prospect, a political quarterly based in Cambridge, Mass., wrote a July 20, 1992 essay in Newsweek in which he explained his generation's general lack of interest in the political process.

Twentysomethings came of age in the 1980s, under the Republican administrations of Ronald Reagan and George Bush, and did not have the influence of John Kennedy's call for public service and Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal programs, he noted.

"Those of us in our 20s have never seen the federal government do something so inspiring or productive. Indeed, we've never seen it work at all," Cohn wrote.

Family is another area where Generation X differs. Many twentysomethings were latchkey children, tended by the flickering tube while their parents worked.

Now many young people stress their willingness to make sacrifices to raise their children — if and when they have them. They opt for a more conservative approach that harkens back to their grandparents.

"I think that close, stronger relationships with family are important because the world's really tough out there," Hall said.

But twentysomethings also are delaying marriage in favor of casual dating. "What's the rush?" describes how many young adults feel toward marriage, recalling the high divorce rate among their parents.

But sexual freedom can be a difficult choice, considering the specter of AIDS.

"With AIDS you can't play the field anymore," Hall said.

"People date less. They want to shop around and be happy with that. Everyone is sort of confused," Robertson said.

Twentysomethings have one thing in common with their '60s parents — a similar restlessness about the state of the world coupled with a distrust of institutions, including popular media.

"A lot of suspicion toward mainstream culture is a healthy thing. That's sort of the hallmark of Generation X," Barr said.

Student Interest High for Presidential Election

By John Williams
College Press Service

With just a few weeks until the presidential election, student interest in the race between President Bush and his Democratic contender Bill Clinton is keen, political observers said, belying the notion that young people don't care about government.

"There is more interest in this election than we've probably seen in the last three elections," said Ralph Baker, a political science professor at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind.

With the economy in the doldrums and issues such as abortion and the environment in the forefront of the campaign, this year's presidential election has captured the interest of thousands of college and university students, activists say, pointing to the number of young people who are registering to vote.

"Smart politicians are refocusing efforts on campus, especially to bring in a new and empowered electorate," said Mike Dolan, field director for California-based Rock the Vote, a non-profit, non-partisan organization that organized student voter registration drives nationwide. "The thematic reason is that the youth vote has become a target, a real opportunity for change."

The opportunity to register to vote for the Nov. 3 election is over in most states. However, representatives of several organizations that held voter registration drives said they registered hundreds of thousands of students in time for the election, indicating that interest in the election is high.

Rock the Vote has registered 225,000 students as voters, Dolan said. Rock the Vote, based in Beverly Hills, was founded in 1990 by leading record labels and musicians in response to perceived threats to artistic expression. It was broadened to include registering the youth and getting them out to vote.

"Something is percolating on college campuses among the voters," Dolan said. "Young people are ready and eager to take back the system from the politics as usual."

The Center for Policy Alternatives and the National Civil League held a voter registration drive Oct. 1 at 44 colleges, community colleges and universities. Although a final count hasn't been tabulated, some the results included registering 4,300 students at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, 2,000 at the University of New Mexico and 800 at the University of Colorado at Boulder, said Burck Smith, a program assistant for the center. "I think there is a resurgence of youth interest in politics again. The issues are imposing," he said. "All the talk about the national debt weighs on our nation's youth. They look at the job market and there's not much available. College students say the environment and other issues are starting to hit home."

While Texas billionaire Ross Perot is back in the race after dropping out in July has caused some alterations in campaign strategies, national polls suggest his re-emergence will do little to change the outcome.

"Perot is not a charismatic figure who would appeal to the young," said Joe Losco, who teaches American government at Ball State University. "I don't think he's excited them, especially since he quit and jumped back in again."

According to the latest Census Bureau figures available, 26 million men and women in the 18-24 age group are eligible to vote, and about 40 percent of this group is registered. In contrast, there are 40.7 million people ages 25 to 44 years, and 58 percent are registered to vote. The highest percentage of those registered to vote — 76 percent — are those age 65 years old and older.

"Students are less cynical, less than in the last four to eight years," Baker said. "They talk of change, but maybe they're putting too much hope in change. Maybe they are tired of the same people running the country."

The next step is to get registered voters to the polls, Dolan and Smith said. An ad hoc coalition made up of Rock the Vote, the Center for Policy Alternatives, the United States Student Association, the Americans for Democratic Action and the Campus Green Vote is working on a plan to get out the vote.

Tony Zagotta, president of the College Republicans, said his group's registration drive was a success. College Republicans registered 10,000 students at Texas A&M, 500 students at Memphis State University in Tennessee and 3,000 young people in Colorado.

"Both campaigns are reaching out to young people. There is anxiety about the future of our country," he said. "America is in a transitional period. This election will decide what path the U.S. will take into the 21st century."

The College Democrats also have registered thousands of students, although exact figures are not available yet, spokesman Jamie Harmon said. "Students are worried about the future, but hopeful they can change things," he said.

NEWS BRIEFS

Suit Puts Heat On Chili Peppers

FAIRFAX, Va. (CPS) — A former George Mason University student has filed a $4 million lawsuit against the Red Hot Chili Peppers for damages suffered as a result of a 1989 sexual assault.

The student was seeking damages for mental trauma and humiliation from four members of the band, the Red Hot Chili Peppers band partnership, the band's manager and agent, The Broadside reported. Trial on the civil suit was expected to begin Feb. 9, 1993.

According to the student newspaper, the woman was working for the university's Program Board at the time of the incident.

After an April 21, 1989 concert, the woman said she was assisting band members outside their dressing room when lead singer Anthony Kiedis asked whether she would have sex with him and thrust his penis into her face.

Kiedis was convicted of sexual assault and indecent exposure in 1990 in Fairfax County, Va. He was fined and sentenced to one day in jail. Kiedis appealed the case, but the appeals court upheld the conviction.

Activist Award Established

LOS ANGELES (CPS) — A non-profit organization has established an annual award to recognize college students who have worked for social change in their schools and communities.

The Michael Schwerner Activist Award was named after a young civil rights worker and Cornell University graduate who was murdered in Mississippi in 1964 along with co-workers James Chaney and Andrew Goodman. The award is sponsored by the Gleitsman Foundation.

The $1,000 awards will be presented each spring to five college students who have "challenged some form of social injustice, promoted positive solutions for change and inspired others to realize that they too can make a difference."

Nomination forms must be returned by Jan. 31, 1993 and are available from the Gleitsman Foundation, 6100 Wilshire Boulevard, Suite 400, Los Angeles, Calif. 90048-5111.

Asians More Devoted To Education

WASHINGTON (CPS) — Asian Americans have a devotion to higher education that surpasses that of any other group, a Census Bureau study said.

Officials say the reverence for learning springs from the Asian family, where parents stress the importance of an education.

Two out of five Americans with roots in Asia and the Pacific had completed four years or more of college, the study said. That's about twice the rate for the entire country.

Recent Asian immigrants were most likely highly educated in their own countries and have the motivation and means to send their own children to college, education officials say.

Despite their appreciation for higher education, Asian Americans with four years or more of college earned nearly $1,700 a year less than whites with the same education, based on median income, the study said.

'Murder 101': A Killing Good Time

(CPS) — And you thought your homework was murder. "Murder 101" is a new video release about a college professor who challenges his students to plot the unsolvable murder, only to find himself being framed for a real killing.

Unlike most other mysteries, this one keeps you guessing until the very end. Add to that some realistic acting by Pierce Brosnan as the confounded Ivy League professor Charles Lattimore, and you've got a flick to die for.

Students Stage Really Mellow Rally, Then Order Pizza

By John Williams

(CPS) — In an age of "Just Say No," some college students want to "Just Say Yes" to loosening up laws against marijuana and its possession.

Indeed, evidence of supporters' enthusiasm was present as thousands of students attended Marijuana Week rallies Sept. 21-26 at or near colleges such as Penn State, the University of Florida, University of Wisconsin and Iowa State University.

According to The Independent Florida Alligator, the third annual Gainesville Harvest Festival nearly dissolved in chaos when someone tossed more than 100 marijuana cigarettes into a crowd, sending hundreds of people scrambling for them on their hands and knees.

A group of police officers stood by and watched, fearing that a riot might break out if they interfered. About 3,000 attended the rally sponsored by Cannabis Action Network as part of a national movement to educate and motivate voters to legalize marijuana.

Meanwhile, the Penn State University student government officially threw its support to Marijuana Week Sept. 21-26. Right in the middle of the week, President Bush made a campaign visit to University Park, Pa., looking for votes.

Penn State's Marijuana Week is a first-ever event, said Robert Kampia, the president of Penn State's Undergraduate Student Government.

It was co-sponsored by the Penn State chapter of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML) and Student 1st Step, a campus organization involved in voter registration.

A spokeswoman for the university said the administration would not interfere with the programs.

Kampia said he wants Penn State policy liberalized for students caught with marijuana. "The government shouldn't have that much control over our minds and bodies," he said. "Right now, you can't buy marijuana at your local grocery store. People need it for glaucoma, AIDS and cancer, and they can't buy it."

He wants the school's policy on marijuana to be consistent with its alcohol policy. Currently, minors caught drinking on campus face a maximum one-semester probation, while students violating marijuana policy get a minimum one-semester probation.

A "reeferendum" was held in in 1991, and undergraduate students voted in support of making the policies equal in punitive actions.

"Marijuana is treated more harshly at Penn State, and alcohol is not treated as seriously," said Doug McVay, a volunteer with the student government.

Meanwhile, hundreds of miles to the west, a time-honored tradition was held at the University of Wisconsin-Madison: the Midwest Harvest Fest, a 21-year-old event that began to educate people about marijuana and laws that prohibit marijuana. Vendors sell legal products made out of hemp such as cloth.

Wisconsin's Midwest Harvest Fest has been held off and on since 1971, depending on the mood of the university administration, said Bob Kundert, who has worked with the university's student association on planning the event.

Kundert, who is 69 years old and calls himself "rather unique in the freedom movement," said about 12,000 attended the harvest festival. The festival was held in an area near the University of Wisconsin library. Afterward, participants marched to the state Capitol.

"Madison is great right now. Sometimes it wasn't great. It depends on the mood," Kundert said.

Although no one is supposed to smoke pot at the festival, 10 people were arrested for doing so last year.

An information booth was set up on Iowa State University's campus to give students more information about the benefits of legalized hemp. The booth was sponsored by the Ames, Iowa, NORML chapter and the national Help Eliminate Marijuana Prohibition (HEMP).

Jack Herer, California author of "The Emperor Wears No Clothes," wore a pair of pants made out of hemp to demonstrate the practical uses of marijuana, The Iowa State Daily reported.

Hemp is four times stronger, more absorbent and 26 times more durable than cotton, he said. It also can be used to produce fuel, ship sails, canvas, paints, medicine, food and building materials.

Disputing the opinions of many health experts, Herer said that marijuana is good for people if they use it moderately and avoid harmful drugs like alcohol and nicotine.

"The only thing that you get from it, and I know, is the munchies," Herer said.

Senate Bill Seeks Curbs On Campus Speech Codes

By Charles Dervarics
Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (CPS) — The Senate has opened a potentially lengthy and contentious debate on a bill that would ban universities from receiving federal dollars if they impose codes restricting offensive speech on campus.

At issue is a bill introduced by Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, who says speech codes violate the First Amendment, despite good intentions.

"Schools today have a world of options available to them in fighting incidents of harassment," Craig said. But one option he says they must not try is "stripping students of their right to speak out."

Craig's plan drew sharp criticism in a September hearing before the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee. Kenya Welch, head of the minority council at Clemson University, said the bill would foster ignorance on college campuses and do little to ensure equity in education.

"Where a person is verbally or physically tormented, badgered, heckled or persecuted or is under constant fear of this occurring because of his or her race, sex, religion or sexual orientation, a quality education is an intangible goal," Welch said.

The Clemson senior also told the panel about several incidents of racially offensive speech directed at her on the university's campus. "I was shocked, hurt, angry, ashamed, confused ... but I decided to stick it out," she said.

Craig, however, countered that his bill is designed not to defend harassment, but to protect the right to free speech.

Speech restrictions "destroy the best weapon any of us has to fight against harassment," he said.

Discussion of this bill comes at a key moment in the debate on campus speech codes. Just recently, the University of Wisconsin repealed its code barring hate speech in light of a U.S. Supreme Court rule overturning a St. Paul, Minn., hate crime law. Federal courts have struck down a University of Michigan speech code as well.

In the aftermath of these decisions, some witnesses sought a more neutral ground by encouraging lawmakers to support campus efforts toward greater understanding among students.

"Colleges and universities are responding to racial and sexual harassment on campuses in many more effective ways than the adoption of speech codes," said Hoke Smith, President of Towson State University in Maryland.

At Towson, the school offers courses on sexual, racial and ethnic issues and supports them with a disciplinary system with formal hearings as well as counseling sessions. "Informal procedures are normally very effective," he said.

Smith said he personally found speech codes counterproductive, but he opposed the Craig bill as well. If approved, the legislation will "inhibit rather than further the educational process by which conflicts will be fruitfully addressed."

In effect, Smith said the debate over speech codes already has raised the level of debate on the issue and created an opportunity to find better solutions to problems. This on-going educational process needs no new restrictions from the federal government, he said.

College and university leaders also added that the Craig bill would do little to address the debate about "politically correct" speech and conduct on campus. But the bill could introduce a new level of government regulation in higher education.

"Any problems in speech and relationships arising from intolerance are best dealt with on campus as an educational, not regulatory, issue," said Melvin George, representing the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities.

Speaking for NAICU, George said he opposed the measure, calling new government regulation "an unprecedented and unwarranted action."

While policymakers debate the worth of speech codes and the Craig bill, Clemson's Welch noted that the campus climate for many students — particularly minorities — remains difficult.

After encountering incidents of harassment, Welch said she began to think that respect "was an unattainable goal." Such a climate does not promote access to a quality education, she added.

Craig says the bill, called the Freedom of Speech on Campus Act, is a starting point for discussion in Congress. In the House, Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., has introduced a similar bill on speech policies.

A Review of Satyricon

By Marc Pruitt
Kim's Favorite Marc!

For those who don't know, Meat Beat Manifesto is a British duo comprised of Jack Dangers (vocals, bass, and programming) and Jonny Stephens (guitar, programming). Their first full length album, Storm the Studio, demonstrated the bands proficiency at producing catchy and hypnotic dance beats with prolific use of samples from movies and other songs. While Meat Beat's media is mostly electronic, their songs somehow sound completely natural and fluid, unlike many of the more industrial bands. M.B.M. soon were picked up by Mute Records for a distribution deal and released 99%, which featured more vocals than the previous release.

The latest release Satyricon, clearly shows that success has not spoiled them in the least. The trademark dub/hip-hop samples have been further incorporated with hypnotic rhythms creating a kind of musical surrealism. Aside from the socially conscience lyrics, the songs seem to convey different feelings ranging from anger to sadness. And yes, as the title suggests, there is plenty of satire.

Two things seems to always be true of Meat Beat Manifesto albums—they are all very long (Satyricon has 16 tracks), and every song is very good and well thought out.

The songs seem to simply flow into each other providing an hour long listening experience. The groove is the thing here, inspiring Jack Danger to stretch and to stretch the limits of dub expressionism.

As I said before, all the songs are good, but among the most noteworthy are "Circles", a slow melodic tune, "Original Control parts 1-2", upbeat tunes which have been released as singles, and "Brain-washed This Way", an unusual collection of beats and samples.

If you are in to dance music with a hard beat, Satyricon is a Must!

The New El Azteca is Unusually Average

By Marc Pruitt
Staff Writer

Although it may have been futile, being that eating at the Ranch (El Ranchero) is a rite of passage at SCT, I decided to review El Azteca, a chain of Mexican restaurants which has just opened a new restaurant near school.

El Azteca is located on highway 41, just north of the big chicken in the building that used to be G. Golly Molly's.

First off, I have to say that the service at El Azteca is very good. Me and my dining companion were promptly seated and provided with chips and our drinks. Our food arrived about 5 minutes after our order was taken and our drinks were refilled promptly.

I ordered from the list of combination dinners, which range in price from $5.75 to $6.50 and generally include about three to four items.

The choices include all of the standards: tacos, burritos, tostadas, beans and rice ect.... Specialty items such as Chimmychangas(sp?) are in the $7.00-$8.00 range.

The food was good (about the same as the at the Ranch or Los Reyes) and there was lot's of it! My dining partner however thought that the food was a bit bland.

The decor is typical of most restaurant/bar type establishments. We had to wonder if there are any more Edsels on the road (they seem to all have been cut in half and hung in restaurants).

They also have a stage, which would suggest that they have some sort of entertainment. Being a good reporter, I was sure not to ask what kind of entertainment it was.

In comparison to the other local Mexican eateries, El Azteca is not quite as good as The Ranch (mainly due to the fact that the prices are higher), but I liked it better than Los Reyes. The service was much better than Los Reyes (not that that is an amazing achievement) and the portions were larger.

Candyman Makes the World Taste Bad

By Golda Vanheidrich
Staff writer

Recently, I was assigned the dubious task of movie. It was my first attempt at such and I was duely excited. That was until I saw the movie.

CANDYMAN is a Tri-Star picture, and indeed not typical of their productions. Every movie can't be a blockbuster. This one doesn't have star potential. Thinking of stars, there were none in the film. The cast of no names did a noble job however, with what they had in the plot.

Story line offered a blurry mix of Reconstruction period folklore and present day mythology. If someone dared say the name of the title character five times into a mirror, the hook handed ghoul would show up and gut you from the groin to the head.

The ghoul was the son of a slave, killed in 1890 for dating and fathering a baby with a white woman. Today he still holds to his warped sense of family and comes back in search of his present day Helen. Helen, played by Virginia Madsen, is reincarnated and now attends University of Chicago as a graduate student. She is "coincidentally" doing a story on the myth.

So what does this ghoul want? He wants his family, lost in 1890. He collects a baby and Helen, and intends to live out his destiny. One problem, Helen doesn't want to go. He spends most of the movie destroying her life, and turning everyone against her. In the end the man always gets his woman.

The film is full of laughs, if you decide that this is so far fetched, and realize that like all horror films no one ever runs.

There are, too, the stupid people that repeat his name five times into a mirror. My date insisted on saying the name over and over. I soon began to hope that "the man" would come to life and take him off my hands. No such luck. He went on imitating the hook sensation on my arms and back. That didn't feel so bad.

I hate to give away the movie, but in the end Helen gets a hook and comes back to take revenge on her infidel husband. (Something my "kindasorta" date had better be wary of.) The movie gets 2 1/2 stars and my date rings in at somewhere around 2. Maybe I should have dated the CANDYMAN.

bachelor degrees."

The Outreach program incorporates full and part-time faculty members to teach classes at High-Tech Institutes. The classes will be the same classes offered at Southern Tech on the Junior and Senior levels. The same textbooks will be used, and the same curriculum will be followed. The types of classes offered will depend on what majors are offered at participating institutes.

The faculty that will teach the classes will be Southern Tech employees, thus they will be paid by the school. That may sound strange, but the great part is that the students enrolled in this program officially become Southern Tech students. Before enrolling in this program, the students must receive their associates degree.

The advantages of the program are: (1) it increases current enrollment at Southern Tech, (2) the tuition for classes is paid directly to Southern Tech, (3) it satisfies the need of the community, and (4) it allows us to develop closer relationships with other institutions and industry in different locations.

Southern Tech is currently working with Augusta Tech and Athens Tech. There are meetings planned with prospective students from these institutes to map out the programs to be offered. The meetings will be held in October and November. The first classes will be offered in the upcoming Winter quarter. The classes will primarily be offered in the evenings.

If you have any questions, or know someone who might be interested in this program, please call Dr. Tilmans at 528-4993.

inconvenient 24 hours a day.

The new policy states that all of the exterior doors to the building and all of the end stairwell doors must remain locked 24 hours a day. The only exceptions are those doors on the far east end where the Co-op and payroll offices which are locked only at night.

The open forum was held in the Lobby of Norton hall. Klein, along with Gary Chastain, Chief of Security and Bobby Barber campus safety officer, conducted the forum.

The session opened with a video on precautions to prevent oneself from becoming a victim of crime. The video included clips about fire safety and obscene phone calls.

After the video, Klein explained in his own words why he thought the buildings should remain locked 24 hours a day. Then, the floor was opened up for questions and comments. Darin Audry was an active student in the session. He raised the question of why some students have to open three locks to get to their rooms while others have to open only two. He also made suggestions on making the interior stairwell doors easier to open.

One student asked why he decided to start enforcing security now rather than years ago. Klein responded by stating, "I wanted to do this when I first got here. The work order just never got around to being completed."

Another resident stated that the current locks on the doors made it almost impossible to enter when carrying groceries or books. The doors require both hands to open so students will have set their belongings down while holding the door open with their foot and then trying to enter without the door closing on them.

A petition to keep the doors unlocked during the day has been circulation in the dorms. The petition was about three pages long according to Darin.

Students argued that there are more important safety concerns that need to be addressed such as the lack of lighting and patrolling in the parking lots and the fire hazards associated with locked doors.

Chief Chastain use to be on the Campus Safety team at West Georgia College. Chastain announced "People think I'm crazy when I tell them there hasn't been any burglaries on this campus." Klein emphasizes, "Considering the area in which we are located, we have been damn lucky!"

At the closing of the forum, Klein stated that he will not back down from his security measures; however, if anyone has any suggestions on a better way of keeping the same safety precautions, he will consider them.

Make an Easy 'A'

Take English 304, 305, or 306 and get an easy 'A.' How? By writing articles, taking pictures, and laying-out the stuff that gets published in The Sting. If you have passed English 111 and have had all your shots, then you qualify.

"We write for The Sting and it hasn't adversely affected us at all."

That, however, was not the worst news. Scientists at a leading U.S. cafeteria announced that they had found that in certain of the very worst cases, love had manifested itself into the DNA of the victim, ensuring that it would be passed on from generation to generation. Sears recalled the product, but to no avail, and the once mighty retailer quivered in the wake of a success turned dismal failure.

Sears did not crumble, though. Even those suffering from the worst symptoms recovered over a brief period of time and were able to utilize the emotion to it's original potential. The depressive symptoms seemed to go in phases after one specimen's love was challenged or declined by another specimen. Through a series of ads and redirection of consumer interest, Sears was able to turn the country's attention away from the evil emotion. In fact, today very few people can even remember that Sears brought the world to it's knees through it's own consumer greediness.

Now love is one of the most inherently evil things to ever bring it's ugly face before the human race. Even the most horrible scum-sucking dog, or the ugliest slug need not suffer from this terrible travesty of emotional feeling. We humans must endure this life sucking anti-feeling, proving once again that we were all meant to suffer (but especially men).

And now to sum up my three points that I stated initially in my thesis, I would like to point out that the nice fellow who stopped by the Sting office Friday night was NOT in violation of ANY of Marietta's umbrella codes. He was, however, violating potato chip code 365.789a.

 Director of Counseling

There are career opportunities just waiting for you out there. All you have to do is to complete 200-odd academic credit hours, which means attending classes, participating in labs, working at computer terminals, reading books and manuals, and passing tests. Ah, yes! Passing tests.

The brass ring is out there for you, but for many of you it will mean a great deal of attention to maintaining your motivation and optimizing your learning and memory skills. Even if you were a successful high school student, you may have to apply yourself to college in new ways.

I have worked with dozens of Southern Tech students who state that they studied hard, but couldn't remember enough to do well on a test. This can be extremely frustrating! Memory is a very complicated phenomenon. Memory of even something as simple as a name has many components. It's not just "zero or one."

Your individual learning style is unique. You may share much in common with others, but may have some unusual aspects to your learning process. We have been successful in helping a number of students to implement new learning strategies which have moved them from academic failure to success. Quite frankly, the approach doesn't work for everyone. But it's worth a great deal to those students for whom it does work.

Motivation is another tricky but important phenomenon. Many students report that they understand the value of a college degree and truly want one. But, when it comes to sacrificing recreation in favor of study, they just don't do it. And academic tasks sometimes seem to them like gigantic obstacles which they are afraid to tackle.

We have been able to help many students by teaching them the components of effective motivation, and how to apply them. Once again, this approach does not work for everyone, but is invaluable for those for whom it clicks!

WHERE'S MY HACKER SON..!?

DILBERT® by Scott Adams

I'VE DECIDED TO BECOME A DOCTOR.

PEOPLE HAVE TO SUCK UP TO DOCTORS, OTHERWISE THEY STICK BIG NEEDLES INTO YOUR BODY FOR PRACTICALLY NO REASON AT ALL.

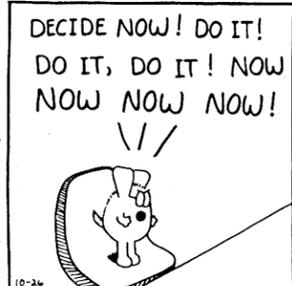

A LOT OF CAREERS DON'T OFFER THAT KIND OPPORTUNITY.

YEAH, IT'S NOT THE SAME WITH A STAPLER.

SO, YOU'RE A TIME MANAGEMENT EXPERT HUH? MIGHT BE USEFUL... I'LL LET YOU KNOW...

DECIDE NOW! DO IT! DO IT, DO IT! NOW NOW NOW!

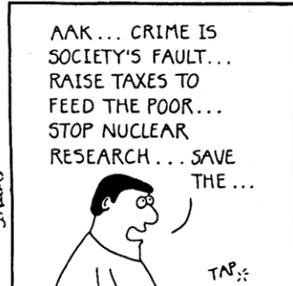

YOU'RE GOOD... WHEN CAN YOU START?

I'LL GET BACK TO YOU.

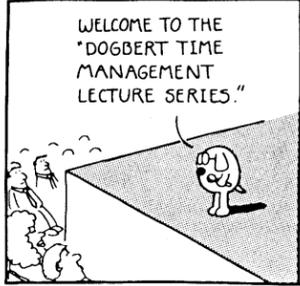

HOLD STILL WHILE DOCTOR DOGBERT WHACKS YOUR KNEE.

AAK... CRIME IS SOCIETY'S FAULT... RAISE TAXES TO FEED THE POOR... STOP NUCLEAR RESEARCH... SAVE THE...
TAP...

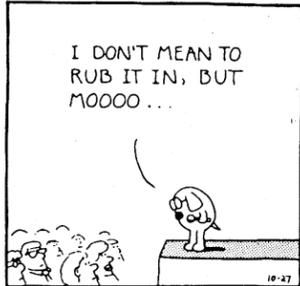

APPARENTLY YOU'RE A KNEE-JERK LIBERAL. YOU CAN LIVE A NORMAL LIFE BUT YOU'LL BE ANNOYING AT PARTIES.

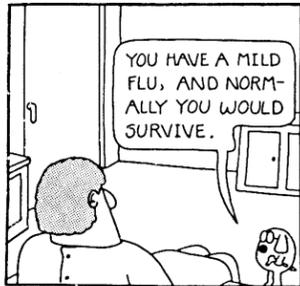

WELCOME TO THE "DOGBERT TIME MANAGEMENT LECTURE SERIES."

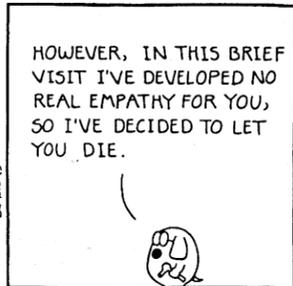

SORRY I'M AN HOUR LATE, BUT I WAS GIVING ANOTHER LECTURE ACROSS TOWN... IN EFFECT, I'LL COMPLETE TWO JOBS WHILE YOU SIT IN THE DARK LIKE STUNNED CATTLE.

I DON'T MEAN TO RUB IT IN, BUT MOOOO...

YOU HAVE A MILD FLU, AND NORMALLY YOU WOULD SURVIVE.

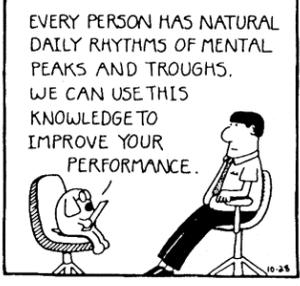

HOWEVER, IN THIS BRIEF VISIT I'VE DEVELOPED NO REAL EMPATHY FOR YOU, SO I'VE DECIDED TO LET YOU DIE.

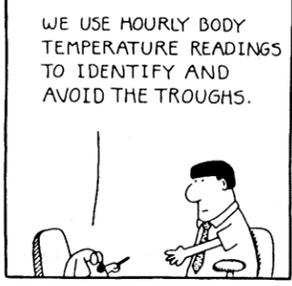

IS THERE ANYTHING I CAN DO?!

WELL... UNLESS YOU CAN AFFORD MY NEW "AMBASSADOR CLASS" SERVICE.

How 'bout those Braves! What a series! There's only one word that can describe the ninth inning of the seventh game of the NLCS: INCREDIBLE! Don't you just feel sorry for Barry Bonds and all of those lousy Pirate fans. Nah! Me neither. I do, however, feel sorry for Toronto. They don't stand a chance. The after game party was also a blast. Just ask Brian Holland, aka "The Streaker". The Braves and Lambda Chi have one thing in common. Both are #1.

Now on another note; Lambda Chi's Fall Rush went great! We now have ten new associate members who are quality guys that will really strengthen our fraternity. They are Paul Grimes, Jeremy Shiflett, Geoff Sease, Jonathan Wang, Steve Allen, Jamie Moore, Marty Purser, Mark Leckie, Jeff Williams, and Adam Wilson. Guys, all of you have made a great decision and I know you will make us proud.

Lambda Chi has planned a lot of fun and fantastic things this quarter. We are having a dinner date party October 22nd that will be loads of fun. This weekend we will be heading up to Mount Yonah where we will camp and repel. We're having a social with the A Dee Pi's November 5th that will be a blast. Ladies, we are really looking forward to it. There will also be several other parties and events later in the quarter. We will also be blowing everyone out in volleyball and flag football this quarter. BSU has already fallen prey to us in football and we blew the TKE's out in volleyball two games to zero. So everyone, I hope you're ready; Lambda Chi, like always, is on top and we're here to stay! Braves over Toronto 4 games to

The Brothers of Sigma Nu would like to welcome our four new brothers to the Legion of Honor. They are David Bath, Scot "no longer the ultimate bull pledge" Ethridge, Jason Purdue, and Jim Smith. Along with our four new brothers, we also would like to welcome our thirteen new pledges. They are Todd Adler, Greg Banks, Dwayne Brooks, Joe Cetrangelo, Raymond Craig,

Our social calendar this month includes two parties, one of which is a follow-up to our Halloween blowout last year. If we have gotten over the party on October 16, the Halloween Bash will be on Oct 31 and will have a live band perform once again. Our community service for this quarter will be a haunted forest to help collect funds for the Marietta Park & Recreation services.

CKI Major

Howdy! I'm back from the big state of Texas with more ideas on how to make CKI a really fun club. Last week, I was in San Antonio at the annual international convention. Yes, that's international as in Circle K'ers from surrounding countries were there as well. Clubs from countries like Puerto Rico, Mexico, Canada, Jamaica, and the Bahamas were represented at this big event. We travelled on the road all night enjoyed the scenery that exists between Atlanta and San Antonio. We stayed at the Hilton Palacio Del Rio where we felt like wealthy big shots even though I am used to Bob's roadside motel.

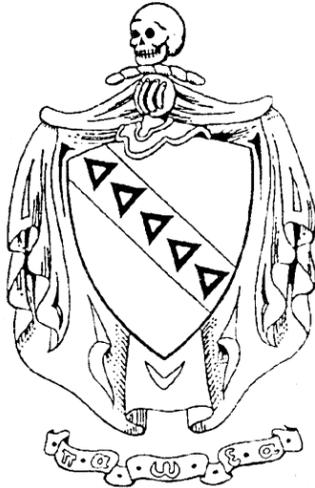

So what went on at international convention? Well, the first night was sight-seeing and the Opening Session where each district yelled out a cheer from their state. The Georgia district, naturally, sported the Braves' tomahawk chop in their cheer. We went and saw the Alamo, and the Tower of the Americas which is a 612 foot tower where you can see over the whole city of San Antonio. There is also a nice river that is lined with restaurants and entertainment that runs behind the hotel.

During the convention we elected a new international board to run Circle K on the international level, and had several dances where we met many new friends (girls). There were also many training sessions telling officers how to office and how to deal with other people. The convention was a blast and all of us are looking forward to International convention '93 in Nashville, Tennessee.

Circle K is planning a trip to Stone Mountain the first weekend in October. Everyone is invited to come and meet the other Circle K'ers in the state. Be on the lookout for fliers and sign-up sheets. There will also be a road trip to LaGrange for an interclub/social.

TKE

"What is TKE?"

On February 24, 1973, Xi Chi chapter of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity was formed at Southern Tech. With nearly 400 members since founding, and a near 20 year history, TKE is alive and well at Southern Tech.

TKE is a well-rounded organization with a variety of social, scholastic, and charity events. Some of these include our annual Halloween, Wild Turkey, Bad Apple Bash, and Spring Wing Ding parties. We take our annual trip to P.C. in May, and our Ski Trip to Gatlinburg in January. We sponsor a 1 mile stretch of the 120 Loop - picking up litter along the roadway.

We have social gatherings with local sororities and each year we celebrate our founding with a formal called RCB. Each winter we make a 72 mile run to North Georgia College to deliver the game ball and collect money to help fight Cystic Fibrosis. And we always participate in the school's Goat Night.

Tau Kappa Epsilon is the opportunity of a lifetime, TKE - the fraternity for life.

The brothers of Tau Kappa Epsilon, Xi Chi Chapter would like to welcome our new brothers - Congratulations.

The brothers of Tau Kappa Epsilon, Xi Chi Chapter would also like to wish the following a Happy Birthday: LCA National, GFB National, Kirk Voelkel, Gary Wise, Rick run to North Georgia College to deliver the game ball and collect money to help fight Cystic Fibrosis. And we always participate in the school's Goat Night.

Tau Kappa Epsilon is the opportunity of a lifetime, TKE - the fraternity for life.

The brothers oton, we know who you are. Return it by Halloween and We'll just laugh it off. Return it not, and all won't be well...action will be taken." Tekes Raise Hell!

Well unless you have been hiding under a rock these past few days, THE BRAVES ARE IN THE WORLD SERIES, again!!! I know that everyone is rooting them on to beat those nasty Blue Jays (boo-hiss). Congratulations to the Bravos and hope to see you win the Series.

Now that I got that out of my system, here's some events that are going on with the B.S.U. As always, we have our FREE TUESDAY LUNCHEONS at NOON. The food is brought to us by many local churches and it will stick to your ribs. On Thursdays we have TNT (THURSDAY NIGHTS TOGETHER) at 7:30 pm. Both of these events are located at the BSU CENTER weekly.

In the near future, the BSU will be going to the FALL CON-VENTION in Rock Eagle, GA. All are invited and the cost is only a low, low price of $35.00. We will leave on Oct. 30th and get back on Nov. 1st. So come on down and sign up.

We are also starting up Bible Study Groups, Discipleship Groups, and Impact Teams all over the place. Just come the the BSU Center and find one on the sign up board and get involved. There is even one especially for Freshmen so there is no excuse. Well that's about it for me. Until next week, same bat time, same bat channel.
